CP Air cross-Canada ceiling lifted

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air has been given the right to compete with Air Canada on an equal footing on Canadian transcontinental air routes under a federal cabinet order announced Friday.

The all-out competition, affecting traffic between Montreal and Vancouver, will centre on routes where both national airlines now compete.

Until now CP Air was restricted to capturing 25 per cent of the capacity of the transcontinental route.

If CP Air wishes to extend the competition to the Atlantic region or other parts of Canada it now does not service, it will have to apply to the Canadian Transport Commission for approval.

CP Air has been asking the government for permission to compete with Air Canada with less restrictions for some time now.

A spokesman for Transport Minister Otto Lang said the matter has come before cabinet a number of times.

The press release said the decision is in accord with Lang's statement on national air policy in the Commons in November, 1977.

He said then:

"In the case of the mainline carriers we will be seeking a removal of the remaining restrictions that exist in terms of competition between them, but with the substitution of certain other restrictions, likely in the hands of the Canadian Transport Commission, to ensure that competition does not do disservice to the travelling public in terms of higher costs and higher fares."

The press release said steps will be taken to ensure that no wasteful competition takes place between Air Canada and CP Air.

Les Benjamin, the New Democratic Party spokesman for transportation, predicted short-term benefits only for the travelling public as a result.

"It will be like a gas war," he said.

He said his party was against the new policy because it felt transportation was a public service, like sewer and other essential services.

"We're finally off the ground," said Ian Gray, CP Air president, in a Vancouver release in response to the announcement.

"Everyone from within the company, from myself down to the fellow on the ramp, is very pleased with the opportunity to offer competitive service now on our transcontinental routes, without any restrictions.

"Now we have to produce the product and make sure that we live up to our reputation of being a good competitor.

Gray said CP Air will "have to add a few more employees to the Vancouver payroll so it's pretty good news for the city as well as the airline."

In Montreal, Air Canada president Claude Taylor said in a statement that the airline and its 21,000 employees "are ready and more than willing" to meet the stepped-up competition.

"We've reached the stage where a transition is in order, and Air Canada is mature and efficient enough to stand on its own without protection," Taylor said.

Airport tax hike delayed?

OTTAWA (UPC) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday he will try to delay proposed increases that would have almost doubled the air transportation tax to $15 for domestic travel next month.

The increases, announced in Chretien's November budget, were due to come into force April 1, for tickets purchased in Canada and on July 1 for tickets bought outside of Canada.

The tax will now be increased after the Excise Tax Act receives royal assent — probably after the federal election.

The budget proposals would have increased the tax from $8 to $15 for domestic travel and from $8 to $12 for international travel. Revenues are used to finance the air transport services provided by the transport ministry.

More arrests and threats in Charlottes

Premier Bennett demanded that charges against the loggers be dropped while federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said in a telegram to B.C. Forests Minister Tom Waterland that arrests would continue until the timber cutting stopped.

There was a glimmer of hope that the dispute could be resolved. Federal and provincial officials are to meet in Vancouver Tuesday to talk over the issue.

In Victoria, Bennett told the Colonist that he and International Woodworkers of America president Jack Munro were on the same side on this issue.

"What Jack is really doing (threatening to pull the entire IWA workforce out unless the conflict is settled) is to reinforce to the federal government that the people of this province are serious.

"We have worked together before on critical issues. When you strip away the politics, we can accomplaish quite a lot and will accomplish quite a lot."

Bennett said his government's objection to the way Ottawa was handling things was that the difference of interpretation of the federal Fisheries Act should be resolved "without the workers of this province being threatened.

Three more fallers were arrested Friday, bringing the total of arrests in the 10-day-old conflict to 12. Eleven of the charges were against loggers for undertaking actions that would harm fish-spawning beds while one was against Peter Pfister, logging supervisor of QC Timber, for allegedly counselling an act that would break the law.

Carefree Kimberley racing for home

It's ready, set and go for "miracle child" Kimberley Vis, 3, right, as she races with brother Marty, 6, in Royal Jubilee Hospital playground with push from parents Patsy and Corrie. Kimberley was released from hospital Friday after recovering from near-drowning accident Feb. 7 in a water-filled ditch near her Port Alberni home. Weeks after her physical revival, Kimberley regained consciousness through heroic efforts of doctors employing new brain-saving techniques.

Anarchists go wild after jobs protest

PARIS (UPI) — Thousands of workers protesting layoffs marched through Paris Friday but the demonstration ended in a rampage by anarchists who looted shops and smashed windows in the worst violence since the 1968 student uprising.

Riot police fired tear gas to disperse a crowd of youths who broke into the back door of the famous Cafe de la Paix on the Place de l'Opera.

The youths set three cars on fire, overturned scores of others, lit fires and threw Molotov cocktails at police who charged swinging clubs.

Police reported 40 persons arrested and about 50 police injured. Three professional photographers were also among those hurt. Authorities said 103 shops were looted.

The outbreak of violence for which the anarchist movement "Autonome Brigades" claimed responsibility in a communique to the press was the worst since the the May 1968 rioting during the student "revolution" that for a time threatened the government of President Charles De Gaulle. It followed a peaceful demonstration by thousands of workers protesting 20,000 layoffs in the French steel industry.

Union officials claimed 150,000 persons demonstrated although the government estimated the number at between 50,000 and 60,000.

Bhutto's bid fails

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistan's Supreme Court said Saturday former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto must be hanged unless pardoned by the nation's head of state.

The court refused to review its 4-3 split decision of Feb. 6 upholding Bhutto's murder conspiracy conviction and death sentence.

EGGS-PERTS TAP DOOMSDAY SHELL

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Experts of the Colombian Agricultural Institute have been called in to examine an egg which carries a message apparently forecasting the end of the world.

A peasant woman in the village of Tebaida, 350 kilometres west of Bogota, found the egg when she made the rounds of her chicken coop earlier this week.

On the shell, in raised letters, were words which read in English translation: "Final judgment. Repent. God."

The woman took the egg to her local priest, who has referred the matter to the Bishop Libardo Ramirez Gomez of Armenia province.

The agricultural experts, meanwhile, have been asked to make their own study of the phenomenon.

Help fingertip away for family problems

The provincial government will establish a Zenith number for children in need of assistance, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Friday.

Children who might need assistance because of emotional or physical abuse, and parents, or other concerned people "can reach out and make sure help is available at any time of the day or night," the minister said.

She did not elaborate in a prepared speech delivered at the annual dinner of the Greater Victoria United Way campaign.

CAIRO (AP) — U.S. President Carter, unable thus far to win broader Arab backing for the Egyptian-Israeli peace settlement, has made a new overture to the Palestine Liberation Organization, repeating his offer to deal with the PLO if it will recognize Israel's right to exist.

The PLO has spurned similar proposals in the past. Carter's offer to "immediately start working directly" with the PLO came in an interview with Egyptian television broadcast here Friday, as Egyptian and Israeli leaders prepared for Monday's signing of the historic treaty between their two countries at a Washington ceremony.

Carter said his offer depends on PLO acceptance of United Nations Security Council Resolution 242.

The resolution, accepted by most Arab states as a basis for a Middle East peace, calls for Israel to return war-won Arab lands in exchange for Arab guarantees of Israel's right to exist within secure and recognized boundaries.

The Egyptian interviewer asked Carter whether the United States soon might start talks with the Palestinians over their grievances.

"Yes, we would like to have direct relations with the Palestinians," Carter said. "We will do this as part of the negotiating process in the future.

Stocks soar, Labor expecting defeat

LONDON (AP) — Stocks soared Friday on the London Stock Exchange as the country headed toward a crucial confidence vote in Parliament that many Britons believe will topple the Labor government and clear the way for the Conservatives to take power for the first time in five years.

Home Secretary Merlyn Rees surprised television viewers by saying in an interview the government has little chance of surviving the vote.

Boosted by the prospect of an end to socialist government in Britain, investors began pouring in buy orders as soon as the exchange opened its doors. The Financial Times industrial index, the main market indicator, jumped 20 points to end the day at 534.6.

"People are saying it does not matter what you buy, it's all going up," said an excited stock dealer.

Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government has been predicting it could win a general election battle and Rees's statement raised eyebrows among his colleagues.

Rees, who managed the campaign that carried Callaghan to the party leadership in 1976, was asked by a BBC interviewer if "you are going to survive." He first replied "No," then added that he had a feeling "at this moment we have a very good chance of being defeated."

Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative party leader, decided Thursday night to put the Laborites to the test with a no-confidence vote in the House of Commons next Wednesday.

She said she is sure she can win with the help of the small parties in the Commons. If the Laborites cannot muster a majority to vote its confidence in the Callaghan government, a general election will be required.

The 53-year-old Mrs. Thatcher, who would be Britain's first woman prime minister, is relying on anti-Labor feeling

If you think it's Travolta, it's not

NAMES in the NEWS

Is a secret still a secret when it's been a public announcement? The centre of the puzzle is television and movie star John Travolta. So where does he go when he wants to be just plain folks? Papeete, Tahiti. The manager of the Maeva Beach Hotel in Papeete announced that Travolta was going to arrive today for a two-week rest, but that he would be travelling "completely incognito." So even though the cat is out of the bag, that fellow who looks like Travolta arriving at the Maeva Beach Hotel on Saturday isn't. Or at least that's what the announcement said.

Author-historian Alfred Lilienthal says creation of a Palestinian state is necessary for peace in the Middle East. "The surest way to make this state a Russian outpost is for the Israelis or the United States to deny the right of the Palestinians to have a state," he said in an interview at San Diego State University.

Charles Colson, a top White House aide under former U.S. president Richard Nixon, has been disbarred from practising law in Washington, D.C., because of his 1974 guilty plea in connection with the Pentagon Papers case. The District of Columbia court of appeals ruled that the city's laws require the disbarment because Colson was convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude.

Costumes worn by Henry Winkler, Bonnie Franklin, Estelle Parsons and other actors and actresses in Cincinnati Playhouse productions over the past 18 years are to be sold April 6-7. On sale will be a pair of pants worn by Winkler in Incident at Vichy." Playhouse officials say Cicely Tyson's costumes from Pygmalion may be available. The sale at the theatre is to raise money for new costume storage.

President Carter has invited Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira of Japan to the United States May 2 "to discuss bilateral and multilateral policies and economic issues of mutual concern."

U.S. First Lady Rosslynn Carter and her daughter Amy will be presented with the winning poster of the National Student Poster contest, "What the library means to me," on Tuesday in the White House Diplomatic Reception Room. The poster was created by Brenda Bitsch, 7, of Pacific, Mo., and chosen from among more than 100,000 entries.

Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia and his uncle, Prince Turki Ben Abdulacid Saud, vacationed separately Friday at Spanish resorts. Local authorities said both arrived Thursday night, accompanied by large retinues, for what were described as private visits.

Philip Bourneuf, who debuted on Broadway with Henry Fonda and starred on stage with Helen Hayes and with Ingrid Bergman in the movie version of Joan of Arc, has died, at 70. Bourneuf also had appeared in such films as Adventures of a Young Man, The Molly Maguires, The Arrangement and Pete and Tillie.

Muhammed Ali arrived in Rome Friday on his way to a sports film festival in northern Italy and said he did not intend to go back in the ring, because he had had enough glory and money. "I think I showed what I'm worth," the world heavyweight champion told reporters at the airport. "As for money, I have all I want. I have the world in my hands. Wherever I go, the people recognize and cheer me." Ali performed for airport photographers and cameramen, kissing his wife, Veronica, sparring with an Italian amateur boxer who happened to be passing through and chatting with passengers from Moslem lands.

CHANCE DISCOVERY ROMAN SHIPWRECK?

LONDON (Reuter) — A batch of Roman clay pots discovered by a British diver searching for scollops has stirred excitement among European archaeologists.

Richard Keen's chance discovery off the Channel Island of Guernsey appears to be the first shipwreck of a Roman sea-going vessel found in northern Europe.

Archaeologists know little about the Atlantic trade routes of the Roman Empire and the site could provide the first concrete evidence of where the Roman sea traders travelled.

Keen, a 29-year-old diver and amateur archaeologist, said: "The distribution of the pottery indicates that it is almost certainly from a shipwreck rather than drifted cargo lost overboard."

Mass refits 'bonanza'

Treasury board approval is expected soon on a refit program for 16 of Canada's 19 aging destroyers, a defence department official told the Colonist Friday.

The work could provide a bonanza for the West Coast shipbuilding industry, Major Barry Frewer said.

Eight of the destroyers are under the command of Rear Admiral Michael Martin, commander Maritime Command Pacific.

The department launched a study several months ago on extending the life of destroyers up to 10 years while awaiting final determination by the federal cabinet on a new frigate program, Frewer said in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

The first of the six new frigates is expected to be delivered in 1985 and the last in 1989.

The new frigates, which will cost about $3.5 billion, will replace St. Laurent-class destroyers now more than 20 years old.

The six St. Laurent-class ships will be more than 30 years old in 1989, well beyond the normal design life of 20 to 25 years. There will be seven other ships 30 years or older.

The government is considering carrying out refits on Restigouche-class and Mackenzie-class destroyers.

The four 17 to 18-year-old Mackenzie-class destroyers based at Esquimalt are Yukon, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan and Qu'Appelle.

Frewer said it was impossible to estimate how much work would be done by the command's ship repair unit at Esquimalt and how much would be contracted to private industry.

He said the St. Laurent-class ships would not be refitted because they would be too expensive to keep in service.

Peanut probe powers broadened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney-General Griffin Bell, who has been under sharp attack from Republican members of Congress, announced Friday he is broadening the powers of the special counsel he named to head an investigation into President Carter's family peanut business.

Bell told a news conference the changes should guarantee that Republican New York Attorney Paul Curran will have the same degree of independence that the office of the special prosecutor had in investigating the Watergate scandal.

Threats

Beside the threat of a province-wide strike by the IWA, there has been picketing of the federal fisheries office in Queen Charlotte City on the islands off the northwest B.C. coast.

Federal officers gained an ally Friday in the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union who said the open defiance of the Fisheries Act by the timber company was unacceptable.

A spokesman for the fishermen said Bennett and the provincial forest service had opted for confrontation rather than co-operation in the dispute.

The fishermen's union urged LeBlanc to use the full force of the Fisheries Act to force the company to comply with the law.

The spokesman said the fish resource cannot be made the victim of jurisdictional squabbles between governments.

The dispute came to a head last Monday when the fisheries officers, after a warning to the company and its employees not to cut timber on a 40-acre tract at Riley Creek in Rennell Sound, laid the first charge.

But the provincial government had authorized logging in the area and the company said an independent consultant had told them any environmental damage to the creek would be minimal. They continued the logging.

NDP leader David Barrett called the conflict "just the tip of the iceberg," and predicted worse is to come.

"These clashes will become a nightmare in this province unless the two governments can reach some agreement over logging and environmental issues," Barrett said.

Labor expects defeat

generated by crippling winter strikes in which cancer patients were turned away from hospitals and children from schools, garbage piled up in the streets, food shortages developed and the already shaky economy was further undermined.

The Labor party is the political arm of the labor movement and traditional supporter of the workers against big business.

Public opinion polls are running 13 to 20 percentage points in favor of the Conservatives, and Mrs. Thatcher's forces say they expect to add at least 50 seats to their current Commons total of 281.

The Laborites have 308 in the 635-seat chamber and have depended on the support of the Liberals and other minor parties.

The Conservatives believe Callaghan has finally lost most of his third-party backing, but Michael Foot, deputy leader of the Labor party, said in a television broadcast Friday: "If we are defeated on Wednesday night we are quite happy to go to the country and have a full general election campaign, confident that we will be returned with an over-all majority."

The Conservatives were last in office under Prime Minister Edward Heath, whose government tried to curb the power of the labor unions, lost a bitter 1974 confrontation with coal miners and was swept from office in the March 1, 1974, election.

If the government survives Wednesday's vote it could remain in power until the fall. Then by law there must be a general election, five years having elapsed since the last election.

Callaghan's government, despite its socialist coloring, is experiencing the same kind of hostility from the unions as Heath's did in 1973-74, although for different reasons. Heath tried to curb union power by law. Callaghan, in an anti-inflation drive, has tried to curb wages.

Swap-for-siege claim countered

SANANDAJ, Iran (UPI) — Left-wing Fedayeen guerrillas, claiming control of this western Iranian city, disputed government claims Friday that rebellious Kurdish tribesmen had agreed to end their siege of an army base until the army releases 186 Kurdish prisoners.

Tehran Radio said Kurdish troops and their Fedayeen allies had agreed to withdraw from the siege in exchange for assurances of greater authority for Kurdish leaders. The broadcast said Iranian troops had actually released the prisoners captured during a four-day battle that killed more than 500 persons.

The Marxist Fedayeen guerrillas, who have broken with the revolutionary government of Ayatollah Rubollah Khomeini, called a news conference in this battle-torn city Friday to challenge the government announcement of a prisoner exchange and the Kurds' withdrawal from the hills surrounding the base.

UPI photographers Jamshid Imani-Rad and Akbar Shirzad Friday walked through the city, 318 miles west of Tehran, and saw hundreds of Kurds in baggy trousers and Soviet-made Kalashnikov rifles slung casually over their shoulders still roaming the streets.

Gunmen also held to their positions around the army base, although no shots were fired since sporadic shooting Thursday night, a later report said.

The news conference was addressed by a Fedayeen guerrilla, who introduced himself as "Khosrow" and told reporters he was not allowed to give his name.

He claimed the guerrillas had recorded tapes of a conversation between chief of army general staff Gen. Ali Vali Qarani and Interior Minister Ahmad Sadr Haj Syed Javadi which, he said, pointed to a hardline stand by the army.

He did not say how the tapes were obtained.

Qarani, he said, refused to order a ceasefire unless the gunmen handed back control of the radio and television station and government buildings they seized at outset of the fighting Monday in this capital of the Kurdistan region of Iran.

There was no immediate government comment on the Fedayeen allegations, which indicated a direct attempt to pressure and embarrass Khomeini shortly before his March 30 referendum on the proposed Islamic republic.

The Fedayeen charges confirmed fears the left-wing would reject a compromise with the revolutionary government, making it difficult for the ceasefire to hold in the city. The extreme left-wing Fedayeen aided the Khomeini's fight to topple Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi but broke with him later.

The Fedayeen spokesman also said the Sanandaj garrison commander, Col. Mashaallah Safari, would not report back to the army headquarters in Tehran because the guerrillas feared he would be executed. But, he said, "Col. Safari is not our prisoner."

Safari was seized by the gunmen Monday. Later, Sanandaj Radio broadcast a statement in which he called on the army to surrender to the Kurds.

The reported agreement to end the fighting came after Khomeini's chief negotiator, Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani, talked for two days with the tribal leaders and gave them assurances of greater authority for the Kurdish leaders.

U.S. WARNS SOVIETS

WASHINGTON (AP)— U.S. state department officials warned the Soviet Union on Friday not to intervene in the fighting in Afghanistan, saying they expect "the principle of non-interference to be respected by all parties in the area, including the Soviet Union."

"We would regard external involvement in Afghanistan's internal problems as a serious matter with the potential of heightening tensions and destabilizing the situation in the entire region," the officials said.

But department spokesman Hodding Carter tempered the warning by calling the statement a "diplomatic exercise" and acknowledging that the Soviet Union has a right to send arms and advisers to the Afghan government.

Carter said allegations in the Soviet press that the United States is backing anti-government guerillas are false. "The United States has not interfered in the internal affairs of Afghanistan," he said.

Prayers for wider peace

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, "praying from the bottom of my heart" that his country's treaty with Egypt will foster a wider Middle East peace, arrived here Friday en route to Washington for Monday's treaty signing ceremony.

Within hours of his departure from Israel a terrorist bombing in Jerusalem killed an Israeli and wounded 14 other persons, including a Canadian women tourist whose suffered minor wounds.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is to arrive in the United States on Sunday. A planned stopover by Sadat in Spain has been cancelled and the Madrid press speculated it was because the Spanish government feared adverse reaction by the Arab countries that supply most of Spain's oil.

Arab countries, furious over the treaty, continued plans to derail it and to punish Sadat for coming to a bilateral agreement with Israel.

In London, Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Haleem Khaddam said Friday that Syria and other Arab countries will foster efforts to overthrow Sadat.

Iraq has called for a meeting of Arab League foreign ministers in Damascus, Syria, next Tuesday to invoke sanctions against Sadat, probably in the form of an economic boycott.

Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan Al Bakr sent messages Friday to French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing as a leader of the European Community; to William Gopallawa of Sri Lanka, head of the non-aligned movement, and to Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri, head of the Organization of African Unity, warning that the treaty will increase chances of a Mideast war.

In Israel, Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon confirmed that new Jewish settlements will be built in Israeli-occupied Arab territories after the treaty is signed.

The settlements will be in areas to be governed by autonomous Palestinian rule within 13 months of the treaty signing.

Drug ring uncovered

SCHWYZ, Switzerland (AP) — Officials in Switzerland and the Netherlands say that they have uncovered a drug smuggling ring that shipped at least 20 tons of hashish from Iran via Switzerland to the Netherlands in the last two years. Swiss police said the drugs had a street value of about $80 million. The West German owner of a Swiss trucking company and a company agent in the Netherlands have been arrested.

Three nations join forces in killer hunt

BRUSSELS (AP) — Investigators from three countries joined forces Friday to try to track down the killers of a British ambassador and a Belgian banker and to determine whether the slayings were linked in an international plot of political murder.

British, Dutch and Belgian police officials were known to be checking the possibility that the Irish Republican Army was responsible for the slaying Thursday of British Ambassador Sir Richard Sykes in the Netherlands and for the murder later Thursday of banker Andre Michaux in Brussels.

Unverified reports said the Irish guerrillas were responsible. A previously-unknown Dutch group, the Red Brigade, claimed in telephone calls to Dutch news media and The Hague police that it was responsible for killing Sykes on behalf of the IRA.

Dutch police said they are sure Sykes, cut down by two gunmen outside his home in The Hague, was the intended target of that attack. But Belgian authorities speculated that the two men who several hours later shot Michaux may have mistaken him for a neighbor, said to be an assistant to Britain's NATO representative.

Dutch police, noting Brussels is only a two-hour ride by train or car from The Hague, said it was possible the killings were carried out by the same assailants. They huddled with Belgian authorities and with two agents sent to The Hague by Scotland Yard.

In Amsterdam, the daily newspaper De Telegraaf said Friday it received an anonymous call claiming Sykes was killed by the IRA, which is fighting to oust the British from Northern Ireland.

The newspaper reported the caller, speaking with an Irish accent, warned: "This is only the beginning. It's war. Tomorrow we will kill either the ambassador in Belgium, France or (West) Germany," apparently meaning the British envoys in those countries.

The call could not be authenticated. A Dutch police spokesman said it was being taken seriously but not conclusively.

Sykes, 58, and his Dutch valet, Karel Straub, 20, were fatally shot by two gunmen as the envoy was preparing to drive from his home to his office.

Michaux, 47, was killed as he parked his car outside his home in suburban Brussels.

Exiles get life, court erupts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a judgment that provoked defiant screaming in the court, a federal judge Friday sentenced two Cuban exiles to life in prison for the "monstrous and cold blooded" murder of Chilean diplomat Orlando Letelier.

Guillermo Novo and Alvin Ross Diaz yelled "Viva Cuba Libre!"—Long Live Free Cuba—as they were led away from the courtroom. Their anti-Castro supporters responded with screams and shouts.

After hearing each defendant deny guilt and denounce the U.S. government, District Judge Barrington Parker sentenced the two to life sentences for the 1976 Washington car bomb murder of Letelier, an exiled leftist critic of Chile's military regime, and Roni Moffit, his aide at a Washington research institute.

Seaman guilty of rape, kidnap

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Merchant seaman Larry Singleton was convicted Friday of kidnapping and raping a 15-year-old girl and chopping off her arms with an axe.

A jury of nine men and three women found 51-year-old Singleton guilty of attempted murder in the first degree, mayhem, two counts of forcible (oral copulation) sodomy and kidnapping.

After deliberating for 12½ hours over three days, the jury concluded that Singleton, of Sparks, Nev., did not use a deadly weapon or commit bodily harm in kidnapping Mary Vincent last Sept. 29. That finding removed the prospect that Singleton would face the death penalty in sentencing scheduled for April 20.

However, jurors did find Singleton used a deadly weapon and committed bodily harm in the attempted murder of the girl.

Every year in B.C., hundreds of artifacts are discovered and sent to the B.C. Provincial Museum in Victoria.

Unfortunately, because many of the pieces have been lost or neglected for hundreds of years, they need careful cleaning and restoration to bring them back to life.

That's the job of people like John Davies—a technician with the museum's Conservation Division. To him an artifact isn't just another Indian mask—it's a tangible part of our past that must be carefully pieced together and preserved to help show us where we've been. And help tell us where we're going.

Harsh words about honors

TWELVE YEARS AGO the Order of Canada was established as a means of honoring Canadians in all walks of life who have shown excellence in their many ways.

In recent weeks some up-dated information on the Order has been delivered to news media across the nation so that its existence and its purpose may become more widely known by the general public. As the covering letter from the Honors Secretariat at Rideau Hall says: "(The Order) . . . provides a way of thanking those who have made outstanding contributions, and for their part in creating 'a better country', in the words of the Order's motto. It may be reasoned that the better the Order is known, the better our society may be."

As true as this might be, it is unfortunate that in the package of material distributed was a short treatise on the Order by M. Maxwell Cohen, O.C., Q.C. with which he marked the occasion of his appointment as the one-thousandth Canadian to be so honored.

The problem is with Mr Cohen's choice of words. "Honors," he writes, "have served the vanities and verities of mankind probably for as long as organized homo sapiens has roamed and ravished the earth."

What is the learned emeritus professor of law at McGill University saying? He is saying this: Honors serve the excessive pride, the futility and the worthlessness of man ever since he began wandering about aimlessly raping and violating our world.

Certainly not a particularly complimentary definition of a nation's honors and awards or, indeed, of those upon whom they might be bestowed.

True, his descriptive language improves as his treatise goes on. But there's still abrasion enough left to rub a good many Canadians a little raw. Explaining, for instance, why it took so long for Canada to initiate its own honors, he makes this observation: " . . . there lingered on in Canada the persistent snobbery of Britannic orders that stayed the hand of national innovation here . . ."

Surely it would have been better for the Honors Secretariat to have simply let stand alone the official description of the Order of Canada which commences: "The granting of honors is a graceful way for any country to pay tribute to those who exemplify the highest qualities of citizenship and whose contributions enrich the lives of their contemporaries."

A pleasing statement which surely says it all . . .

All the answers

WHAT A LOT OF NONSENSE a spokesman for an Ontario teachers group spouted this week when she claimed Canadians are too selfish to have children.

Doreen Brady, president of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association, told a meeting of her association members that in this International Year of the Child, children are a scarce and undervalued commodity.

Canadians do not see that children are a gift from God and a symbol of hope in the future, she said.

"Instead, children are seen as an expensive nuisance and receive attention only when they cause vandalism, show racist tendencies or interrupt the smooth flow of the adult world."

She said the average taxpayer, middle-aged and without children, has an "I'm all right, Jack" attitude and does not see why he should pay for other people's children.

How wonderful to have such an unshakable view of life's blessings and evils. Miss Brady has somehow avoided the nagging doubts which sometimes plague the rest of us.

Still, some questions remain: Are people who choose not to have children always selfish, or possibly making a God-given choice, even a wise one? Are those of us who have children inevitably unselfish, or do we sometimes do children no favor by becoming parents? Are all of us really destined in later life to grumble about paying taxes for other people's kids?

Doubtless Miss Brady has all the answers. But does she really understand the questions?

The man who burned a winning ticket

By JAMES ABRAMS

TOKYO — Hiromi Koyokawa sent $50,000 up in smoke because he wanted to return to a normal life. Now people think he is completely crazy.

Kiyokawa, a 36-year-old bachelor in the mountain hamlet of Kanae, Nagano Prefecture, at first was ecstatic when he learned that he had won 10 million yen ($50,000) in the national lottery. He planned to buy a home, leaving a little aside to take his fellow workers on a weekend trip.

But he soon learned that the burdens of instant wealth can outweigh the benefits. The small-town grapevine turned him into an object of gossip and, the heart of man being what it is, envy. Friends and co-workers fawned over him while spoil-sport neighbors refused to talk to him.

The notoriety finally proved to be too much. The first day of work after the New Year holiday he took the winning ticket to his office and burned it before the incredulous eyes of his co-workers.

The deed was done, he said, because keeping a harmonious relationship with his colleagues was more important than his new-found riches.

If Kiyokawa thought that burning the ticket would make the whole episode disappear, he was sorely mistaken. The same locals who begrudged him his treasure now spurned him as crazy for throwing it away. To make matters worse, the story was picked up by the national news media, and Kiyokawa suddenly saw his face splashed across newspapers and flickering over TV screens.

His company, a 40-person operation making movie equipment, started getting at least 20 calls a day from all over the country. Some called it an heroic gesture, the act of a man who refused to compromise his principles. A large number wanted to convey the message that throwing away the money was an act of unprecedented stupidity.

One elderly man from western Japan even castigated a company supervisor for instigating the act by his failure to properly train his employees.

Kiyokawa, who receives a monthly salary of 130,000 yen ($260), has always been regarded as somewhat of an eccentric by the local community because he is still unmarried at 36 and has taken up the female pursuits of flower arrangement and Japanese dance. He also writes poetry.

Now, he says, he has become so notorious in the town of 13,000 that he has stopped shopping and going to the public baths because of the comments he receives. Some townspeople, refusing to believe that anyone could do such an insane thing, have even accused him of burning a losing ticket as a ruse to hide his winnings from the community.

"I just want to be left alone," pleads Kiyokawa, who has even given up his favorite pastime of mah-jong because of the uproar. He says that he does not regret his decision to turn his windfall into ashes, but now reflects that it might have been better for all concerned if he had given the money to charity.

Not all are unhappy about Kiyokawa's incendiary act. Kanae Mayor Matasaburo Kato was all smiles about the unexpected publicity pouring down on the usually sleepy town. Kato expressed the hope that the hometown boy's "heroic act" will bring Kanae nationwide fame.

The Times will be back but 'not at any price'

ROBERT MUSEL
United Presss International

LONDON — When The Times, one of the world's most famous newspapers, suspended publication last Nov. 30, it swore it would not appear again, nor would its sister publication the Sunday Times, until they could use modern techniques already standard in most parts of the United States, Canada and elsewhere.

New technology would enable reporters and advertising staff to type material directly into computers setting up type for the newspaper (as has been done at The Daily Colonist for the past 16 months).

Spurring The Times group towards what it knew could be a damaging confrontation was the frustration of losing more than $5.2 million in 1978 because of wildcat stoppages by some of the "highest paid" workers in Britain.

The equally determined National Graphical Association (NGA), one of the major unions of the Fleet Street newspaper district, said it would never permit non-members to connect the newsroom or advertising office to the printing process.

Nor would it negotiate with the parent publishing company, Times Newspapers Ltd. (TNL), until all its laid-off members were reinstated. Unions in general blame The Times' problems on "managerial failures."

The stoppage — now in its fourth month — is estimated to be costing TNL about $2 million a month.

Newspapers play a larger part in the life of Britain than in most other countries. Only Japan has a higher readership. On an average, 75 per cent of British adults read a daily national morning newspaper, 50 per cent an evening newspaper and 87 per cent a national Sunday newspaper.

And the disappearance of The Times and Sunday Times — and to a lesser extent its literary and education supplements — left a void their competitors could not quite fill. The Sunday Times claims a recent survey showed only 600,000 of its 1.5 million readers have sought an alternative.

Only one per cent of these thought their new paper was the equal of their strike-bound favorite and none thought it was better, said a Sunday Times spokesman.

The TNL staffs numbered 4,300 of whom 1,100 — about half of them journalists — have signed agreements and will remain on salary. But another 1,300 TNL staffers left the payroll recently, a development Fleet Street thought might inspire a move toward settlement by a third party. Prime Minister James Callaghan has been mentioned.

Full-page advertisements in recent weeks did not bear out the optimism. Under the headline: "We're sorry to keep you waiting for our comeback," Times Newspapers claimed its terms are the most generous ever proposed in British industry and that it has reached agreements with about 40 per cent of the permanent staff.

It conceded some other newspapers have given the NGA "total jurisidiction" over the new technology, but because of TNL's heavy type-setting load, "Our needs are different."

"One thing is certain," it concluded. "We will not go back to the industrial anarchy that existed before we suspended our newspapers. We cannot agree that this country should alone be prevented from making full use of available technology and machinery. We shall be back — but not at any price."

The Times editor, William Rees-Mogg, said some arguments over technology have gone on so long that equipment installed in anticipation of agreements already is obsolete.

Energy Secretary Tony Benn, a leader of the ruling Labor Party, suggested the papers' takeover by the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC), which operates under a royal charter.

Lord MacGregor, former chairman of the Royal Commission on the Press, denounced the idea as a move towards direct government control of a newspaper. And Harold Evans, editor of the Sunday Times, asked, "Can't he wait till 1984?"

Associated Newspapers, which operates the Daily Mail and other newspapers, was said to have offered to take over the Sunday Times staff and start its own Sunday newspaper. But another advertisement said recently: "None of the properties or assets of Times Newspapers are for sale."

It's double the trouble for women at retirement

OTTAWA — Judging by the testimony given by Professor Albert Rose of the University of Toronto's department of social work to the Senate committee on retirement, aging women face double jeopardy.

If an older woman is married and her husband has just been forced into mandatory retirement, she finds the old man under foot all day, and a nuisance. The result is havoc in the home. Rose put it more elegantly:

"Social workers are clearly familiar with the impact on marriage among what I shall call loosely the working class when the male spouse retires (Rose had previously explained that professionals and the self-employed don't really retire). The man is in close proximity with his wife within the home and she in turn is not accustomed to the presence of another person in the home on a continuous basis.

"Social workers have discovered that there is an increasing tendency to marital conflict among persons in their mid-60s when one retires and then is ever-present . . ."

The second jeopardy faced by elderly women concerns those who are single and may be summed up by the word "poverty."

Because they generally have worked at lower-paying jobs than men or have been employed only part-time, and because private pension plans don't leave much for survivors, single women — widows, divorcees, spinsters — are likely to be worse off than men upon retirement.

For the first problem, Rose proposes a solution that is by now becoming the conventional view: keep the old codgers working. The mandatory retirement age should be raised, and people at 65 should have a choice between retirement and going on working. If they retire, a pre-retirement education program should be instituted to prepare the retiree for interesting volunteer work. A great deal of such work needs to be done in every community, and this activity has the added merit of keeping the volunteer out of the way of his wife.

The problem of poverty among elderly women living alone is more difficult. Rose's proposal:

"The Canada Pension Plan should be amended to permit women in the home and those who become unemployed female members of the labor force to contribute what they can to that portion which the beneficiary pays, up to, of course, the maximum pensionable annual earnings. It would be our view (The Canadian Association of Social Workers) that the state must match these contributions."

Similar solutions to the poverty problem among elderly single women have in the past been proposed by Flora MacDonald (PC — Kingston and the Islands) and Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre). Senator Florence Bird pointed out that according to Welfare Minister Monique Begin, "to allow the housewife in the home to contribute only helped in the upper income group. The poor, who are the ones who will have a rotten time when they reach 65, are really not going to be helped by that."

Rose agreed that if "the female members of a household within the lowest 40 per cent or one-third of the income distribution could not possibly contribute . . . then I think we have to find a way to make a contribution for them." He then suggested that the contribution come out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

I'm not sure that there's anything left in the Consolidated Revenue Fund to distribute. But if it's the elderly single women with no income except Old Age Security pensions who are most in need of help, why not simply increase the guaranteed income supplement to which they're already entitled?

Perhaps, reflecting on the state of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, Rose did suggest something like that, through a reallocation of resources among pensioners, similar to the recent family allowances reallocation. That would redistribute the wealth within the pensions community.

The proposal is all right, although it could be argued that if an important social purpose is sought, all of society should be called on to contribute, rather than just one segment of society. But with 54 per cent of Canadian pensioners getting the income supplement because they are below the poverty level, and with single women worse off than men, something of course has to be done. If the quickest solution is to redistribute pension income, do it that way, with redistribution from general revenues later.

Both, of course, are band-aid prescriptions. Ultimately, the economic plight of elderly single women will be solved through fair employment practices which give women equal job and pay oportunities with men — and therefore equal pension opportunities; and in improved survivors' benefits in private pension plans.

An open-door policy

The Globe and Mail

There was once (the story goes) an architect assigned to consuct an escape-proof jail. He designed one with no locks, no bars, no doors, no windows and no walls. "But won't the prisoners escape?" the warden asked. The architect replied, "They wouldn't know where to begin."

The argument must have convinced Statistics Canada. Assigned to conduct a survey for the Agriculture Department, the agency borrowed 50 cardboard boxes full of income tax returns from Revenue Canada, boxes clearly marked "confidential — to be destroyed."

But Statistics Canada had a better idea. As MP Elmer MacKay (PC, Central Nova) discovered, the agency simply left the boxes unattended in a room in the basement of its office building. "There wasn't even a door on the room," Mr. MacKay said. Very crafty. Who would think of looking for confidential records in a room with nothing in it but boxes of confidential records?

This stunning lack of security might not win the admiration of farmers and ranchers across the country who believed, as we all would like to believe, that income tax records are treated with the sort of respect our personal files deserve. They might not see the wisdom in letting passersby stumble onto the news that a farmer in High River, Alberta, had a taxable income of $76,071.72 in 1974 while a farmer in Maidstone, Ontario, had no taxable income to speak of. They might not appreciate the irony in the line on the Statistics Canada forms telling them that "your figures are kept strictly confidential." (The agency's emphasis).

At Statistics Canada, needless to say it was business as usual. "We don't," said Tim Davis, executive assistant to the chief statistician, "know what (Mr. MacKay) is referring to." That, Mr. Davis, is the problem.

Impound car instead of driver

This letter provides an alternative solution to the problem of removing suspended drivers from the road other than jailing them as advocated in your March 17 editorial. It is felt that your solution is too drastic. Scoff laws they may be, but hardly deserving of treatment as criminals. Besides the jails are already overfull.

Since the object is to remove the suspended driver from the road, why not jail the car instead of the driver? No court action would be required. Simply empower the police to impound any car found with a suspended driver at the wheel, for the balance of his period of suspension. The mechanics of the operation could be comparatively simple and could be operated at no cost to the public.

An officer, on stopping a car for any reason and finding the driver to be under suspension would call the pick-up centre on his radio and a pick-up driver would be despatched by taxi. The pick-up drivers could be any person with a clean licence, working from the centre on a piecework basis, say $10 a job.

As he waits at the scene, the officer would make out a ticket to be affixed to the inside of the windshield, showing by whom the car may be retrieved, the date of retrieval, i.e., the date of completion of the suspension, and the costs to be paid on retrieval, made up of the taxi fare and fee of the picker-up and the impoundment costs, which would be preset on a daily basis to cover the costs of operating the pound and associated administrative costs.

The officer would give the offender a copy of the ticket and inform him that he has two weeks following the date shown to retrieve the car at the pound, paying an additional fee for every day of impoundment after the retrieval date. On arrival of the picker-up, the car is driven to the pound, the taxi then being available for the use of the suspended driver and passengers.

If the car is not owned by the suspended driver, the impoundment would stand, if the car was being used with the owner's consent. If it was not, it would be returned to the owner after he signed a complaint of car theft, thus placing the suspended driver in an indictable position.

The same action would be taken if it was a rental car. Thus a suspended driver would find it difficult, if not impossible to either borrow or rent a car. He could effectively be prevented from buying one by a cross-check of his driver's licence when he applied for insurance and plates.

As a suspended driver would lose his car if he drove it and would neither be able to borrow, rent or buy another, he would be effectively barred from the road.

As for unclaimed impounded cars, a monthly auction would be popular with the public and junk dealers and would also help to remove clunkers from the highways.

Low finance

Re: Distribution by the B.C. government of B.C. Resources Corporation free shares.

The money which circulates in the stock exchange comes from the banks, pensions and trust funds in addition to syndicates of groups of investors.

It has been statistically proven that over the years individual investors make about five per cent profit. As it is now possible to get 10 per cent from mortgage and trust funds with security this accounts for the disappearance of the individual investor.

What Premier Bennett is doing is asking the people to risk their money in the stock market which does not need their money anyhow because it comes from the pension and trust funds in any case.

People complain that they do not understand high finance, what they need to understand is low finance.

Danger signals are surfacing in fish industry

It would appear that the time is at hand to demand that government take another long look at the administration policies of its fisheries department.

Firstly this is a resource which belongs to all citizens of this country, we as taxpayers support the administration and enhancement programs related to this industry. Yes, make no mistake about its being an industry with government being a sometimes unwilling partner, a situation which is completely out of control and totally one sided and slanted toward the commercial fishing interests of both this and foreign countries.

I would like to propose that the fisheries department get into the hatchery business in a bigger way and become the sole distributor of commercial salmon using the hatchery recovery method. Hatcheries situated close to the ocean can be operated successfully on a large scale with the fish migration returning right to the marketplace.

Does it not seem ludicrous in this day and age to expend large quantities of fuel which is another limited resource to chase these fish all over the West Coast when we know that they will return to their point of origin? If we refrain from fishing the herring into extinction the salmon feeding on them should return fat and market ready.

I realize that a lot of people work in the industry and make a good living at it, but in spite of the fact that danger signals are evident the commercial industry has not paid its share in protecting this limited resource beyond their own selfish interests. So let's stop the giveaway and let's operate the business ourselves through government. Who knows — if we eliminate greed at the lower levels and set our own prices at the market level as well, we as citizens of this country and rightful owners of the fishing resource might even be able to afford a piece of salmon ourselves.

Rating French misses the point

Yet again we have been subjected to the irrational ravings of our Franco-phobic compatriots who, it would seem, have an unquenchable penchant (a word of French origin) for quoting "grand totals" of international linguistic groups, without the least thought to such important factors as percentages or proportions, as regards linguistic groups and their numbers in specific nation states.

I am referring more particularly to the remarks of one V.F. Woodward of Ladysmith, which were printed in the March 14 Colonist. What does the fact that French is not one of "the top ten on the international language hit parade" have to do with whether it should or should not be taught in Canadian schools? Gad, why not regurgitate that age old retort, "Well we beat them on the Plains of Abraham didn't we!"

It is with undying, nationalistic optimism that I repeat this oft disregarded concern: the French-Canadian factor, as one of the founding groups of our nation, for those who perhaps have forgotten, continues to be an important and undeniable element of Canadian society, and indeed, as they constitute a third of our Canadian population we cannot merely wish away their language rights, or regard them as less than equal, recalcitrant upstarts who must be put in their place!

Secondly, I was offended by the vulgar references as to the only supposed uses for which Woodward believed the French language to be fit. At a risk of appearing somewhat dogmatic dare I venture to say that another's language demands the respect with which one treats one's own native tongue.

Thirdly, I would question Woodward's assertion that, "We are dependent on English speaking countries!" What may I ask was the result to the Canadian economy on the increase in oil prices imposed by the OPEC nations in 1973? Are not Russia and China the major purchasers of Canadian grain? Is not Japan a major purchaser of Canadian natural resource exports?

She has no axe to grind

In my rebuttal to Mr. Walker I said that he referred to me as one of Dave Barrett's bunch. Your typesetter printed it as bench and ruined the context of my letter.

Now your charming Mr. Owen Moore has seized on the word bench to ridicule me and my beliefs.

My socialistic spots have never earned me one cent of any government money. Can Mr. Moore with his capitalistic stripes say the same? If so, I owe him an apology.

He keeps harping that the NDP ruined the mining. Mr. Barrett introduced a five per cent royalty on this resource. When the Socreds got in they socked the public with a seven per cent sales tax. Which was the fairest?

As to the BCRIC shares, Mr. Moore can't be so naive as to think he's getting them for nothing. It's like the homeowners' grant. Our taxes in Victoria when this grant was brought in were $130. We were given $50 and paid approximately $180. Big deal!

I've no axe to grind. Has Mr. Moore?

Status based on comparison

Re BCGEU advertisements:

We have all seen the recent advertisements of the BCGEU and have noted that the tone contrasts with the militancy shown by many union leaders in confrontations with the employers of B.C. government employees.

I feel that it would only be fair if the BCGEU would include within these advertisements the following data: salary of employees shown, security of tenure, pensions, all sick and dental benefits, holiday allowances, and all other fringe benefits.

Such information would enable the rest of the general public, who are the employers, to compare their own lots with those employees seen in the advertisements, and thus we would all have a better understanding of the status of public servants.

Government grant possible interference

Under the heading: Publications — Financial Assistance to Moncton Newspaper — Motion Under S.O. 43, the following is recorded in Hansard, March 7, 1979:

"Mr. Leonard C. Jones (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, I rise, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, to move a matter of urgent and pressing necessity.

"Whereas the Department of Secretary of State agreed to grant, directly or indirectly, the sum of $215,000 for the aid in the financial situation of L'Evangeline newspaper in Moncton, and whereas other newspapers in Canada have not been so favored, and whereas such financial assistance leaves some doubt to the possible government interference with the freedom of the press and the free enterprise system generally, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Palliser (Mr. Schumacher):

> 'That this house strongly object to such action and request the Secretary of State to reconsider this move in light of strong opposition to this type of grant to newspapers.'

"Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the presentation of such a motion?

"Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

"Some Hon. Members: No."

The motion was defeated.

IWA asks fair share of profits

Recently Gorde Hunter drew a bloated figure representing inflation, with a caption suggesting the forest industry negotiations with the IWA would cause another round of inflation. Even Gorde Hunter should realize that the forest industry does not tot up their costs and then tack on a reasonable profit, they gouge what the market will bear and anybody will recognize that as free enterprise at its best. Until the system changes the workers in the industry will ask for a fair share of the profits from the sale of the province's natural resources.

By coincidence there is also a picture of Gorde Hunter seated at a banquet table, looking as though he has taken himself as the model for the figure in the cartoon.

And what does our rednecked friend contribute to the economy, while I am slugging it out in the woods in all kinds of weather? I feel like shedding a tear for Gorde slugging it out on the golf course.

Just think of the effect on my morale and work when I think that the tree I cut might go to make the paper that Hunter's drivel is printed on.

It must be great to go through life as a critic and consumer and I would like to invite Mr. Hunter to drop his golf clubs and take a tour of the woods and sawmills and see how the munificent IWA wages are earned. Two of our local IWA members were killed within a week in this district.

I would like to see dear Gorde go on strike for a couple of months. He could take off to Palm Springs to spend his hard-earned Canadian dollar and nobody up here would miss him.

Welfare figures confusing

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy is all upset about my letter to the editor relating to the number of "employable" persons on social assistance and she refers to the "true figure" in her news release of Feb. 21. I have now obtained a copy of this four page release and guess what, nowhere in the release or in the four pages of financial figures attached does it give one single statistic as to the number of persons on social assistance!

The figure of 40,000 employable "persons" was obtained after the press release from the information department of Mrs. McCarthy's ministry. They, according to Mrs. McCarthy, gave the wrong figure and included "dependants" so they say that as of Dec. 31, 1978 there were 23,968 "employable persons" plus their dependants.

Mr. Vander Zalm, the former minister, told the Legislature on Jan. 13, 1976 in a written answer to Order Paper Question No. 67 that on Dec. 31, 1975 there were 22,413 "employable persons" plus dependants. So if Mrs. McCarthy's latest figures are not erroneous then from December 1975 to December 1978 "employable persons" or social assistance increased by 1,551.

In her letter Mrs. McCarthy describes an "average reduction" of 1,391 as "dramatic" so I guess this "actual increase" of 1,551 can fairly be described as a "dramatic" increase under Social Credit.

The minister also takes umbrage over her $36 million "overrun" spent on social assistance, being added to her total department expenditure. Why, it was you, Madam Minister, who taught me "overruns" were a terrible catastrophe only wrought by the NDP. Now you say they don't mean a thing and that underspending by cutting services in the rest of your ministry will make up for the $36 million "overrun."

All very confusing, but at least Mrs. McCarthy you don't dispute that there are some 125,000 persons on social assistance under the age of 65, and you will spend well over half a billion dollars in the present fiscal year plus an increase next year. A far cry from your election promises on this subject.

'MAJOR PROBLEM' WITH GM DESIGNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group says a widespread failure of General Motors automatic transmissions indicates "a massive design problem" in a large percentage of the GM cars made since the 1976 model year.

The Centre for Auto Safety, a group that consumer advocate Ralph Nader helped found, said it had received complaints from 256 owners of cars whose GM Type 200 automatic transmission had failed.

Centre director Clarence Ditlow said the reports indicated a major problem with manufacturing smaller GM models to meet fuel economy standards.

Ditlow said some of the consumers had received reimbursement for repair costs, which he said showed GM had established a warranty on the transmissions for those consumers who complained loud enough.

In Detroit, GM issued a statement saying: "There has been no widespread failure of the four million GM automatic 200 transmissions produced thus far . . Further, there are no secret warranties at GM and thus none relating to transmissions."

The consumer group said the inadequacies of the Type 200 were demonstrated by comparing the number of complaints received on 1976 full-size Chevrolets to those on the 1977 model. The centre said there had been three complaints on the 1976 models and 27 on 1977s.

The centre, which compiles data on consumer problems with automobiles, said many of the transmission failures came at low mileage.

Ditlow said more than half the complaints on transmission failures in 1976 and later models related to use of the Type 200 Turbo Hydramatic transmissions on vehicles that were too heavy or too powerful for them. He said the transmission was first offered on six-cylinder or small V8 engines.

The car for which the transmission was designed was the 2,100-pound Chevrolet Chevette. It has been used in vehicles up to the 3,765-pound Caprice, Ditlow said.

Ditlow made the allegations in a letter to Michael Pertschuk, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission. The commission has a complaint pending against Ford Motor Co. in what is seen as a test case of its jurisdiction in auto defect cases.

Gloom after doom for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Survivors of a large-scale nuclear attack on the United States would be plagued by psychological problems and would face devastating shortages of food, fuel, and medical services, a congressional study said Thursday.

"Even the simplest requirements of survival will become major tasks," the study said.

It estimated it would take at least five years for the country to generate the industrial and agricultural surpluses necessary for rapid economic growth and recovery.

The study was conducted for the U.S. Senate banking committee by Dr. Arthur Katz, a chemist, during research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Most analyses of nuclear warfare focus only on the number of fatalities and destruction of cities and overlook the effects of damage throughout the economy, Katz said.

Food shortages would be severe, Katz said, because of the concentration of food processing facilities in areas that would be heavily damaged —in northeastern, Great Lakes and Southwestern regions.

These same areas are dependent on food grown or produced in other regions of the country and an attack would leave the food distribution system in disarray, Katz said. He predicted that survivors in the northeastern region might not receive large-scale resupplies for up to several months after an attack.

In the area of energy production and distribution, Katz said a full-scale nuclear attack would knock out 98 per cent of the U.S. petroleum-refining capacity. What is left would not be enough even to meet farm needs, he said.

Foreign sources of oil, which fill 40 per cent of the country's requirements, might be curtailed or cut off and the petroleum would have to be refined even if it were delivered, he said.

Katz said it probably would be several years before the country has the capacity to efficiently convert domestic or imported fuel.

In the area of medical care, Katz said the pharmaceutical industry would be virtually eliminated because it was a top priority target.

A high proportion of doctors and medical specialists would be killed because of their concentration in cities, he said.

In a major attack on 71 large urban areas, perhaps as many as 75 per cent of the physicians would be killed or injured, Katz said, leaving a ratio of 200-to-600 surviving casualties to each doctor.

THE STORYBOOK BEAUTY OF BRITAIN from just $37 per person per day including accommodation, full breakfast and rental car.*

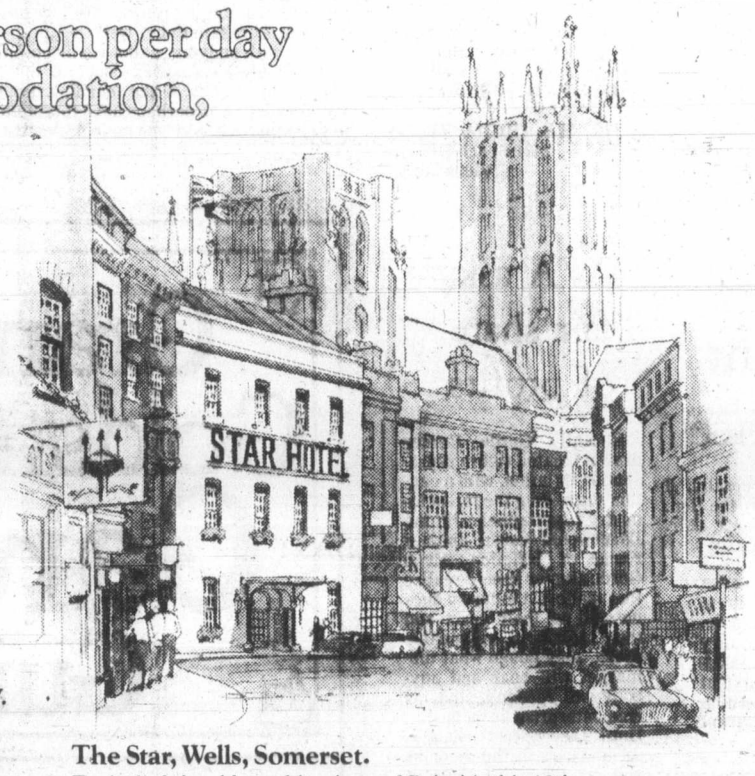
by Air Canada

Once upon a time, people thought Britain meant London. And then they began to discover the byways of Britain, where everything was peaceful, friendly, picturesque...and still a bargain!

Air Canada's Charter Class Fares get you there so economically and, with its wide choice of flights, conveniently. Best of all, Air Canada knows scores of lovely country inns and hotels, all over Britain and all approved by the British Tourist Authority. Their room prices all include the fabulous British breakfast.

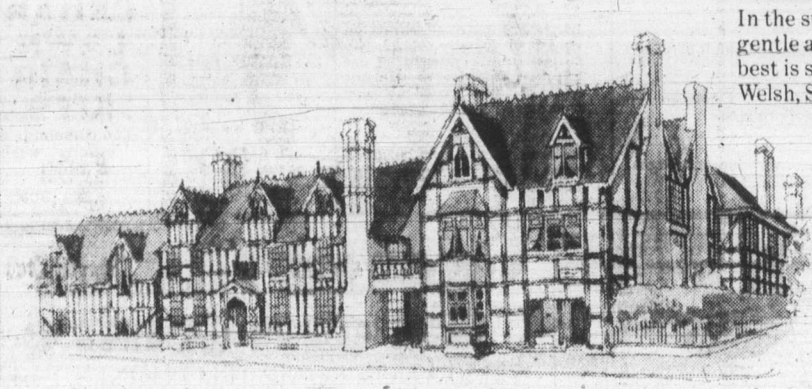
And with Air Canada prepaid vouchers, your accommodation is guaranteed at very short notice.

Here are five inns, typical of the delightful Air Canada choices. For a trip to Britain that you will remember happily ever after.



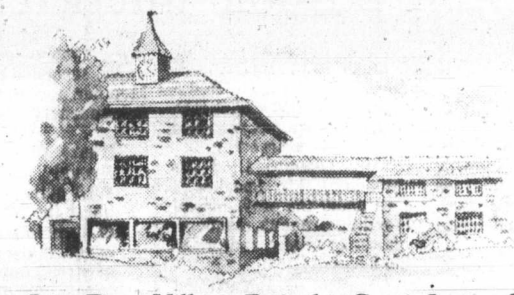
The Star, Wells, Somerset.
Typical of the old coaching inns of Britain, this 16th century charmer still boasts a cobbled carriageway. It stands within sight of Wells Cathedral, one of the most magnificent in Britain; and is near splendid scenic walks and views.

St Brides Hotel, Saundersfoot, Wales.
In the sunny southwest of Wales, the scenery is gentle and the sea-views spectacular. One of the best is seen from the delightful, and typically Welsh, St Brides Hotel.



The Raven, Droitwich, Hereford & Worcestershire.
Half-timbered Elizabethan manor house converted into a comfy hotel, in an elegant spa town featuring a lively market and some celebrated natural-brine spa baths. Situated in one of England's loveliest Counties.

Invercauld Arms, Braemar, Scotland.
A Deeside village famous for its beauty, and over 1,000 feet up in the bracing Highland air, houses this roomy and comfortable family hotel. Nearby places of great interest include Braemar and Balmoral Castles.



Last Drop Village, Bromley Cross, Lancashire.
A complete village, lovingly created from old moorland cottages. Includes a charming hotel, pub, cozy tea shop...and of course cobbled streets for strolling. Unique, certainly; but only one of many uniquely charming inns in Britain.

Getting there.
Air Canada flies to Britain nearly every day. And our schedules allow come-and-go flexibility, with charter class fares from $399 from Vancouver. (Call Air Canada or your travel agent for advance purchase details.)

Free copies of Air Canada's "Inn Britain" programme and BTA's "Britain, a Land to Explore" are available at your travel agent. Useful and reasonably-priced accommodation guides and tour planners are available through any Classic, Coles or W.H. Smith bookstore.

Getting about.
Thanks to Britain's compactness and its well-marked roads, getting about in your rental car is easy as well as economical.
Or ask about our modestly priced Britrail pass. Both give you unlimited mileage.

Redfern rezoning backed by city

Following a series of setbacks, plans to establish a group home for mentally handicapped at 937 Redfern has received some support from Victoria city council.

Acting on a recommendation from the Advisory Planning Commission, council gave approval in principle to the proposed rezoning of the property, but attached a number of conditions.

Only six handicapped and two supervisors will be allowed to live on the premises. The Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped had planned to house eight mentally retarded people and two group home parents in the Redfern home.

Council also insisted that the backyard be fenced and screened to assure privacy for both the residents of the home and the neighbors.

Ald. William McElroy told council that the planning commission was split into three camps when the proposal was discussed. Some members wanted to recommend rezoning without conditions, others were against the entire scheme and the third group suggested a compromise.

McElroy said it was unfortunate that the issue had received so much controversial press coverage.

"Everybody who was against it has been painted as some kind of redneck, which is unfortunate," he said.

Earlier this year, the association applied for a licence under the provincial Community Care Facilities Act to operate the group home, but area residents mounted a campaign against the proposal and the application was subsequently rejected.

The only other alternative was to have the property rezoned from residential to institutional use.

The last hurdle will be a public hearing at which area residents are expected to register their opposition to the group home. No date for the hearing has been set.

Oil port storm builds

PORT ANGELES (AP) — Anti-oil-port voices all but overwhelmed a hearing here over the possibility of piping Alaska crude oil from the Olympic Peninsula to Midwest states.

Eleven of the 12 persons who addressed a hearing Wednesday night sounded a single theme—no oil port at Port Angeles.

They agreed with the conclusion of a draft environmental impact statement that the so-called "Evans amendment" to the state's Coastal Zone Management Plan was unenforceable.

Sole exception was Bill Sage, Northwest regional vice-president of the Northern Tier Pipeline Co., which wants to build a pipeline from Port Angeles to Clearbrook, Minn.

He said scuttling the provision could endanger that plan.

The amendment, adopted at the request of former governor Dan Evans, calls for any new oil terminal in the state to be located no farther east than Port Angeles and for it to include facilities for serving existing refineries in the state.

In 1977, Governor Dixy Lee Ray asked that the Evans amendment be dropped from the plan.

The statement discussed Wednesday night was prepared by the Office of Coastal Zone Management of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration to assess the effect of dropping the amendment.

The draft environmental impact statement said that the "policy statement is unenforceable under both state and federal law. . .deriving no legal force from its incorporation" in the state coastal zone plan.

Clallam County has challenged the legality of the amendment in court, saying it was adopted improperly.

Meanwhile, Northern Tier announced in Seattle it will route its proposed pipeline underneath Puget Sound rather than along a previously selected route around the south end of the sound.

Though marginally more expensive, the new route is "economically, poltically and environmentally feasible," said Jim Hodge, Northern Tier vice-president of public and government affairs.

Author plans UVic talk on Monday

Author and publisher Nigel Nicolson is giving a free public lecture entitled The Art of Biography on Monday at 8 p.m. at the University of Victoria in B125 of the MacLaurin Building.

Nicolson, who has written the biography of Field Marshall Earl Alexander and of Mary, First Lady Curzon, is editing the letters of Virginia Woolf.

The lecture is sponsored by the UVic university lectures committee.

Several millions in land-grab deal

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia Indians have balked at accepting several million dollars for the federal and provincial governments for 3,200 acres of land expropriated in 1916.

The offer includes the original land value of $1 million plus interest from 1916 to the date of the offer. Federal Indian affairs officials would not reveal contents of the offer.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Thursday that the offer totalled $1 million.

"The several million dollar offer is somewhat less than current market value," Brian Hartley, the federal government's B.C. land claims representative, said Friday.

THE MOTHER'S DAY PENDANT

A delicate cameo of the perfect rose, lovingly crafted of pure Parian porcelain and hand-decorated with gold.

Mother's Day—it's a time to remind her of how much you care. And what more eloquent way to express your love than by giving her a single, precious rose?

A pendant specially designed to delight her on Mother's Day...yet so pretty she'll want to make an occasion of many days by wearing it throughout the year.

Crafted of the finest Parian porcelain—delicate, translucent and lovely—The Mother's Day Pendant portrays the perfect rose, with just the right pink blush to it, against an ivory-colored background. Undeniably feminine. Distinctive and classic. And so cleverly sculpted that the tiny rose looks almost real enough to smell! Plus, for just the right touch of elegance, there's a rim of gold, meticulously applied by hand.

So this year, give her a rose that needs no water...and has no thorns. The Mother's Day Pendant. A single rose that says more than a whole bouquet. Only $35. And available exclusively in limited edition.

To acquire yours in time for giving on Mother's Day, return the order form below postmarked by April 20, 1979. After this date, this very special pendant, which is being created expressly for Mother's Day 1979 by Franklin Porcelain, will never be made available again in this country. So it's a good idea to return the order form right away.

After all, if you say it with this special rose, you can be sure she'll get your message. With love....

Available only until April 20, 1979.
Each pendant will be sent in time for giving on Mother's Day.

Fire department raids 'cookie jar'

A raid by the fire department on the municipality's "cookie jar" has been authorized by Saanich's budget committee.

Aldermen agreed Friday to allow the department to use money from the $712,000 equipment depreciation reserve fund for purchase of a new $78,000 pumper, although it has not contributed to the fund.

However, effective this year, $25,000 will be included in future department budgets for the equipment reserve fund.

Treasurer Roy Broughton said contracts for equipment replacement this year could deplete the fund by about $313,000, but rentals would net an estimated $200,000 in 1979.

Several municipal departments include money in their annual budgets earmarked for the fund and it is swelled by private rentals.

Fire Chief Arthur Fryer said the pumper being replaced, a 1961 LaFrance, was used only in a backup capacity "because I'm scared it may fall apart."

The committee also agreed that $7,000 could be taken from the department's $9,000 reserve account for the purchase of a new car for use by the deputy chief. Fryer had requested two new vehicles.

Ad cost spiral piques Saanich

The high cost of advertising public hearings, a statutory requirement under the Municipal Act, has prompted a Saanich council resolution to the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Council's budget committee instructed senior staff Friday to draft a resolution seeking amendments to the act regarding the size of advertisements which must by law appear in newspapers.

Aldermen also expressed concern at the cost of advertising council and committee meetings, a policy instituted by council two months ago.

The $27,500 advertising budget presented by municipal clerk Robert Sharp was up $17,300 over the amount budgetted last year which was overspent by $6,300. The committee adopted a motion trimming $5,000 from the estimates.

Toronto trading

Merchandising shares rose more than nine points as Hudson's Bay Co. gained ⅞ to $28½. The company's board of directors said they recommend rejection by shareholders of a takeover bid by Thomson family interests and also forecast strong growth for the company over the next five years.

The number of call options traded increased to 2,714 from 1,857 on Thursday and put options to 20 from 19.

MARKET REPORT

Closing quotations for Friday, Mar. 23, 1979

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed out its busiest week in almost six months with a mixed showing Friday.

Analysts said news of the sharpest rise in U.S. consumer prices in more than four years had a minimal impact on the market since it had been so widely expected.

The U.S. government reported early Friday that the consumer price index jumped 1.2 per cent in February — equal to a 15.4-per-cent compound annual rate — after a 0.9-per-cent rise the month before.

Brokers said the figures were hardly comforting to investors. But they also noted that there had been plenty of advance warning that the inflation news would be bad.

The NYSE composite index eased .01 to 57.08.

Bay says no to offer

TORONTO (UPC) — Hudson's Bay Co. chairman George Richardson turned down a possible $9 million profit on a two-month investment when he and other Bay directors recommended against acceptance of a Thomson family takeover Friday.

"I'm personally optimistic about the future of this company," he told reporters after the board meeting.

Richardson, whose formal title of "governor" dates back to the Bay's charter as a colonial trading company, spent $23.9 million on Bay shares in February through a company owned by himself and members of his Winnipeg-based family.

Through 21 transactions over a 17-day period the Richardson family bought more than one million shares at prices ranging from $21.92 to $23. A week after the spree ended Feb. 23, the Thomson newspaper empire announced an offer to purchase 51 percent of the Bay's shares at $31 per share.

Richardson owned about 75,000 shares in the Bay before February.

Under the offer, Thomson retains the option to purchase all shares tendered or, if more than 51 percent are offered, to purchase the 51 percent on a pro rata basis.

If Richardson were to sell all his shares at Thomson's price, his profit would be $8,971,434. A sale of 51 percent of his holding would produce a $4,575,431 profit.

Richardson said Thursday the purchases were concentrated in February because of company regulations restricting stock purchases by company insiders. Directors are permitted to purchase shares only in the first 22 business days following release of complete company financial data.

"No insiders had been allowed to trade since last May," he said. "This was the first free window following the release of full financial information in January."

Richardson also said only one Bay director — Joseph Segal — will sell any shares to Thomson. Segal acquired a substantial holding in the Bay when the company acquired Zellers department stores.

Figures revised

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian and U.S. officials have agreed on new figures for trade between the two countries which show Canada had a $1.65 billion surplus in merchandise trade with the U.S. in 1977.

Statistics Canada issued a report Friday of "reconciled" figures on merchandise trade — reached after comparing records in both countries — which showed the Canadian merchandise trade surplus for 1977 was up from the $1.2 billion originally estimated in Canada.

But the figure is down sharply from previously-published U.S. trade figures which showed Canada had a $3.6 billion surplus in trade in goods with the U.S.

Pemberton Securities Ltd., that made-in-B.C. investment company, has turned some of its top-gun analysts on the B.C. Resource Investment Corp. and concluded that its shares might not be such a bad idea as an investment.

Pemberton's Ted Ohashi and Ross Hay-Roe wrote in a recent company report that, until a more detailed analysis can be made of BCRIC's assets, it is to your advantage to (a) register for your five free shares immediately so it will not be accidentally forgotten or overlooked; and (b) consider the purchase of additional shares with a view to entering an order as close to June 15 as practically possible. June 15 is the cutoff date for the $6-per-share offer and for the freebies.

Pembertons bases its recommendations on several factors, but the key one is one of growth. BCRIC was created just more than a year ago, March 9, 1978, by a transfer of $151.5 million in assets for 15 million shares, thereby establishing a theoretical value of $10.10 per share. Those values have increased in the intervening year by 40% to $14.17, Pembertons estimates.

Transfer value of the forestry products elements, Canadian Cellulose, Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills, was $73.3 million a year ago. Since that time, the current market value of CanCel (of which BCRIC holds 81%) shares have added a premium of some $30 million and the two wholly-owned companies (for which there is no quoted share value) have together earned about $8 million.

The 2.3 million acres of oil and gas leases, estimated a year ago at about $17.45 per acre, or $40.9 million, have gone up about 60% in value since then, which represents the increase in the per-acre price paid in the past year by other companies making bonus bids for the Peace River properties. This translates in dollar value to an added $25 million.

The other major holding, 10% of Westcoast Transmission, was worth about $10¾ per share at the transfer date and the current price of that issue, Pembertons states, has added $7 million to their value.

There are already firm indications that many citizens are going to take up more than their five free shares. As the $6 cash price represents a considerable discount from the $14 valuation, this will have the effect of diluting the value of all the shares outstanding. Therefore, Pembertons has attempted to guess just how many will be sold.

The investment firm, basing its estimate on how B.C. residents respond to normal Canada Savings Bonds sales and the past performance of Albertans when they were given a similar opportunity in 1975 to buy into Alberta Energy Co. Ltd., guesses that somewhere between $75 million and $125 million will be realized in cash sales.

On the assumption of $75 million the transfer value ($151.5 million) plus the possible increase in value ($69 million), plus the sales ($75 million) will result in a $295.5 million valuation. There will then be 27.5 million shares outstanding for a per-share value of $10.75.

On the assumption of $100 million the transfer value ($151.5 million) plus the possible increase in value ($69 million), plus the sales ($100 million) will result in a $320.5 million valuation. There will then be 31.7 million shares outstanding for a per-share value of $10.10.

On the assumption of $125 million the transfer value ($151.5 million) plus the possible increase in value ($69 million), plus the sales ($125 million) will result in a $345 million valuation. There will then be 35.8 million shares outstanding for a per-share value of $9.65.

Cruise begins here

Victorians planning a trip Down Under this fall can book direct from Victoria aboard the pocket-liner Pacific Princess, which will put into Ogden Point for a few hours Sept. 20 during the southern leg of its last Alaskan cruise this season.

The ship will start its 54-day roundtrip cruise to the South Pacific, Australia and New Zealand from Los Angeles on Sept. 23.

On the southbound cruise from L.A. to Sydney, the ports of call are Lahaina, Maui, and Honolulu; Christmas Island; Raiatea, Society Islands; Papeete, Tahiti; Rarotonga; Pago Pago, American Samoa; Niuafo'ou, Tongan Islands; Suva, Fiji Islands; Auckland, N.Z. and Sydney, Australia.

Northbound from Sydney the ship will spend two days at Auckland, then head for Nuku'alofa, Tonga; Apia, Western Samoa; Rarotonga; Papeete, Tahiti; Moorea; Honolulu, and return to Los Angeles.

A $30-million contract to build a bulk carrier for Algoma Central Railway will stabilize employment at Collingwood Shipyards Ltd., says the shipyard's assistant manager of human resources.

Joseph Sheffer said the contract from the Sault Ste. Marie railway will stabilize the work force at the shipyard although additional labor will not be required.

More than 700 of about 825 employees at the shipyard are involved in production, he said.

The vessel, to be known as the 219, has an icebreaking feature and is designed for late-season navigation.

When launched in April, 1981, the ship will bring to 14 the number Algoma operates in its lakes and east coast trade division.

World shipbuilding had its worst year in 10 years last year, with staggering reductions in the tonnage completed in Japan, Sweden, West Germany, Spain and France, says Lloyd's Register of Shipping Statistics published this week.

At 18.2 million tons, the total tonnage completed was 9.3 million tons (34 per cent) less than in 1977. The industry had its peak year in 1975 with 35.9 million tons.

Japan headed the shipbuilding table with a total of 6.3 million tons completed, a reduction of 5.4 million tons (46 per cent), or less than one-third of its output three years ago.

Sweden was second although activity was slashed by more than 900,000 tons (39 per cent) compared with the year before to 1.4 million tons — the country's worst performance since 1969.

Moving up from sixth to third, Britain increased its output by 11 per cent (113,000 tons) to 1.13 million tons to continue its irregular pattern. But a spokesman for the state-owned British Shipbuilders warned that the decline which has hit other ship construction countries now has reached Britain.

"There are just no merchant shipping orders," he said.

The U.S. shipyards moved up three places to fourth by producing a record 1.03 million tons (up 20,700 tons, or two per cent), ahead of West Germany, where output was down 750,000 tons (47 per cent) to 844,500 tons — the lowest since 1964.

Record output was reported in China, which for statistical purposes Lloyd's links with Taiwan, at 436,069 tons (up 7.5 per cent or 30,500 tons).

Heavy reductions were in the completion of oil tankers and, contrary to 1977, also in bulk carriers. For oil tankers completions amounted to 4.83 millions tons, less than one-half the tonnage turned out in 1977 while output of bulk carriers fell 42.5 per cent (3.85 million tons) to 5.19 million tons. (General cargo ships, which had shown a sizeable rise the year before, were reduced by five per cent (233,800 tons to 4.47 million tons but the output of container ships increased almost 30 per cent (277,000 tons) to 1.3 million tons.

Countries with the largest additions to their existing merchant fleets were Liberia (2.4 million tons); Britain (1.49 million tons); Japan (1.45 million tons); the Soviet Union (1.21 million tons); the United States (1.1 million tons); and Norway (1.01 million tons).

British car company changes name here

TORONTO (CP) — British Leyland Motors Canada Ltd. will change its name to Jaguar Rover Triumph Canada Inc., effective March 31, the chairman of the group's British parent firm said Friday.

Michael Edwardes, chief executive of British Leyland Ltd., also announced in Los Angeles the United States subsidiary British Leyland Motors Inc. will change its name to Jaguar Rover Triumph Inc.

"MG will continue to play a vital role in our U.S. and Canadian operations despite its not being part of the name," Edwardes said, noting that MG was brought into the Jaguar Rover Triumph organization last fall.

Noranda keeps mine

VANCOUVER (CP) — Noranda Mines Ltd. has changed its mind about selling its copper mine at Granisle, B.C., because the federal Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA) has delayed approval of the proposed transaction.

Noranda had agreed last October to sell the open-pit mine located on Babine Lake in north-central B.C. to Zapata-Granby which operates a similar mine in the Granisle area.

The agreement was subject to FIRA approval. FIRA is the federal agency which screens takeover bids and new investments in Canada by foreign-controlled firms.

When approval was not gained by January, Noranda's Bell Copper Division extended the agreement to Feb. 15. There was a further extension to March 15 but FIRA still had not approved the sale, the company said Friday in a statement.

When the March 15 deadline expired, Noranda decided not to sell the mine.

Alf Powis, chairman and president of Noranda, said in the statement that under the new circumstances the company would give serious consideration to expanding the Bell Copper operations.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts Friday at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 500 head and consisted of a light supply of all classes of feeder cattle and stock calves with a few D3 and D5 slaughter cows. D3 and D5 cows met a moderate local demand at steady prices. There were no slaughter steers of heifers on offer. D3-5 cows traded from $53 to $62. Feeder cattle: light receipts of all classes traded active to a good local demand. Feeder steers and heifers, mostly of good condition, traded mostly steady. Symbol of crisis

Ottawa protest honors 'housewife of the year'

OTTAWA — Margaret Trudeau was honored as housewife of the year on Parliament Hill Friday—by a group of 10 women who threw flowers into the Centennial Flame.

Judith Ramirez, of Toronto spokesman for the Wages for Housewives Committee, told reporters the main aim of the demonstration was to protest government cuts in day care services, mother's allowances payments and funds for women.

She said the estranged wife of Prime Minister Trudeau was selected to be honored by the group for her courage to stand up for women's financial independence and dignity.

"I don't think Margaret Trudeau is a typical housewife," said Ms. Ramirez, who is also director of Toronto's Immigrant Women's Centre.

"But she does symbolize the conflict and the crisis that many women are thrown into when they have to pick between themselves and their children in order to seek some fulfilment."

She would not comment on Mrs. Trudeau's personal life except to say the group would "stand by her in a period when she's being maligned and abused."

Tanker's stern reaches port

HALIFAX (CP) — The stern section of the broken tanker Kurdistan reached its destination in the Strait of Canso at Port Hawkesbury just before midnight local time Friday and was expected to be linked to a salvage barge within the hour.

A DC-3 aircraft from the Canada Centre for Remote Sensing, meanwhile, spotted more accurately an oil stain that threatens the southeastern Cape Breton beaches.

A government spokesman said the stain covered an area about 760 square miles in area.

"The insurance company and the owners of te Kurdistan are going to get one hell of a bill," Mike Turner, a Coast Guard spokesman said Friday night.

Women laws lagging

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde took the provinces to task Friday for doing virtually nothing to better the lot of women.

"No provincial government has yet adopted an overall plan for improving women's status, accompanied by the necessary government machinery to ensure its implementation," Lalonde told an audience of university students.

The minister, whose responsibilities include women's issues, said such areas as health and social services, education, and the implementation of family law fall under provincial jurisdiction. And nine out of every 10 Canadians workers are governed by provincial labor laws.

Lalonde said he had written to all 10 provinces asking them for suggestions for a national policy for women. Not all responded, but the ones which did indicated they'd rather handle the matter themselves.

"All we (Ottawa) can do then is offer our support," he said.

Lalonde, however, refused to specify when long-awaited federal reforms to rape provisions in the Criminal Code would become law.

He said the changes would consider rape as a form of assualt rather than as a moral offence—a fundamental change long demanded by feminists.

Lalonde's audience of 65, almost all women, appeared skeptical of his intentions. In a give-and-take session after his 90-minute speech, one student attacked his talk about women's equality as a mere "electoral gimmick."

Doctors' pullout assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney urged the hierarchy of the federal New Democratic Party Friday to make an election issue of the withdrawal of doctors from government-run medical insurance.

Blakeney told about 50 members of the NDP federal council that doctors were saying: "Go see your doctor, but take your tin cup because you've got to ask for charity."

Socialized medical insurance was pioneered in Saskatchewan during the 1960s by its Canadian Commonwealth Federation premier, T. C. (Tommy) Douglas, who later became federal NDP leader and now is a B.C. MP.

In an emotional address, Blakeney told the party strategists they owed it to Douglas to fight for survival of medical insurance so that all Canadians could afford proper health care.

"We better get out and deliver for Tommy," Blakeney said, referring to the federal election expected to be held within a few months.

Doctors are opting out of the system so they can charge patients fees higher than the government-run insurance plans pay them.

Apply today for your 5 FREE SHARES IN THE BRITISH COLUMBIA RESOURCES INVESTMENT CORPORATION...

You will share in 81% of Canadian Cellulose.

You will share in oil and gas exploration rights in northeastern B.C.

You will share in 10% of Westcoast Transmission.

You will share in 100% of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills.

What do B.C.R.I.C. shares represent?

The B.C. Resources Investment Corporation is the holding company for shares held by the province in a variety of B.C. resource industries and enterprises. B.C.R.I.C. holds 81% of the common shares of Canadian Cellulose, 100% of the common shares of Kootenay Forest Products and Plateau Mills, 10% of the common shares of Westcoast Transmission, plus oil and gas rights in a vast area of northeastern B.C.—investments transferred at a value of over $151 million. B.C.R.I.C. shares represent partial ownership of this whole range of enterprises.

Who qualifies?

Every person who has lived in B.C. for the past year—and who holds or has qualified and applied for Canadian citizenship—is eligible for five free shares in B.C.R.I.C. Those 16 years of age and over should apply for shares on their own behalf. For children under 16, application should be made by the mother or guardian. Infants, born in B.C. on or before June 15, 1979 and resident here since birth, also qualify for free shares. Application, again, should be made by the mother or guardian.

Free shares are also available to those ordinarily resident in B.C. who have been temporarily absent from the province during the 12 months immediately preceding the offer, provided such persons are otherwise eligible.

To apply.

Application forms are available at banks, trust companies, credit unions and investment dealers throughout B.C. When making application, you must present two of the following pieces of identification: a.) driver's licence; b.) Social Insurance card; c.) Medical Plan card. If you are 65 years of age or over, a Pharmacare card is sufficient proof of identity.

Mothers or guardians applying for children under 16 are required to furnish only a medical plan number or a birth certificate for such children. Young people, 16 and over, who have not yet received such identification, may establish their eligibility by presenting their birth certificate or other acceptable identification—in person—at the office of their local Government Agent (or, in the Lower Mainland, at their local Motor Vehicle Branch office).

Those unable to apply in person may delegate a suitable individual to act on their behalf—that person must utilize a Power of Attorney form, available where applications are made.

Applications for free shares will be accepted only until June 15, 1979. Distribution of these shares by B.C.R.I.C. will begin immediately after British Columbia Day, August 6, 1979. The person making application has until September 30, 1979 to pick up the shares.

Additional shares.

If you qualify for free shares, you have the option of purchasing up to 5,000 additional shares at a price substantially below their underlying value. This price will be specified on your application form.

No individual or corporation may own more than 1% of the voting shares of B.C.R.I.C. (although pension funds may own up to 3%). Corporations and pension funds, however, are not allowed to participate in the intial share issue.

Can I sell later?

Yes. Stock market trading in shares is expected to commence shortly after the distribution date. At this point, a "market value" will be established. However, it is hoped that most British Columbians will not only retain, but enlarge, their share holdings. In this way, they will participate directly in the continued expansion of our resource industries, while ensuring that control of these industries remains in B.C.

Other questions?

For further information on the free share offer—or about B.C.R.I.C.—contact: B.C. Government Public Information. In Vancouver, phone 873-3455. In Victoria, phone 387-6121.

In other areas, information is available through your local Government Agent.

APPLY UNTIL JUNE 15 AT BANKS, TRUST COMPANIES, CREDIT UNIONS, INVESTMENT DEALERS THROUGHOUT BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Judge gives two 'last chance'

Two Skid Road habituees were given their last chance in B.C. Supreme Court Friday when they were sentenced to two years less one day in jail for the drunken beating of a fellow inhabitant of an area known as The Jungle which used to exist near the Johnson Street Bridge.

George Alexander Charlie, 25, and Alfred Eugene Johnny, 33, will also serve two years on probation after their jail sentence is completed. Conditions of probation include no consumption of alcohol, report to bail supervisor monthly, no possession of weapons, remain within B.C. and abide by any recommendation of the probation officer for alcohol counselling and rehabilitation.

In addition, Mr. Justice Martin Taylor ordered both men not to have firearms in their possession for 10 years.

Both men pleaded guilty Wednesday to manslaughter of 37-year-old George Preston Gus in the early hours of July 21 at the rear of 1610 Store Street.

Taylor told Charlie and Johnny that he hoped they would be able to learn to live without alcohol and would be able to take advantage of their last chance. He strongly recommended they be imprisoned at the Alouette River Unit which offers alcoholic counselling.

In sentencing them, he said The Jungle existed in the middle of the most beautiful city in B.C. and within sight of the Legislative Building but there was no apparent concern or action by the community and it was only after the manslaughter that the area was demolished.

The daily ritual of the habituees was to consume wine until they passed out.

Charlie and Johnny must bear responsibility for their actions even though they did not intend to kill Gus.

But Taylor said a society which distributed alcohol for profit could hardly treat with contempt the inevitable result of persons whose lives were destroyed by it.

He noted that both men had spent eight months in jail.

Court was told that, two days before the beating, Gus raped a woman with whom Johnny was living and she told Johnny and Charlie the next day.

That day, and through the evening, there was heavy drinking, Gus visited Johnny and kicked him in the head and told him he would try to rape the woman again. Johnny went after Gus and kicked him in the stomach and head, knocking him down.

A little later, Johnny met Charlie and the two of them went back to find Gus lying down and they kicked him and Charlie hit him with a stick.

Their stated objective was to teach Gus a lesson. Gus, who received seven broken ribs and other injuries, had a blood alcohol reading of .29 which Taylor described as very high.

Defence counsel Robert Johnston and Derek Brindle said it was not a premeditated act and both men had expressed remorse that Gus died later from the beating.

Six more pick trial by judge

Six more men accused of conspiracy to import marijuana last summer re-elected trial method in Victoria county court Friday to judge alone rather than judge and jury, bringing the total to eight.

The remaining five men will be tried by judge and jury in county court April 2.

The latest to switch trial method were Robert Sherman Miller, 33, Gordon Barlow Tait, 32, and Frederick MacKintosh Tait, 35, all of North Vancouver, Terrence Gerard Trainor, 28, of Langley, Kevin Gerard Gushue, 26, of Surrey, and Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto.

Earlier, Melville Douglas Balfour, 31, of Lasqueti Island and Lino Colatosti, 36, also known as Allen Valenti, of Qualicum Beach, switched to trial by judge alone. Balfour's trial date was set for Aug. 20 and Colatosti's case was adjourned to June 13 to set the trial date.

The latest six men had their case adjourned also to June 13 to set the trial date.

The five men whose judge and jury trial will start April 2 are Garth Clarence Vincent Sexton, 27, of Vancouver, William Harvey Shears, 30, also known as Ronald Cecil Spurrell, of Surrey, Frederick Charles Scott, 27, of Vancouver, Richard John Andrews, 28, also known as John Mobley Doss, of Dillon, Colorado, formerly of Newfoundland, and Steven Cavanaugh Manning, 34, also known as Frank Piersanti or Michael Cash Redman, of Montreal.

The prosecution again opposed the re-elections saying all 13 men, who are jointly charged, should stand trial together.

But Vancouver lawyer Peter Hart, counsel for three of the six men who re-elected Friday, said the jury trial would be shorter with a reduced number of accused persons and the judge alone trial should not be nearly as long.

Judge Peter Millward said as a result of positions taken by lawyers for the eight men who had switched to trial by judge alone, the public would be saved considerable expense and so would the accused men and he ruled they should have the right to change their previously-selected method of trial.

The men are charged with conspiracy to import 13 tons of marijuana said to be worth $20.8 million seized near Tofino.

Macabre find reopens grave robbery probe

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The discovery of a voodoo-type altar complete with scorched animal remains, religious symbols and a human skull prompted officials Thursday to reopen an investigation of grave robbings.

"It's a religion," police Sgt. Ben Lombardi said of the macabre discovery, "but with the skull, that makes it different. We want to know whose it is, where it came from and what it's doing here."

Officials said the altar, set in a chicken yard strewn with animal carcasses, was found this week by humane society officers responding to an anonymous call.

The human skull had been placed atop the scorched head of a goat and the head of a freshly killed chicken was atop the skull. The body of the chicken was laid on a plywood sheet decorated with chalked religious symbols.

Several swords, knives, machetes and a deer head with antlers were found nearby. Candles were burning in front of the altar and small plastic skeletons were scattered about the area.

Officials said they believed the site might have been used in the practice of Santeria, an Afro-Cuban religion akin to voodoo that is sometimes called Cuban white magic.

Allen Foust, owner of the property, said the lot was rented by a man who was several months behind in the rent.

"I told him I would take a bulldozer to it unless he (paid)," said Foust. "Then (Tuesday) night, I found this on my front porch."

He displayed a decapitated chicken, halved coconut, cloth and some pennies.

Dr. Charles Wetli of the Dade County medical examiner's office said the skull appeared to be consistent with that of a black man, probably in his 40s. "But we really won't know until we get a good look at it," he said.

Police officers said they would reopen their investigations into a series of grave robberies in Dade County a few months ago.

"The graves would be opened and bones were taken," said Wetli. "The bones would show up again smeared with chicken blood."

Albania drives to renew West German ties

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Albania, seeking economic partners since its break with China last year, has launched a new initiative aimed at resuming diplomatic relations with West Germany, West German sources said this week.

The initiative came from Socrate Plaka, the Albanian ambassador in Belgrade, during a meeting at his request with Jesto von Puttkamer, the West German ambassador to Yugoslavia, last month, the sources said.

Plaka proposed that the two countries open talks to discuss establishment of bilateral diplomatic and other relations, they added.

The Albanian ambassador did not mention directly his country's earlier claim on West Germany for Second World War reparations which indicated that Tirana now has a more flexible approach to the question, diplomats said. But Plaka made it clear that Albania expects compensation of some sort from West Germany.

Diplomats said Tirana's new initiative reflected Albania's search for foreign economic partners in the light of economic difficultues at home since its 17 years of close ties with China were broken last July because of ideological differences.

WINDYHAUGH MANOR

Built in 1906, Windyhaugh was a grand country home and the scene of many social activities. It was built high on the Queen Anne Slope to command a view of Rockland, the city and the sea. Much of the grace and the charm of the Edwardian Architecture has been preserved so that as an owner you can enjoy the best of our architectural heritage, yet have all of the modern conveniences of today. The tranquil ¾ acre garden offers total seclusion and abounds with quail and other wildlife.

The remaining suite is called "The Loft" as it is situated high on the western side and rises to a third storey loft with a stunning city and sea view. It is 1258 sq. ft. in all featuring vaulted ceilings, cedar walls, antique oak balustrades and a custom black and cedar kitchen.

There will only be one Windyhaugh and for $69,900 you could be one of the privileged owners. Put a visit to Windyhaugh on your agenda this weekend. It's open Sat. and Sun. 2-4 p.m.

Freedom—after 26 years in China prison

Roman Ebbel, 65, and his mother Mrs. Lydia Sokoloff pose for photographers at San Francisco International Airport this week. Ebbel had been in prison in China for 26 years and was finally released on humanitarian grounds. Ebbel hadn't seen his mother in more than 40 years.

Nuclear-peril tape hushes courtroom

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Karen Silkwood's angry, insistent, pleading voice filled a hushed courtroom Friday as jurors heard a tape recording of a union meeting at which she demanded something be done about the dangers of radioactive plutonium.

"If there is something going on, if we are going to be susceptible to cancer and we're not going to know about it for years, something's got to be done," she said at a meeting Oct. 10, 1974, a month before her death in an automobile accident.

The tape was played in the $11.5 million suit filed by Ms. Silkwood's family against the Kerr-McGee Nuclear plant where she worked. The family contends the company failed to protect Ms. Silkwood from plutonium radiation that contaminated her.

As the recording was played, the jurors turned pages of a typed transcripts and the judge sat in the witness chair to hear better.

In the meeting, the cancer-causing properties of plutonium were discussed and workers at the nuclear fuel-processing facility detailed some spills and leaks that contaminated workers. They argued about whether the union was active enough at the plant.

At one point on the tape, Ms. Silkwood could be heard saying working conditions were dangerous because the nuclear plant was under pressure to produce plutonium fuel rods for a nuclear reactor.

Priest gives out bills —gets triple return

WESTERLY, R.I. (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who distributed $2,000 in $5 bills among his parishioners to illustrate a parable has received triple returns on his investment.

He received $7,000 back.

Rev. Norman Guilmette of the Church of the Immaculate Conception said he passed out $5 bills at Sunday Mass last November because he wanted to illustrate St. Matthew's Parable of the Silver Pieces.

The story is about a landowner who gives a large sum of money to each of three servants. Two of the servants doubled their money by investing it. A third servant buried his and earned nothing but the landowner's wrath.

Fate of freedom bill rests on parliament

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist reporter

The fate of a federal freedom of information bill depends on how long the present Parliament sits, State Secretary John Roberts said in Victoria Friday.

A bill ensuring public access to government documents has been drafted, and if Parliament does not dissolve for an election for a few weeks it will be brought to the floor of the House of Commons, Roberts told a conference on Freedom of Information legislation at the University of Victoria.

The bill will put the onus on government to prove why information should not be released, and an information commissioner with considerable powers will be named to rule on applications for information which have been rejected by government officials, Roberts said.

Ministers will publish annually a list of documents and information within their jurisdictions, but documents which "could be injurious to international relations, national defence, national security or federal-provincial relations" will be exempted from disclosure.

Also exempted will be cabinet documents, information about law enforcement procedures, personal information as defined in the Human Rights Act, information which would threaten the safety of an individual, and policy advice to government departments, among other things.

The exemptions are worded to give a "bias" toward release, Roberts said, by use of words such as "could be reasonably concluded to be detrimental to . . ." a policy, government function or person, rather than the more ambiguous "might be detrimental . . ." used in the early drafts of the bill.

"The onus is on the minister to give access unless there is a compelling reason not to," Roberts said. A minister could release information on the list of exemptions if he felt it was in the public interest to do so, he added.

The information commissioner would report to Parliament and would have the powers of a federal judge, being capable of issuing subpoenas for information, and of making orders with the force of court orders.

The commissioner would have access to all documents except those which could be injurious to international relations, national defence, national security, or federal-provincial relations.

In general, the decision of the information commissioner would be final, although appeals could be made to the Federal Court of Canada in certain narrowly-defined circumstances, Roberts said.

For the most part, however, the information commissioner would not be involved in requests for information. At least 95 per cent of all inquiries will probably be handled by the information access officers in each department, Roberts said.

The bill is in agreement in many areas with the recommendations of a report from the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments co-chaired by MP Jed Baldwin, the Progressive Conservative spokesman on freedom of information, Roberts said.

Its exemptions appear to be wider than those proposed by the Canadian Bar Association, and give to the information commissioner powers which the bar association recommended, in its own model bill released Thursday, be given to the courts.

Roberts criticized the bar association for waiting until the conference to release its model bill, and said the government had moved faster than the bar association in preparing a bill.

"Had the government waited for the Canadian Bar Association to release its draft bill before preparing its own, the legislation would still be years away."

Information laws 'hamper police'

Freedom of Information legislation in the United States has forced law enforcement there to "grind to a halt," Vancouver regional crown counsel Allan Filmer told a conference on such legislation at the University of Victoria Friday.

The forced release of sensitive information regarding investigations, informants, and other aspects of police work had severely hampered the work of the Federal Bureau of Information in particular, Filmer said.

"Someone involved in a criminal enterprise can determine if his activities are being monitored, and the monitoring techniques used," Filmer said.

In some cases state police authorities have refused to share information with the FBI, because of the possibility that the information could be obtained from the FBI through the federal freedom of information law.

Requests for information could be used to delay court proceedings, and the time and cost involved in obtaining information could add even further to overburdened courts, Filmer added.

But Peter Grant, chairman of the Canadian Bar Association freedom of information committee, drafters of a model bill which is the main working document of the conference, said "fishing" for information was not likely to occur because the bill required someone requesting information to be able to describe the document in question quite specifically.

The model bill exempts law enforcement documents whose release could interfere with enforcement or investigation, disclose techniques used in enforcement, identify confidential sources of information, or deprive a person of the right to a fair trial.

The bill gives blanket exemption to cabinet documents, but this might not be wise, Grant admitted. He suggested that a court might be given the right to request even cabinet documents and records if such information was crucial to the rights of a defendant in a court case.

Kirk Patterson, a Vancouver lawyer attending the conference, criticized the absence of any reference in the bill to information held by corporations which in some cases might be more important to the public.

"This reinforces the misconception that the primary conflict is between the individual and the state."

Patterson said lawyers themselves had a vested interest in information, and should debate the bill among themselves.

The bill makes no mention of information that might not be compiled in a single document, he noted. Information which is in several departments or files might be important and useful to the public if there was a way to get it compiled.

Exempting all cabinet documents is far too conservative, he suggested. A freedom of information bill should deal with situations such as a blanket rule against even discussion of a uranium price-fixing cartel in which Canada may have participated, he said.

Cabinet papers for probe

The decision to give the McDonald commission access to cabinet documents sets a major precedent for freedom of information, a Toronto lawyer said in Victoria Friday.

Peter Grant, chairman of the Canadian Bar Association committee which drew up a model freedom of information bill, said the decision marked the first time that cabinet documents had ever officially been made available in this way.

"A few documents are sent to the Dominion Archivist, and are released after 35 years, but in practical terms this is the first time cabinet documents have been made public."

It is not a first for the Commonwealth, Grant said. Last November an Australian court ordered the release of cabinet documents which had a bearing on a trial.

The federal government's decision goes beyond what the CBA has asked in its model freedom of information bill, which exempts the minutes of cabinet meetings and a number of other cabinet documents from disclosure.

Grant was in Victoria to attend a conference on freedom of information co-sponsored by the bar association and the University of Victoria. The Association's model bill was unveiled at a press conference here Thursday.

The cabinet order applies to documents from the time took office in April, 1968, to Prime Minister Trudeau the time the commission was appointed, July, 1977.

Under the order-in-council tabled in the Commons by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, the commission must ask Cabinet Secretary Michael Pitfield to declassify any document it wishes to make public.

The order-in-council specifies that former prime minister John Diefenbaker's written permission must be in the hands of Pitfield before any documents fron the 1957-63 period, when Diefenbaker was prime minister, may be released to the commission.

Guard shot dead as holdup began

MONTREAL (CP) — An armed security guard at an east-end credit union "never had a chance" when a young thief pulled out a gun and shot him during a holdup Friday, police said.

Henri Gagnon, 56, had been a guard at the Caisse Populaire St. Eugene de Rosemont for 14 years. His death marked the 17th slaying this year in the Montreal Urban Community.

Gagnon, a father of four, was talking to an elderly customer when three men, aged 20 to 25, entered the credit union about 1 p.m. EST.

"While one talked to a cashier, another pulled a gun and shot Gagnon in the left eye," police spokesman Normand Couillard said.

"There was no advance warning of a holdup until the shot was fired. Then the bandits shouted, 'This is a holdup, everyone lie on the floor.' "

Marvin's drinking 'often embarrassed' Michelle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The daughter of the late comedian Eddie Cantor testified Friday that actor Lee Marvin once came to dinner at her house drunk and, on his way out, fell down and cut his head on the pavement.

Edna McHugh, who said she socialized frequently with Marvin and his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, said the actor frequently embarrassed Miss Marvin with his drunken behavior.

"There was one instance when he had quite a bit to drink and when he left my house he fell down and cut his head, and we had to take him to the emergency hospital," Mrs. McHugh testified.

She said the incident occurred after the actor and Miss Marvin had come to dinner, with the actor apparently intoxicated when he arrived.

"Michelle asked him if he hadn't had enough to drink," she said of an incident later in the evening, "and he had the drink in his mouth and he spit it out on the floor, on the carpet."

She said it was not the first time Marvin had misbehaved at parties at her home.

"I think that he lost control on several occasions when he was rude to people he didn't know," she said. "I think he wouldn't have done that if he was sober."

U.S. TV TO DECODE FOR DEAF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health Secretary Joseph Califano announced Friday that two television networks had joined with the Public Broadcasting Service in an attempt to open television programs to the millions of persons in the United States who are totally or partially deaf.

The system, called "closed captioning," will be put into operation early next year by PBS, ABC and NBC.

Those who are deaf or have lesser degrees of impaired hearing can use decoders to receive a caption signal and print it on the screen, similar to a movie subtitle. Nothing will be visible if the set has no decoder or if the decoder is turned off.

The decoders will be marketed by Sears, Roebuck and Co., which has pledged to sell them at the lowest possible cost, estimated at about $225 to $250. Adapters also could be built into new sets and Sears estimated that the additional cost on a 19-inch color set would be about $75 to $100.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

I was speculating in this column yesterday on how the bulb growers in the Netherlands managed to bring their land back into production so quickly after it had been inundated with sea water during the war.

It must have been quite a tough job getting rid of the salt in the soil — I imagine it was probably done through the application of massive doses of gypsum.

Salt isn't always harmful to all plant growth, however. While it makes a pretty good vegetation killer for clearing grass and weeds out of a gravel driveway, there are a few garden plants whose natural habitat is close to the sea, and these actually put on a more sturdy and vigorous growth when a tiny trace of salt is added to their diet.

Some of these maritime plants are pinks, statice, silene, spinach, seakale, asparagus and beets.

Beets in particular respond in a spectacular fashion to salt, and the best way to give this vegetable its ration of salt is to use sea water.

The salts in the ocean are much more varied and complex than the refined table salt; all the various minerals and trace elements which are leached out of our soil by our winter rains must eventually wind up in the ocean.

The easy way, then, to replace all these infinitesimal but highly essential traces of boron, magnesium, iron, cobalt, manganese and other minerals is simply to water your beet rows with a weak mixture of sea and tap water. One quart of sea water in a gallon of fresh would be about right, giving a ratio of one in five.

For those gardeners who live inland, or who find it inconvenient to carry home supplies of sea water, a reasonably good substitute can be made up from common chemicals and household supplies as follows:

To each six-quart watering can of fresh tap water, add one teaspoon table salt, one tablespoonful Epsom salts, half a teaspoonful borax, half a teaspoon iodine and a quarter teaspoon permanganate of potash.

Apply once every two weeks to the beet rows, giving one gallon of the solution to every five feet of row.

An even easier way to create a maritime environment for your beets is to use one of the proprietory liquid fertilizers which has had its origin in the sea, made from seaweed, fish or whales.

I am often asked what is meant by the term "standard" rose. A standard is a rose grown in the form of a small tree rather than as a bush, with a "trunk" or stem four or five feet tall and a branching, umbrella-shaped head.

The roots and trunk of a standard rose are those or a "wild" rose, while the flowering head is of any of the desirable rose varieties grafted or budded to the wild trunk. When the head is budded with a climbing rose variety, the flowering trains dangle, making a weeping standard rose.

Roses aren't the only shrubs which can be converted into standard "trees." A standard broom is a lovely thing, with the head of one of the better varieties grafted on to the trunk of common laburnum.

Cotoneasters can be bought in standard form, and a weeping standard Forsythia is a most graceful plant, with flowering trails almost as long as a weeping willow.

I think about the prettiest lawn specimen I ever saw was a standard Wisteria, making a small "tree" about six feet tall and with a weeping flowering head about four feet across.

These are horribly expensive — one U.S. nursery catalogue asks $60 for a matched pair — for it takes from four to six years of careful training and pruning before a tree-form Wisteria is ready to sell.

Jack Smith

Ever since the women's liberation movement first made contact with my consciousness, my wife and I have lived harmoniously according to a new and enlightened division of domestic chores; so I am surprised to find out that this arrangement has not been perfect in every particular.

I have only just learned that she is not entirely satisfied that it should be her responsibility to write thank-you notes after we have been pleasantly entertained at someone's home, as well as the other kinds of written communications that occasionally are required, even in this day of the telephone.

I had noticed, certainly, that she often fell behind in her correspondence, sometimes months behind; but I ascribed this to her habit of putting things off, not to any frivolous notion that writing thank-you notes was my job, not hers.

What brought it out was my comment here the other day on one of the questions asked by Anne Wittels in her little book I Wonder: A Satirical Study of Sexist Semantics. Ms. Wittels, it may be remembered, wrote as follows: "They both have parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins, etc. How come she's the one who sends all the thank-you letters and birthday cards?"

To which I countered as follows: "Well, if they both have a fireplace, how come he's the one who chops the wood?" I thought it was an answer that deserved nothing less, even from Ms. Wittels, than a sincere "Touche." My surprise may be imagined, then, when my wife said, "Well, why should the wife have to write the thank-you letters?"

The question implied such heresy that I hardly knew how to answer it. One might as well ask why the wife should have to bear the children. I can think of no other domestic necessity that more clearly belongs in the wife's list of responsibilities, if indeed it can be thought of as a responsibility at all. I myself think of writing thank-you notes as more of a special treat.

It is a tradition that I can hardly imagine a woman wishing to challenge. The irony of it is that writing thank-you notes was a privilege gained by women in one of their earlier liberation movements. Until the beginning of the last century the art of writing social notes was almost exclusively practiced by men. In the world of Samuel Johnson, James Boswell and Sydney Smith, for example, the intellectual community of London was held together by the terse and graceful messages that were passed promptly between such gentlemen by the more efficient postal service of that day.

If women wrote notes at all it was more likely to be in the service of infidelity or intrigue. The romantic fiction of that period is amply furnished with such missives, and the plot often turns on their untimely discovery. Such indiscretions were available only to the women of the upper classes, however, their common sisters being unschooled in the literary graces.

Thus in the 19th century when young women who had taken lessons in reading and writing became house wives or spinsters, there being no other respectable vocations, they felt a need to exercise these precious skills. They were of course not encouraged to write poetry or novels, despite the success of an occasional Elizabeth Barrett or George Eliot, so most women turned their creative talents and literary skills to the composition of thank-you letters. I imagine that, if the tens of thousands of thank-you letters that must have been written by English ladies in the 19th century could be retrieved from trunks and attics and published, with judicious editing, they would constitute a treasure of detail, insight and comment on the manners, morals and personalities of one of history's most vigorous and successful nations at the moment of its greatest glory.

That women of today should surrender this hard-won field to their mates is the kind of folly that the women's movement promotes with its excesses and its peculiar notion that husbands and wives should share every kind of domestic responsibility.

The fact is that if women did not write thank-you notes they would never get written, because most husbands cannot write the most elementary letter. Once they have turned in their final college essay, under duress, they sink into semi-illiteracy, which serves them well enough in most of the enterprises their wives are so eager to get into.

If husbands wrote the thank-you letters they would read something like this:

"Dear Fred: Hey, great party, man. Thanks a bunch. Like I say, you can't beat the grub and the hooch at the Whipples. Hey, where have you been hiding that niece of yours? Wow-EE! Oh, Kathleen says hello. Thanks to the Mrs. Yours, BILL."

If women stop writing thank-you notes, as I have told my wife over and over, polite society will tear apart like an old paper antimacassar, and civilization will not last long after that.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — One of the most famous maitre d's in cafe history is now working in Palm Springs at the Racquet Club.

Arturo has worked in such places as the Pump Room of the Ambassador East in Chicago, the Copacabana in New York, the Fountaine blau in Miami Beach, the Riviera and El Rancho Vegas in Las Vegas, to name but a few.

The reason Arturo had so many jobs was because he always went wherever his pal, Joe E. Lewis, would open.

The great saloon comic in his later years worked as hanging Tree, Montana, and Shamokin, Pa. So did Arturo.

No matter where Arturo might be working at the time, he would always quit and show up to make sure Joe E's pals were seated right.

Now that Joe E. is no longer with us, Arturo is settled down in the good life at Palm Springs.

When Frank Sinatra did Lewis' life story in The Joker Is Wild, Arturo played himself in the movie. "It was Joe E.'s concert," says Frank.

Went over to the Huntington Hartford the other night to catch Henry Fonda and Eva Marie Saint in First Monday in October.

The house was filled with working actors taking notes on Fonda. Watching Hank work on-stage is like graduating from the Actors Studio.

Also gave me chance to know how Anthony Hopkins, that great Welsh actor, spends his day.

Just before I bumped into him at the theater, some non-pros told me they had seen him earlier over at the Huntington Museum in Pasadena, admiring Gainsborough's Blue Boy.

Also chatted with actress Trudy Marshall and her beautiful daughter Judy. Trudy is the mother and Judy the sister of Deborah Raffin, who will soon star as Brooke Hayward in Haywire.

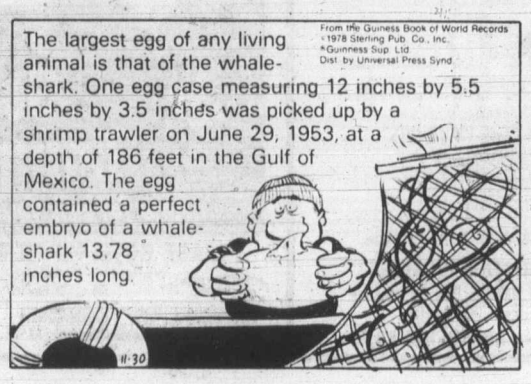
Wonder how the movies ever missed Judy?



The largest egg of any living animal is that of the whale-shark. One egg case measuring 12 inches by 5.5 inches by 3.5 inches was picked up by a shrimp trawler on June 29, 1953, at a depth of 186 feet in the Gulf of Mexico. The egg contained a perfect embryo of a whale-shark 13.78 inches long.

The longest animal ever recorded is the ribbon worm, also known as the "boot-lace worm," which is found in the shallow coastal waters of the North Sea. In 1864 a specimen measuring more than 180 feet was washed ashore at St. Andrews, Fifeshire, Scotland, after a storm.

Provincial Court

A 24-year-old Victoria man was jailed for 14 days for making false statements in connection with claims for unemployment insurance benefits in 1977.

Judge Fred Green handed out concurrent 14-day sentences after Randy Smith, of 2579 Prior, pleaded guilty to eight counts in connection with UIC claims in Victoria and Kelowna.

In addition, Green imposed a further five days after Smith pleaded guilty to failing to appear in court previously on the charges.

Crown counsel Harold Turnham told the court Smith began making claims for UIC benefits Feb. 8, 1977, and continued to receive benefits after he began working on Feb. 23 of the same year. Smith also made claims in Kelowna on July 4 and continued his claims even after beginning work for the city of Kelowna at the recreation centre on July 20.

Turnham said Smith told investigating UIC officers that he had seen others get away with the practice.

The total amount of benefits received by Smith to which he wasn't entitled, Turnham said, was $1,146.

Defence counsel Brian MacKenzie said the windfall was too much of a temptation for Smith to resist.

Before passing sentence, Green said it was a reprehensible act and one which was not to be condoned.

A 22-year-old Victoria man who punched a man he suspected of socializing with his wife was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation.

Dennis Allan Starck, of 1226 Rudlin, pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm Jan. 21.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Starck went to 3237 Cedar Hill, knocked on the door, opened it without anyone answering and then punched John Ring, who had just come down some stairs. The victim barricaded himself in the bathroom but Starck tried to kick down the door before Saanich police arrived, Mulligan said. Ring told police Starck said "Leave my wife alone" before striking the blow.

Green also prohibited Starck from having any contact with the victim during the probation period.

Darrell Felt, of 948 Esquimalt Road, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage.

Mulligan said Felt and some companions were walking along Broughton Street about 2:30 a.m. when Bradley Cambrey, a driver for Empress Taxi, noticed one of Felt's companions breaking a sign and stopped his vehicle.

Felt walked over to Cambrey, Mulligan stated, and told him to "Get lost." Felt then went to the vehicle, bent a door-lock button and kicked at the trunk, causing a total of $80.65 damage.

A 26-year-old driver who pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and driving while suspended received a total of 35 days in jail.

Jay Anthony Gold, of 53 Knollwood, was given 30 days for the first charge and an additional five days for the second.

Court was informed Gold was involved in an accident March 1 on Esquimalt Road which resulted in a total of $2,200 damages. Mulligan said Gold was convicted of impaired driving Jan. 23, 1979, and was fined $400 as well as suspended from driving at that time.

A 33-year-old man received a fine, community service work and a jail term after pleading guilty to hit and run and impaired driving.

Kenneth Gordon Leveridge, of RR6, Barker Road, was fined $75 and ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work for the hit and run and was sentenced to five days in jail for the impaired driving.

Mulligan said the incident occurred Feb. 27 after off-duty police officers noticed Leveridge in an intoxicated condition at the Colwood Inn at 12:40 a.m. The officers phoned Colwood RCMP but before officers arrived, Leveridge got into his van and drove into a parked car.

Two civilians tried to stop Leveridge at that point, Mulligan said, but failed when Leveridge put his vehicle in reverse and drove off.

The off-duty officers began a pursuit of Leveridge, stopping him in the 400-block of the Old Island Highway. However, Leveridge again put his van in reverse, causing minor damage to the officers' vehicle, and took off once more.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: David Corin Buckley, 33, of 305 Niagara, $450; Glenn Cecil Danbrook, 46, of 1728 Cedar Hill Cross Road, $350; Velma May Payne, also known as Velma May Cleveland, 41, of 3330 Metchosin, $250; and John Lawrence Baines, 19, of 2720 Richmond, $250.

In addition, Baines was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Socred presses ICBC changes

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

Social Credit backbencher George Kerster (Coquitlam) Friday urged Premier Bennett to press for even more changes in Insurance Corp. of B.C. procedures than those promised in the throne speech.

Kerster, seconding the motion to adopt the throne speech, said he was pleased an end to premium rate discrimination by virtue of age and sex was being promissed.

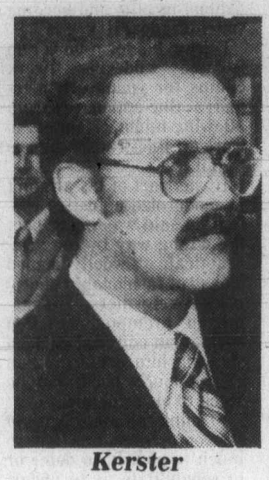
"But this thrust should be taken further," he said. "Adjustment of ICBC policy should be effected so as to place the onus or benefits of our insurance program on the individual driver and move it from the automobile where it presently rests. Only in this manner will individual drivers actually receive the benefits of these improved insurance corporation policies."

Premier Bennett has stated that he is in favor of insurance policies and benefits staying with a driver rather than the vehicle.

Pat Jordan (SC-North Okanagan) moved adoption of the speech saying she expected it to go on the record "as a historic document."

"There are many things in the throne speech which promise people equality and justice and fair treatment," she said. "We believe in people and that people are first-class citizens with first-rate ideas, entitled to freedom of opportunity and entitled to individual ownership."

Mrs. Jordan taunted the New Democratic Party with not being able to make up its mind on the matter of ownership of B.C. Resources Investment Corp. shares. The government is offering five free shares to every citizen and is placing up to 12 million shares on sale at a reduced book value of $6.



Kerster
. . . 'take thrust further'

"In one breath they tell their NDP membership to take their shares and hand them over to the party, in the next breath they say the shares are gimmicks," she said.

Mrs Jordan also took a potshot at Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) for saying in Vernon that while he was critical of the share distribution he would accept the five free shares and probably purchase 95 others.

"He wants to own 100 shares just, so he said, so that he can go to the annual meetings to ask embarrassing questions," Mrs. Jordan said. "It is not difficult to imagine that member's statements being an embarrassment at any time."

Kerster touched on the past record of the government, noting that in 1973 "man-days lost in this province through either strike or lockout accounted for all 11 per cent of all man-days lost in Canada. In 1975 we accounted for 29 per cent, in 1976 it had dropped back to 13 per cent, in 1977 four per cent and last year was only six per cent."

Both Kerster and Mrs. Jordan chipped away at the NDP record during its 1972-75 term in office, saying "that the party's only answer to any problem is to have the government take over."

Kerster said government should "be just big enough to deliver optimum services but it should never be so big as to be able to deny them."

Mrs. Jordan said it was part of her party's philosophy "that the state is the servant of the people—and we trust our people."

Kerster said our democratic society had been built on the belief that every person had the right to grow, advance and succeed. "This individual excellence, which is the heritage of generations of British Columbians, so our most cherished possession," Kerster said.

"We cannot allow those who find it convenient to be negative to dimimish that proud history. Unlike socialist governments which seek more power through more government and as a result restrict more individual rights, our government protects and expands those precious rights while striving for smaller and more efficient government."

The throne speech is traditionally moved and seconded by government backbenchers.

BUDGET APRIL 2

Canadian Press

The government will present its budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year to the legislature April 2, Premier Bennett said Friday.

Dentist fights proposal

Canadian Press

A Duncan dentist has launched a campaign against the B.C. government's proposed universal dental care program.

Dr. Adrian Van Hoek said Friday he was opposed to a government-sponsored and operated dental plan because the government would be trying to obtain his services by force of law.

"Such involuntary service is the essence of slavery," he said in a telephone interview.

"When the professionals of Canada do not understand why our society is crumbling, what hope does the ordinary person have of ever making sense of today's life?"

The dental care program was announced by the government Thursday at the opening of the current session of the legislature. No details have been provided.

Van Hoek said his conscience would not allow him to treat patients who are financed by the state.

Bennett seeks port cash

PRINCE GEORGE(CP) —Premier Bennett will try to tempt more Prairie business through the port at Prince Rupert when he meets here next week with colleagues at the annual Western premiers' conference.

Grain handling and transportation, vital to the economy of the four Western provinces, are high on the agenda at the two-day conference Monday and Tuesday. Bennett is to take Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney and Manitoba's Sterling Lyon on a tour of the port Wednesday.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed will not make the tour but he has already committed his province to spend $100 million from its Heritage Savings Trust Fund to help finance an overhaul and expansion of the northwest B.C. port.

Federal and provincial officials concluded at a grain handling conference earlier this year that fast expansion of the port's facilities was needed to speed grain shipments to the burgeoning Asian market.

They proposed a $75 million to $100 million expenditure for a new grain terminal, $100 million for a Canadian wheat board storage facility and another $28 million in renovations to the existing terminal and for site preparation.

The premiers plan to touch on a wide variety of subjects at the meeting—including the economy, research in the West, a regional electric grid and federal intrusions in provincial affairs—but Blakeney said earlier this week that there were unlikely to be any major announcements or startling decisions.

At last year's premier's conference in Yorkton, Sask., Bennett said much of the surplus power produced by provincially-owned B.C. Hydro could be kept to serve needs in Western Canada.

Bennett considers the talks valuable because they help consolidate and co-ordinate provincial positions for talks with the federal government.

Illinois braced for flooding

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Residents of inundated communities along the swollen Illinois River filled sandbags and stood in boats to board up their windows in anticipation of the area's worst flooding in history. Hundreds of residents have fled to higher ground. Some businesses are closed, streets are covered with water and damage already is estimated in the millions of dollars.

Fryer fried by all sides

Government and Opposition leaders joined forces Friday to condemn actions by B.C. Government Employees Union Leader John Fryer.

Fryer had involved himself in the labor-management dispute at Simon Fraser University by urging students to take part in a demonstration which led to 18 arrests.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said Fryer's actions showed "extremely bad judgment from a labor leader in this province who, I'm sure, would be the first to object if anyone were to interfere with any of his industrial relations problems."

NDP leader David Barrett, during the taping of the TV show Capital Comment for viewing this weekend, said he thought Fryer's statements "foolish." But he added quickly "foolish actions are not confined to trade union leaders."

Meantime, Williams said he had no intention of invoking the Essential Services Act to end the dispute at the university.

The strike, a dispute over a new contract, is ending its second week although there has been a series of rotating strikes since last December when negotiations broke down. The dispute escalated earlier this month when the university locked out 100 library employees.

The expanded Essential Services Act includes colleges and universities but Williams says he has no intention of asking the cabinet to implement the act at this time.

'Sorry, joker, I thought you were a corpse'

—CP

FORMER ALBERTA Solicitor-General Roy Farran puffs ever-present pipe as he rides on moped in this file photo. Farran retired from provincial cabinet Friday, at 58. He didn't run for re-election March 14, but says he still has some tread wear left in him.

EDMONTON (CP)— The Germans were shooting Roy Farran's tank to pieces and had taken a few chunks out of him so he crawled out to take cover behind a low stone wall.

"There I lay in the infernal din, praying for the New Zealanders to arrive," he wrote in Winged Dagger, one of his two war memoirs.

"One came and put a foot on me as he took aim from behind the wall. I protested; he apologized: "Sorry, joker, I thought you was a corpse."

It wasn't to be the last time someone would be surprised to see him alive.

Farran, 58, retired Friday from his post as Alberta solicitor-general. Eighteen years in city and provincial politics was enough, he said in an interview.

He has been the centre of controversy for his views on crime and punishment, but the eight years he served in the provincial legislature pale beside the rest of his life story.

Born in India in 1921, he followed the family tradition and went to Royal Military College at Sandhurst, England. Commissioned early at age 18, he joined a regular army regiment at the outset of the Second World War, went on to the Special Air Service and followed his war service with a stint with the anti-terrorist squad of the British Palestinian police.

He later tried his hand at journalism in Britain and in Calgary, finally becoming embroiled in Calgary city politics and serving as an alderman for 10 years. He said he still missed the rough-and-tumble of city politics.

Farran was driving the car which skidded and overturned, killing British hero Gen. Jock Campbell, when Campbell was forcing the Germans out of North Africa.

He defied countless orders, trusting his success would outweigh his breach of discipline.

As a paratrooper and British agent, he led behind-the-lines raids to blow up bridges and, once, attack a German army headquarters with a special 300-man force of Russians, British paratroopers and Italian partisans.

The man in charge of Alberta prisons for the last four years, he escaped from the Nazis in Greece and twice from his own people in Palestine. He was awaiting trial in a Palestinian jail in 1948 for the alleged killing of young Jewish terrorist Alexander Rubovitz.

"Nobody to this day has ever proved anybody was shot," Ferran said about the old charge. "No body was ever found."

Randolph Churchill, Sir Winston's son, led a public drive to raise funds for a top British lawyer to replace the one chosen for him by the British protectorate. Farran still maintains officials of the protectorate were ready to sacrifice him and had assigned a lawyer from the Jewish terrorist group led by current Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Farran paid the defence money back and the Jewish terrorists paid him back. They sent him a bomb at his mother's home in England. It killed his brother Rex.

"I regard my brother's death as a war casualty," Farran said. "They were in their war of independence and we were the losers."

He walked away from a London plane crash without a scratch, and an Alberta car-train collision in which his father-in-law's car crumpled "like a piece of paper."

In Africa, he met Ruth Arden, a niece of Calgary oil millionaire Eric Harvie. The two married and came to Alberta, where Farran alternated sessions as a reporter at the Calgary Herald with stints as a dairy farmer before setting up a local publication called the North Hill News. The small newspaper, started in 1954, grew into a 40-paper chain which he sold in 1973, and led to his involvement in Calgary politics.

He was elected to the legislature on his second attempt in 1971, joined the cabinet in 1973, and became solicitor-general in 1975.

During his term he set up isolated wilderness work camps for young offenders and a fine-option program allowing minor offenders to work off fines rather than go to jail.

It was part of his attempt to modernize a justice system he said was being bent the wrong way by the "impractical, woolly-headed ideas" of fashionably liberal justice reformers. His approach prompted reaction such as an editorial cartoon showing him dressed in an executioner's hood, but he stuck to his principles.

"I think the main point in law enforcement is not so much to punish, to deter or to rehabilitate as to underline what the rules are in society," he said.

It wasn't the last time someone would be surprised to see him alive

Inmates stage polite yard protest

About 60 inmates at the Wilkinson Road remand jail staged a short sit-down strike Friday afternoon to air complaints.

The incident began at about 3:30 p.m. when the prisoners refused to return to the cells after their afternoon yard exercise time.

Acting director Harry Bacon was summoned and talked with spokesmen for the inmates for about half an hour.

Director David Schulz is on holidays in Hawaii, a guard said.

Bacon said the discussion was cordial, the inmates were well behaved and had "quite good" attitudes.

He said the main complaint was over the fact there was only one telephone which the prison population could use. Other matters brought up for discussion included personal effects of prisoners who have court appearances. Bacon said some of the inmates wanted their effects with them in case they were sentenced and sent to another institution the day of their court appearance. Also brought up for discussion were clothing for inmates and more yard time.

Bacon said that most of the things the inmates asked for were already being rectified, including the access to more phones.

The prison population at the time of the incident was more than 90, Bacon said.

Towing reprieve for bylaw review

Towing companies have won a temporary reprieve from Victoria city council.

A number of proposed bylaw changes that would place restrictions on the operations of towing firms were sent back to the legal committee after a brief debate Thursday.

Ald. William McElroy, who initiated the bylaw changes, told council it was time to put towing companies in their place.

There had been too many complaints from people who had their cars towed away although they were legally parked, he said.

But the majority of his colleagues felt that the proposed changes would work too much in favor of motorists. If approved as presented, the amendments might result in "complete chaos," Mayor Michael Young said.

He was specifically referring to a proposed change in the bylaw that would prohibit the removal of vehicles from parking lots that don't have tickets spitters with timing devices.

There have been numerous complaints from car owners who had their vehicles towed away illegally. The problem is that tow truck drivers estimate the time a vehicle has been parked at a particular lot by the number of the ticket displayed on the dashboard, a method which is extremely unreliable, McElroy said.

But the mayor pointed out that by taking away the towing privilege from parking lot operators, the city would give a licence to motorists to park as long as they please without paying a dime.

The matter was referred back to committee for further consideration.

Appeal aiming high

Victoria's United Appeal campaign will aim for over the million dollar mark for the first time when the campaign opens this fall.

Campaign chairman Robert Harvey made the announcement Friday at the United Way of Greater Victoria annual meeting, as Art Roberts was elected president for the year.

Guest speaker Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy welcomed the assistance of the private sector with social services.

"The individual in B.C. does best in an arena and atmosphere and aura that allows the very best of that individual's potential," she said.

"We want no Big Brotherism in Canada or B.C.

"We don't want that deadening governmental help for an individual which makes that individual beholden to Big Brother government.

"We want input from the private organizations to make us aware and to bring volunteerism and individual caring to the attention of those in need."

In North America and the world, she said, people are seeing the results of an opting out society. Society is seeing the results of what happens when there is no sense of responsibility within the family.

"What we have to cope with in human resources is that. It is not the government's fault or city council's fault but an individual's lack of responsibility that puts into our lap the responsibility for caring for many children in the province of B.C."

Mrs. McCarthy said the government will launch an aggressive program to make sure that new mothers get the best nutrition available.

The government this year and in the years to come for each infant born in B.C. "will make sure in every nook and cranny of this province that the very best nutrition that will assist these children to have healthy lives and assist mothers is absolutely not in any way missed by the mothers of this province."

Affair of state

Conservatory moving to St. Ann's Academy

The Victoria Conservatory of Music is to move from its cramped quarters at Craigdarroch Castle to the annex at St. Ann's Academy this fall, thanks to a lottery grant announced Friday by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

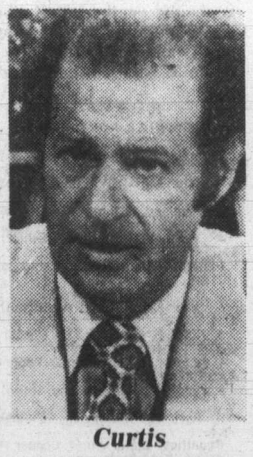
Once renovated, the annex directly behind the academy will have 50 soundproof rooms and more than 16,000 square feet of useable space compared to the 26 rooms and 7,000 square feet at Craigdarroch.

The conservatory began with 10 pupils in 1964 and had 400 students four years later when it moved to the city-owned Craigdarroch Castle. Current enrolment is 1,284.

Increasing crowding at the castle has had the conservatory board searching in recent years for a new location. Conservatory officials had warned that if a new space wasn't found it would face loss of faculty, students and damage to its reputation as one of the country's significant music schools.

"The Victoria Conservatory of Music is one of the province's most important cultural institutions yet it operates without debt and with only a minimum of government support," Curtis said.

"It is therefore entirely appropriate that the government should assist in this dilemma. Through the combined resources of the lottery fund and the buildings corporation (BCBC), which owns St. Ann's, we have been able to solve the problem," said Curtis during an extraordinary meeting of the conservatory board Friday afternoon at the Legislature.



Curtis
. . .'assist dilemma'

Curtis said that the conservatory was the majority choice in a public survey for future use of St.Ann's academy but he said the academy would require two to three years to renovate. He further indicated that the annex would be an "interim location" for the conservatory.

"I believe that this new location will give the conservatory an even greater role in the community. The noon time and evening concerts, for example will add greatly to the life of central Victoria, attracting tourists, downtown workers and area residents," he said.

Enviroment ministry staff occupying the annex are to move out later this spring to allow BCBC to complete renovations by September.

$650,000 for Saanich

It's surplus No. 3

Saanich chalked up its third successive annual budget surplus last year.

The 1978 year-end surplus was $650,000, treasurer Roy Broughton reported Friday.

Two years ago a $1.2-million surplus was recorded and last year almost $185,000 was turned back into the municipal treasury.

Major factors contributing to the surplus were larger-than-expected revenue from building and plumbing permits and under-expenditures in the police, public works and general administration budgets.

The surplus goes into the municipal coffers to be used for budget expenditures this year.

The municipality's provisional budget totals $36.4 million, of which more than $10 million is to be collected by Saanich on behalf of school districts and other government agencies.

The general municipal tax levy required this year is projected at slightly more than $14 million, an increase of $1.8 million or 15.3 per cent over last year. Most of the increase will be absorbed by the municipality's enriched assessment roll.

Judge orders Racquet Club assessment review

The assessment of the Racquet Club of Victoria was ordered Friday to be returned to the Assessment Appeal Board for reconsideration.

Mr. Justice Martin Taylor of B.C. Supreme Court said it appeared the board felt the concept of "economic obsolescence" was not appropriate in law in the case of a non-profit entity such as the Racquet Club.

He ruled the board was in error if it declined to make an allowance for economic obsolescence as a matter of principle and believing that such an allowance could not, in law, be granted.

CLUB LAWYER Alan Emery argued that economic obsolescence meant a loss of value by an exterior economic force, in this case competition from other sports facilities, particularly the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

He said the club operated almost entirely on membership dues but annual losses have mounted over the years and were $100,000 in 1977.

Emery said the assessor made no allowance for the economic impact of competing facilities and the Assessment Appeal Board did not consider economic obsolescence and it should have. He asked the court to remit the case to the board for consideration.

Robert Hutchison, counsel for the Assessment Authority of B.C., said when the Insurance Corp. of B.C. came in he was sure private insurance business was affected but that didn't reduce the value of their buildings.

SIMILARLY, HE SAID, the 15 per cent devaluation of the Canadian dollar had not led to an assessment increase for the export-heavy B.C. lumber industry.

He said economic obsolescence was a form of depreciation and the Racquet Club did get its assessment reduced in the form of an increase in the rate of depreciation.

What was involved in this case, he said, was a question of fact not law and the assessment authority couldn't do anything but sympathize with the Racquet Club over competition from municipal sports centres.

Taylor said it appeared the Assessment Appeal Board felt economic obsolescence was not appropriate in law for the Racquet Club and in approving a value on the depreciated replacement value approach felt it could not consider the fact that the Racquet Club had had considerable financial difficulties resulting, apparently, from the existence of similar facilities, some of them municipally owned.

THAT, HE SAID, was an error of law.

The cost of replacement is relevant in arriving at the actual value and it was proper to consider what a hypothetical prudent organization, interested in using the Racquet Club, would pay for it, he said.

It was proper and necessary for the assessor to ask if a prudent person would pay what the buildings cost. There were circumstances in which the prudent person might not—if the buildings were too big or their usefulness was no longer recognized by the public.

In those circumstances, if the replacement approach is used in setting the value, there must be an allowance not only for depreciation but there must be consideration of the reduced attractiveness of the improvements, or economic obsolescence.

But the mere fact that the Racquet Club has lost income does not mean, by itself, that it has lost attractiveness to a purchaser, he added.

WHL owners dissatisfied with some merger proposals

CHICAGO (CP) — Owners and trustees of four World Hockey Association franchises involved in expansion talks with the National Hockey League have found areas of disagreement in the proposals.

NHL president John Ziegler confirmed at a news conference Friday afternoon that, while "substantial progress" had been made in the marathon talks that stretched from Thursday afternoon through the early hours of Friday morning before a brief recess, expansion talks had broken off.

WHA president Howard Baldwin, rushing to catch a plane home to Hartford, Conn., said he remained optimistic but added: "They've got to do some work." He was referring to the NHL expansion proposals. "It's up to them (the NHL board of governors).

"The proposals were unacceptable as presented, but we've proposed some modifications."

Bill Wirtz, president of Chicago Black Hawks and chairman of the NHL expansion committee, agreed there remained some areas of concern.

"We got through all the items, but there are some fine points we'll have to clear up and should have more detailed information which should be available next week."

Although there has been much speculation about areas of disagreement, one area that stands out is in the number of players that can be protected by the WHA before heading into expansion.

However, the NHL expansion committee has apparently been firm, holding to the proposal of two skaters and two goaltenders. The four WHA franchises that would join the NHL in time for the 1979-80 season are hoping to get a new figure, possibly four skaters and one goaltender.

There have also been unconfirmed reports that Washington Capitals under the new realignment would move to the Patrick Division from the Norris Division, joining Atlanta Flames, New York Islanders, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

If this move transpires, the Capitals would be the only current NHL club to switch divisions.

New England Whalers, of which Baldwin is also president, would join the Norris Division along with incumbents Montreal Canadiens, Los Angeles Kings, Detroit Red Wings and Pittsburgh Penguins.

The WHA's Winnipeg Jets and Edmonton Oilers would enter a six-team Smythe Division with Chicago, Colorado Rockies, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks while Quebec Nordiques would enter the Adams Division with Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, Minnesota North Stars and Toronto Maple Leafs.

The WHA teams have apparently agreed on the price of entering the NHL through expansion — $6 million each — and indemnification costs of nearly $3 million for the two franchises that will fold along with the WHA — $2.85 million for Birmingham Bulls and $3.5 million for Cincinnati Stingers.

These would supposedly clear up any debts the league might be held responsible for such as players contracts. The four new teams have also agreed, say unconfirmed reports, to a $500,000 expense to cover the cost of a $50 million protection bond against such liabilities as court cases arising from loss of hockey franchises in Birmingham and Cincinnati.

Some 90 players currently playing in the WHA will revert automatically back to the NHL teams that have either owned them or drafted them since 1972. The lone exception is 50-year-old Gordie Howe of New England, who earned an exemption because of his more than 30 years in professional hockey.

Forty-five players are believed to be free of any NHL affiliation while eight players, still considered to be eligible for the NHL's amateur draft in June, would be drafted as if they had completed their junior eligibility.

These include scoring ace Wayne Gretzky, 18, who recently signed a multi-million dollar contract with Edmonton owner Peter Pocklington that doesn't expire for about 20 years.

That could be the fly in the ointment.

Others are Michel Goulet, Ricky Vaive, Greg Hartsburg, Rob Ramage and Pat Riggin, all of Birmingham; and Mike Gartner of Cincinnati.

Saanich Braves top Port Alberni in island Junior B opener

Fines and suspensions levied against Bruins

BY STAN COOPER

New Westminster Bruins, no strangers to shenanigans, will pay heavily for their latest Western Hockey League outburst.

Less than 24 hours after a game-ending brawl at Queen's Park Arena involving the Portland Winter Hawks, the Bruins Friday were handed stiff suspensions and fines by Del Wilson, WHL vice-president in charge of referees and discipline.

New Westminster coach and governor Ernie McLean was suspended indefinitely for failing to control his players during the melee which broke out with seven seconds to play.

Bruin captain John Paul Kelly and rookie Andrew Ristau were suspended five games each, teammate Boris Fistric drew a four-game suspension and five Bruins — Terry Kirkham, Rick Amann, Rob Roflik, Bruce Howes and Bill Hobbins — were suspended for three games each.

In addition, the Bruins were assessed $1,500 in fines — $1,000 to McLean and a team fine of $500 for clearing the bench to enter a fight.

New Westminster has two league games remaining and begins the Western Division playoffs in Victoria on Tuesday night. The Bruins play host to Portland on March 30 at Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver and Victoria visits Queen's Park Arena on April 1.

It's expected that Les Jackson, coach of Revelstoke Bruins in the B.C. Junior Hockey League, will replace McLean behind the bench.

Meanwhile, police in the Royal City are continuing their investigation of the affair and a spokesman said Friday charges are being considered.

General manager Brian Shaw of the Winter Hawks said he was disgusted and said he would press charges.

The Columbian reported that two Portland players were attacked by several New Westminster players with seven seconds left in the game. The evening newspaper said one Portland player had to crawl back to the players' bench after being badly beaten.

"We have to lay charges; we have no alternative," said Shaw. "I've got kids' lives at stake and some of them could have been killed."

Coach Ken Hodge of the Winter Hawks said he was sickened by what happened and "this is the worst thing I've ever seen. It was so obviously deliberate to everyone here."

McLean blamed the incident on the officiating and said the Bruins had "not been getting a fair shake" from WHL officials.

"I thought the referee lost control of the game in the second period," said McLean. "He should have thrown me out with seven seconds left for not putting five players on the ice."

The Columbian reported that the incident began with a fight between New Westminster's John Ogrodnick and Portland's Don Stewart at 19:53 of the third period. When play was to be resumed, New Westminster put four men on the ice, then two more, and Gregson awarded Portland a penalty shot because the Bruins had too many men on the ice.

Tim Tookey shot wide against netminder Richard Martens, but not before McLean had Fistric attempt to play goal while wearing a face mask.

The newspaper reported that, when the game finally ended, members of the Bruins left their bench to join two fights in progress on the ice. Portland players did not leave the bench.

Gregson handed the Bruins seven game misconducts and seven majors. Two Portland players were penalized for fighting.

Portland, in first place in the division, won the game 4-1. The Bruins, defending Memorial Cup champions, are in third place.

Meanwhile in Victoria, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said hockey violence is a matter for the police and the people running the sport, not government.

Gardom said violence in hockey should not be allowed to continue and police may lay charges if they are called for in specific situations.

Holmes keeps ring title, Shavers KOs Norton fast

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes smashed young Ossie Ocasio to the canvas four times in the seventh round and stopped the Puerto Rican challenger at 2:38 of the round to retain the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night.

It was simply a matter of too much size, too much power and, most importantly, too much experience. Ocasio, making only his 14th pro fight, tried with all he had but he was never really in the fight.

In a preliminary to Holmes' second title defence, Earnie Shavers shocked a crowd of about 5,400 at the Las Vegas Hilton Pavilion and a national television audience by knocking favored Ken Norton down twice and stopped him at 1:58 of the first round.

The victories by Holmes and Shavers set up a title match between the two in September, although Holmes is expected to defend against Mike Weaver of Los Angeles in June, possibly in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Holmes, who weighed 214 pounds to 207 for Ocasio and who enjoyed a 3½-inch height advantage and a four-inch reach advantage, came out at the opening bell looking to land a big punch.

But Ocasio hung tough, crouching and bobbing and weaving, and keeping Holmes' timing off just enough to escape disaster. In the fifth and sixth rounds, however, the 6-foot-3, 29-year-old champion began finding the range to both the head and the body.

Then, in the seventh, Holmes wrote an end to the 23-year-old Ocasio's title dreams.

The Shavers-Norton affair was stunning in its fury and had the crowd roaring in disbelief.

With Norton on the floor for the second time, referee Miles Lane reached the count of seven and then signalled the fight was over. Norton's trainer, Bill Slaton, had signalled the referee to halt it just a moment before he did.

The 34-year-old Shavers had said before the fight that he was not going to worry about going the distance, but that he was going to come out bombing in an effort to end it fast. Norton had said he expected Shavers to come out gunning, but when Earnie did, there was nothing Norton could do about it.

The loss has to be a bitter pill for the 33-year-old Norton to swallow. He was the 11-5 favorite and plans already were in the works for him to fight Scott Ledoux in June and then await another shot at the title he lost to Holmes on a split decision here last June 9.

Norton, who weighed 225 pounds, was losing for the sixth time against 41 victories. He earned $750,000 but saw his future as a factor in the heavyweight division dim considerably.

Shavers, who weighed 210, got about $250,000. The victory was by far the biggest of his career, which was marked by victories but overshadowed with disappointing defeats.

He was knocked out in one round by Jerry Quarry back in 1974 when he appeared headed for a title shot. The veteran from Warren, Ohio, fought his way back into championship contention and then lost a title bid to Muhammad Ali on a decision Sept. 29, 1977. Then he went against Holmes here last March 25, with the winner to fight Norton for the WBC crown. Shavers was barely in the fight, losing almost every one of the 12 rounds.

Now Shavers is back again after scoring his 57th victory and his 55th knockout. He has eight losses and a draw.

Canucks scuppered by big Sabre finish

Third period goals by Craig Ramsay, Danny Gare and Richard Martin propelled Buffalo Sabres to a come-from-behind 4-3 decision over Vancouver Canucks in a National Hockey League game Friday night.

In the only other game scheduled, Philadelphia Flyers bumped the Flames 4-1 in Atlanta, getting a second-period boost by former Canuck Dennis Ververgaert and Victoria's Mel Bridgman.

A Pacific Coliseum crowd of 14,079 saw the Canucks take a 3-1 lead into the final period. The Sabres controlled the final 20 minutes however as they further protected their second-place standing in the Adams Division.

The Sabres now have an eight-point lead over third-place Toronto Maple Leafs. The loss left the second-place Canucks with a seven-point cushion over St. Louis Blues in the battle for the last playoff berth in the Smythe Division.

Sedlbauer's goal was his 39th of the season and set a single-season Vancouver record formerly shared by Don Lever and Bobby Schmautz.

Cougars top leaders

Victoria Cougars have one distinction as the Western Hockey League heads into its final few days of league play.

Cougars are the only club this season to beat the Portland Winter Hawks more than once in the Oregon city, Victoria pulling out an 8-6 decision Friday night over the Western Division champions.

It was the second win for Victoria in Portland this season and took the Cougar record to 3-9-4 (2-5-1 in Portland) in the 16-game series between the clubs.

Rookie Bob Smith of Ladysmith led the way with two goals and goalkeeper Kevin Eastman, also from the mid-Island community, made 37 saves in going the distance for the first time since early in the season.

Eastman also was the winning goalkeeper in a 5-4 decision over the Winter Hawks in Portland on Oct. 27.

Cougars, who finish their 72-game schedule by playing host to Medicine Hat Tigers tonight at Memorial Arena, battled back from the two-goal deficit in the first period, outscoring the Winter Hawks 4-1 in the middle 20 minutes and 3-2 in the final period.

Max Kostovich (2), Mike Toal, Joel Elliott, Ron Chorney and Florent Robidoux were the Portland marksmen and goalkeeper Bart Hunter made 24 saves.

In other action, Brandon Wheat Kings eliminated Regina Pats from playoff contention by thrashing the Saskatchewan side 9-3, Lethbridge Broncos topped Saskatoon Blades 9-7 and Seattle Breakers breezed to a 12-5 win over the visiting Tigers.

TOTAL CONCENTRATION is displayed by Saskatchewan third Kim Kohlenberg, and Newfoundland skip and third Geoffrey Cunningham and Derek Benson during Friday action in the Canadian junior championships at Victoria Curling Club. Cunningham and his mates scored a 6-5 extra-end win to qualify for today's final.

Geoffrey Cunningham scored an extra-end 6-5 victory over Warren Proctor of Saskatchewan Friday to earn Newfoundland its first shot at the Canadian junior men's curling title.

The victory gave Cunningham's St. John's foursome a 10-1 record in the round-robin that decided the three teams that would advance to today's playoffs at the Victoria Curling Club and it also gave the Newfoundland rink a bye into the final, which starts at 2:30 p.m.

In the semi-final at 9 a.m., Proctor, 9-2 in round-robin play, will face Mert Thompsett of Winnipeg who preserved his third-place standing with an 8-5 victory over defending champion Darren Fish of Edmonton to finish with a 9-2 mark.

Thompsett needed the victory because Peter Jenkins of Charlottetown, here for his third try at the title, beat Stacey Coomber of Powell River 5-4 and a Manitoba loss could have forced a tie-breaker game for the final playoff spot.

"We can use the break we get with the bye," said a weary Cunningham who also beat Manitoba in the round-robin, losing only to Jenkins.

Mike Moss of Yellowknife scored four in the third end and two in the 10th for a 9-8 victory over Paul Chisholm of Truro, N.S., and his first win.

In other final-round games, Denis Marchand of Three Rivers had single steals in the eighth and ninth ends to down Nick Rizzo of Brampton, Ont., 6-3, and Dave St. Louis scored three in the seventh as his Northern Ontario rink from Haileybury bested Philip Gilks of Fredericton, N.B. 7-5.

St. Louis, Marchand and Fish, who finished third in the world championships last week at Moose Jaw, were tied for fifth with 6-5 records, Coomber and Rizzo were tied for eighth at 4-7, Chisholm was 10th at 2-9 and Gilks and Moss were 1-10.

The key to Cunningham's victory came in the 10th end when Proctor, counting one at the back of the house, had a chance to take two with his last rock. The stone appeared to be light as it approached the house and rubbed one of two guards fronting the 12-foot circle.

"He had not drawn to the house too often during the game and there was bad sweeping on the rock," said Cunningham who took out Proctor's counter in the 11th and stayed to win.

Newfoundland stole two in the seventh end when Cunningham made a perfect draw to the eight-foot ring behind four other stones. Proctor tried for a double-takeout that could have given him three but was narrow.

Proctor said his rink had the psychological edge for the semi-final because of a 7-4 victory over Thompsett in the round-robin but the Manitoba shotmaker said he felt Saskatchewan plays too conservatively and his rink could win by two or three by curling its regular takeout game.

Thompsett jumped on Fish for two in the first end when the Edmonton skip wrecked while trying to come around a Manitoba guard which he pushed into the house and it almost counted for three.

Thompsett had a free draw for two more in the eighth when Fish was heavy on a draw with his final rock and he preserved the win in the 10th, counting two by staying after removing the Edmonton skip's counter.

The Fish rink lost five of its last six games after leading the round-robin portion of the championship for two days.

Trilec hopes ended

SAINT JOHN, N.B. — Nova Scotia All-Stars of Halifax and the defending Canadian junior men's basketball champions, Windsor AKO of Ontario, won their semi-final games here Friday to qualify for today's final in the 1979 championships.

Th Nova Scotians, who defeated Windsor earlier in the tournament, beat Victoria Trilec of British Columbia 66-52, while Ontario stopped Memorial University Beothuks of Newfoundland 70-67 in a game that went right to the wire.

In Friday's other game, Saskatoon Holy Cross Grads of Saskatchewan defeated Edmonton Blazers of Alberta 70-65 to advance to the playoff game for fifth place today against St. Vital Grads of Manitoba.

Trilec plays Newfoundland for third place.

Darrell Johnson had 12 points for Trilec and Gwyn Shipman had 10.

The Victorians came within two points of the lead with 1:20 to play but were unable to overcome the Nova Scotians, who piled up the insurance points as the clock ran down.

Swiss misses earn world title

PERTH, Scotland (CP) — Gaby Casanova and her Switzerland rink, playing together for the first time this year, made it a runaway in the final game of the world women's invitational curling championship Friday, defeating Sweden 13-5.

Casanova, who said she was suprised her rink even won the women's title in Switzerland, advanced to the final with a 6-3 verdict earlier in the day over Lindsay Sparkes and her Canadian rink from North Vancouver.

Brigitta Torn, who skipped her Stockholm rink to the best record in round-robin play with eight wins and two defeats, beat Scotland's Beth Lindsay 7-5 in the other semi-final game.

The Swiss rink, which included lead Rosi Manger, second Linda Thommen and third Betty Bourquin, wound up the round-robin section at 7-3 — the same as Canada, the U.S., France and Scotland.

Canada got a bye into the semi-finals because of a better record against those teams while Switzerland qualified for the playoffs with an 8-5 win over France in the tie-breaker game Thursday night.

Scotland made it to the semi-finals in another tie-breaker with a 6-4 win over Nancy Langley, skip of the U.S. rink from Seattle.

The Swiss lost 12-5 to Canada and 10-6 to Sweden in the round-robin schedule.

In the semi-final against Canada, the Swiss trailed 3-0 after the first four ends but Casanova rallied with one in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Switzerland stole single points in each of the seventh, eighth and ninth ends to eliminate the Canadian foursome of Sparkes, third Dawn Knowles, second Robin Wilson, and lead Lorraine Bowles.

In the championship game, Sweden scored single points in each of the first and second ends. However, the Swiss roared back with three in the third, two in the fourth, and four in the sixth. Casanova added four more points in the eighth end. Then Sweden conceded.

City coach, harrier at world team meet

LIMERICK, Ireland (CP) — Canadian team officials are quietly confident of improved results in the world team cross-country running championships set for Sunday at Greenpark race course.

"We have three runners who could place in the top 50 in the men's race," said Canadian team coach Ron Bowker of Victoria. "Canadian champion Peter Butler of Calgary should lead the team home, North Bay's Greg Duhaime is extremely fit and Mike Dixon of Georgetown, Ont., could be close. Over all, we should improve four to six places in the team standings."

In the 1978 championships in Glasgow, Scotland, no Canadian finished in the first 100 and the team finished 18th out of 20 teams entered.

Canada's best chance for a medal comes in the junior men's race. "Ian Clarke should be in the first five," said junior team coach Don Mills.

Ump requires agent too says embittered arbiter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A major league umpire testified in federal court Friday that he hired an agent to get a him a raise after looking at the money the players make.

"There are dogs, marginal ball players making $150,000 working 40 to 50 games a year," said Dave Phillips, an American League umpire for the past eight seasons. "I'm working 162 games and not making near that. I saw they had agents."

Phillips, who has turned down an offer of $29,750 plus expenses for the 1979 season, is one of 51 major league umpires who have refused to sign contracts and report to spring training.

They have obtained Richie Phillips, a Philadelphia lawyer, to represent them in their rhubarb with both the American and National leagues.

Umpire Phillips testified that over the years he had been unsuccessful in getting more money out of American League president Lee MacPhail. "It was fruitless for me to go to him,," he said. "Nothing ever came of the talks. So I called Richie."

Attorney Phillips testified about a meeting earlier this month at which umpire Bruce Froemming had asked National League president Chub Feeney to up his salary to $43,000 a year.

Lawyers for both leagues have asked U.S. District Court Judge Joseph McGlynn to find the umpires in violation of a preliminary injunction he issued last September preventing a work stoppage pending resolution of the dispute. They also have asked for $10,000 fines against the officials for every day they remain off the job.

Umpire lawyers argue the injunction should be dissolved — it being no longer applicable because it's a new season and because they claim collective bargaining is not involed now, as it was last fall.

The dispute has been brewing since last spring. It came to a head Aug. 25 when the umpires called a one-day strike affecting ballgames in 13 major league cities.

Richert, Osborne in final

DUNCAN — Lyle Richert of New Westminster and Bill Osborne of Qualicum will meet here this morning for the Guy Phillip Trophy, emblematic of the Pacific Coast Senior Curling Association championship.

Osborne topped Tosh Nigai of Haney 6-3 in opening round action Friday and followed with an 8-3 win over Ralph Stevenson of Glen Meadows. Richert downed Stevenson 7-4 and Nagai 6-3 to earn his berth in the final.

All four rinks move to Qualicum on Sunday for the opening of the B.C. senior championships which will also include four rinks from the interior.

Angels run spring streak to four against Mariners

California Angels seem to be serious about making a run at Kansas City Royals' American League West Division crown.

With Rick Miller and Rance Mulliniks delivering two-run singles and Nolan Ryan yielding five hits in six innings, the Angels ran their exhibition winning streak to four games Friday with a 6-3 triumph over Seattle Mariners.

The Royals, meanwhile, got combined two-hit pitching from Rich Gale, George Throop and Renie Martin and blanked Baltimore Orioles 5-0 as Amos Otis homered, singled and stole home.

Another AL West challenger, Texas Rangers, scored six runs off Tommy Boggs in the fourth inning and whipped Atlanta Braves' B squad 7-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Fergie Jenkins and Ed Farmer. The Braves' A team suffered a similar fate, managing four hits against Vern Ruhle, Frank Ricelli and Bo McLaughlin in bowing to Houston Astros 1-0.

San Diego Padres bombed Cleveland Indians 9-1 behind the four-hit pitching of Bob Shirley and Mark Lee and San Francisco's Bob Knepper allowed one run in seven innings as the Giants defeated Chicago Cubs 6-3.

Paul Molitor had three hits and drove in two runs to lead Milwaukee Brewers over Oakland A's 4-1.

Toronto's Dave McKay struck out but reached first on a two-out passed ball by Chicago's Wayne Nordhagen in the fourth and eventually scored the winning run on singles by Alfredo Griffin and Rick Bosetti as the Blue Jays nipped the White Sox 2-1.

North wins in sudden-death

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Roy Lund rink of Dryden, representing Northern Ontario, captured the Canadian mixed curling championship Friday with a sudden-death playoff win over Bob Widdis of Etobicoke, Ont.

Lund, who is from a town without a curling arena, won 7-5 over his southern Ontario rival.

The playoff was forced earlier Friday when Northern Ontario fell 7-5 to Nova Scotia's Lowell Goulden in an extra end, while Ontario was defeating Newfoundland's Jim Burden 8-6.

Northern Ontario and Ontario finished the round-robin with 9-2 records.

Dryden has been without a curling club for a year, because the old one burned last March.

Rinks from the Northern Ontario town have been forced to play in the smaller communities in the area.

Lund won his zone playoff in a two-sheet rink in Vermilion Bay, then needed sudden-death to win the provincial final.

Northern Ontario had an opportunity to win the national title during the regular round-robin, but Lund missed a last-rock draw attempt in the 11th end, which allowed Nova Scotia to steal a pair for the win.

The miss was the second straight for Lund, who earlier had been just as heavy with his first shot.

There were no such mistakes in the final, as Northern Ontario recorded three two-enders en route to the win.

Ontario drew for a pair in the first end, but Northern Ontario countered with two in the second.

Lund stole one in the fourth, but Ontario came back with one in the fifth and a steal in the sixth for a 4-3 lead.

Northern Ontario regained the lead with two in the seventh, gave up one in the eighth and scored another deuce in the ninth.

Lund didn't have to throw his rocks in the 10th end, because his rink did a superb job of taking out Ontario's stones and Widdis was too heavy with his first shot.

The win was the first in the 15-year history of the Canadian mixed championship for a rink east of Manitoba, however, Lund said Western Canada's success string still is intact.

Smith cracks his own record

CLEVELAND (AP)— Graham Smith of the University of California-Berkeley led a parade of record setters in the NCAA swimming and diving championships at Cleveland State University on Friday night.

Two new American and two NCAA standards were set on the second night of the meet.

Smith, of Edmonton, flashed to a record 54.91 record in the 100-yard breaststroke, bettering his own mark of 55.10 set in 1977. It was the second record performance in a day for Smith who also lowered the mark in the qualifiers.

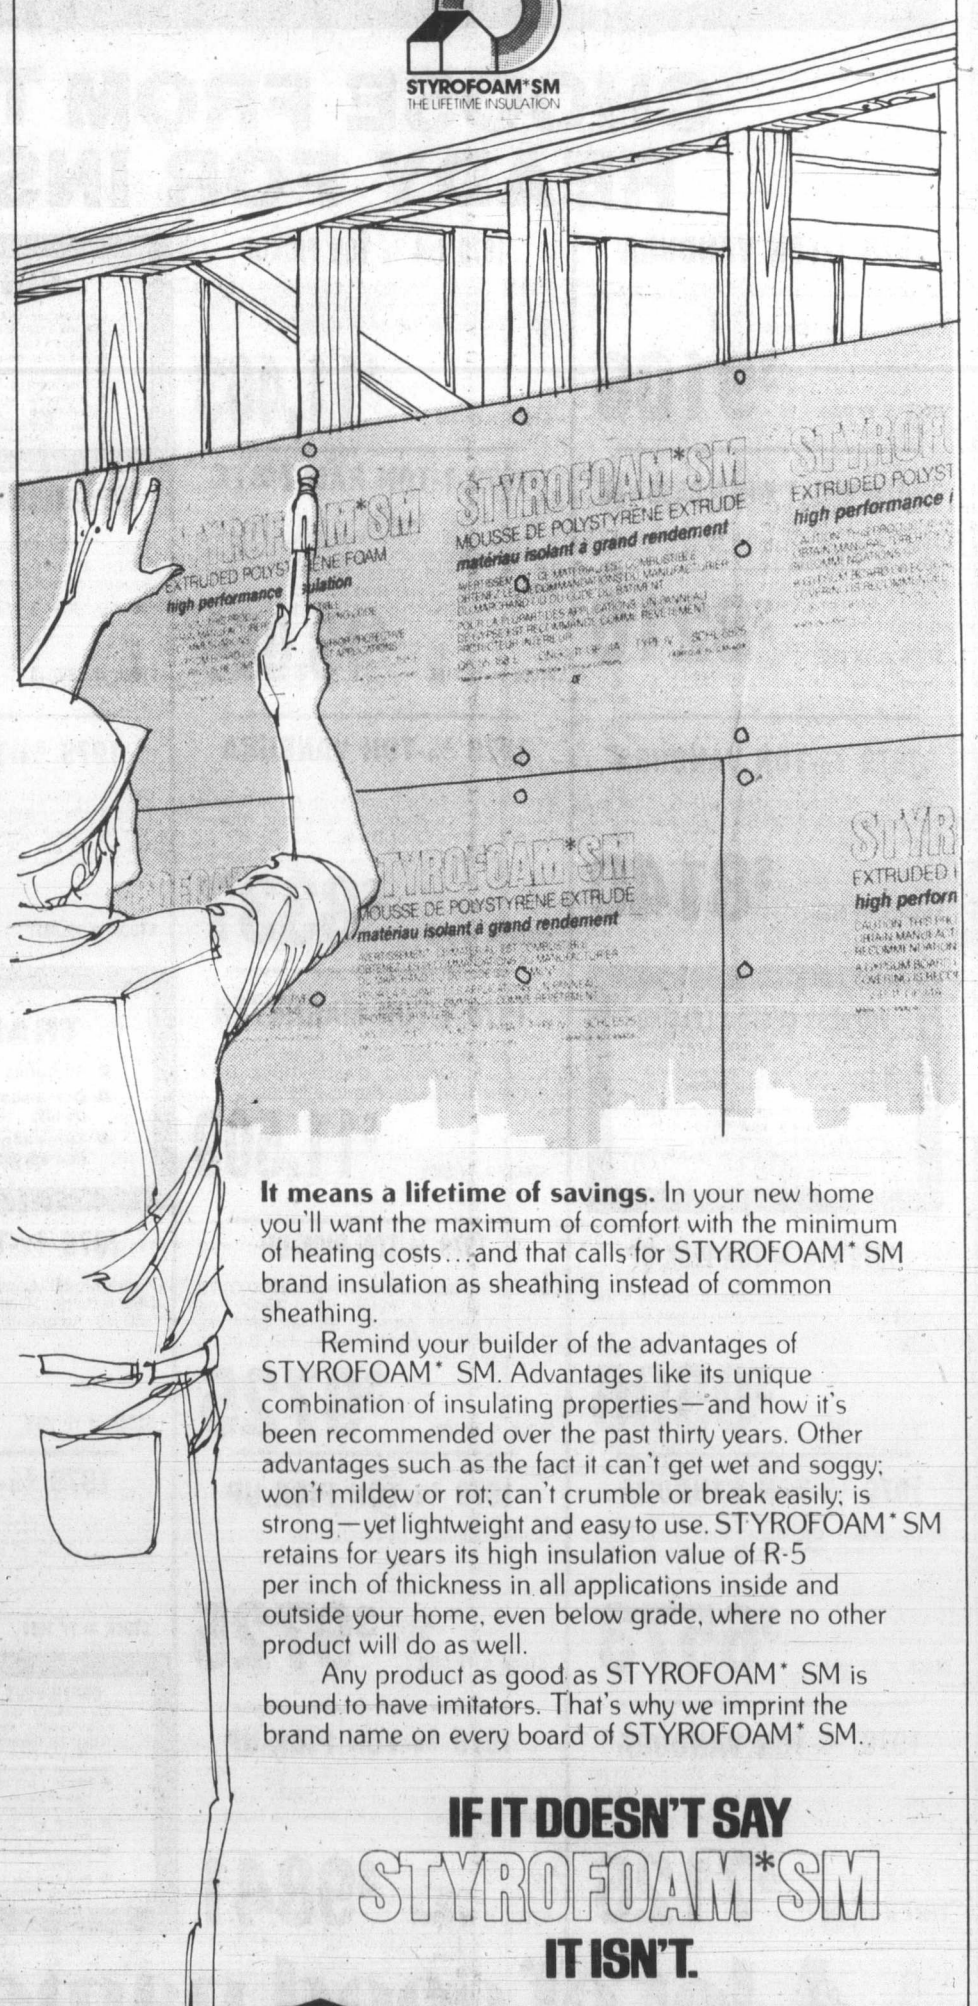
SPECIFY STYROFOAM*SM INSULATION FOR YOUR NEW HOME.

STYROFOAM*SM
THE LIFETIME INSULATION



It means a lifetime of savings. In your new home you'll want the maximum of comfort with the minimum of heating costs...and that calls for STYROFOAM* SM brand insulation as sheathing instead of common sheathing.

Remind your builder of the advantages of STYROFOAM* SM. Advantages like its unique combination of insulating properties—and how it's been recommended over the past thirty years. Other advantages such as the fact it can't get wet and soggy; won't mildew or rot; can't crumble or break easily; is strong—yet lightweight and easy to use. STYROFOAM* SM retains for years its high insulation value of R-5 per inch of thickness in all applications inside and outside your home, even below grade, where no other product will do as well.

Any product as good as STYROFOAM* SM is bound to have imitators. That's why we imprint the brand name on every board of STYROFOAM* SM.

IF IT DOESN'T SAY STYROFOAM*SM IT ISN'T.

DOW DOW CHEMICAL OF CANADA, LIMITED

*STYROFOAM brand insulation is combustible and should be properly installed. A gypsum board interior finish should be used in residential construction. For specific instructions see Dow literature available from your supplier or from Dow.

Wadkins conquers wind to grab lead

Wadkins
. . . birdie brings whoop

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins, boldly attacking the pins despite whipping winds that raked the course, cut out a four-under-par 68 and established a three-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $440,000 Tournament Players Championship.

Wadkins, bubbling with confidence, put together a 36-hole total of 135, nine strokes under par on tough Sawgrass. The course, toughened by the prevailing winds, regained its unforgiving nature and sent such standout performers as Tom Weiskopf, Gary Player, Lon Hinkle and Seve Ballesteros down the road to the next event.

Wadkins played when the gusty winds were at their toughest. He didn't make a bogey in his remarkable effort that gave him firm command of the event that is billed as the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

George Burns had to score eight birdies and match the Sawgrass record of 66 to keep Wadkins in sight at 138.

Lee Trevino, who has returned to an old set of irons with which he won the 1971 U.S. Open and the 1974 PGA, maneuvered his way to a 69 and a tie at 139 with Dan Halldorson of Brandon and Bill Kratzert. Halldorson and Kratzert each shot 70.

Defending-champion Jack Nicklaus slipped to a 73 that left him at 140. Also at that figure were Ed Fiori and Mark McCumber, the rookie who scored an upset victory last week in the Doral Open. McCumber had another 70 and Fiori shot 71.

Tom Watson, had a 72 and was at 142. Arnold Palmer shot 75-147.

But the links-type course, which yielded some surprisingly low scores in the calm conditions that prevailed Thursday, snapped back at the game's greats.

Weiskopf, for example, shot 82-155. Ballesteros, Europe's greatest player, was 81-157. Player, the little South Arican who holds the Masters title, shot 79-152. Hinkle, winner of the Bing Crosby title, shot 80-155. Fuzzy Zoeller, the year's leading money-winner, was 77-150. All missed the cut for the final two rounds.

Kermit Zarley, who held the first-round lead, made triple bogey seven on his first hole and eventually finished with a 79-145. He later was assessed a $200 fine for slow play during Thursday's play, when he shot 66.

Under the conditions, Wadkins said, "this is maybe the finest round of golf I've ever played. I think getting around without a bogey is an even greater accomplishment than the score."

It didn't come easily, however. The little man who is seeking to become the first double winner of the year had to one-putt to save par five times.

"It's funny, but the harder the wind blew, the better I seemed to putt," he said.

Wadkins holed a 20-foot birdie putt on the second hole, chipped to 12 inches for birdie-four on the fourth, holed a six-footer on the 11th and stretched it out with a long one, perhaps 35-40 feet, on the 14th.

"The rest of the way in, it was dead into the wind and I was just trying the hardest I could to avoid a bogey," he said.

"I thought, with this wind, anything around par would be a good score today," said Nicklaus. "I missed it by one so I'm not at all disappointed. I'm just a little surprised someone is that far in front."

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, skied to a 76 after an opening round 69 and is 11 shots off the lead at 144. Dave Barr of Kelowna, shot 76 for a 149 total and missed the cut.

Donna leads women's tournament

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Donna Caponi Young carded a four-under-par 69 at the Las Vegas Country Club on Friday, giving her a 36-hole score of 135 and a two-stroke lead at the midway point of the $100,000 Sahara National Pro-Am.

Second at 137 after a 73 Friday was first-round leader JoAnne Carner, shooting for her second straight Ladies Professional Golf Association victory. Carner had a course-record 64 on Thursday.

Penny Pulz carded her second straight 69 at the par-71 Sahara Country Club course, putting her alone in third place at 138. Tied at 139 were Nancy Lopez, Amy Alcott, Chako Higuchi and Judy Rankin. Next at 141 was Dot Germain.

Two courses are being used in the 72-hole tournament, which winds up Sunday. The winner will collect $15,000.

The original field of 72 was cut to low 62 for the final two rounds, which will be played at Sahara. A score of 152 was necessary to make the cut.

Lopez, who won nine tournaments last year and captured the Sunstar Classic in Los Angeles earlier this month, had a six-under-par 67 while playing the tougher Las Vegas Country Club course Friday. Included in her round was an eagle on the 426-yard, par-five eighth hole and four birdies.

Alcott had a 72 Friday, Higuchi a 70, Rankin a 66 and Germain a 69.

Economics top romance for Toronto roommates

TORONTO (CP) — Beverly Gun-Munro wanted a nice apartment in the downtown area — nicer than she could afford.

Like a growing number of young working people in Toronto, the weather forecaster and entertainment critic for CITY-TV found a roommate of the opposite sex, someone with whom to share expenses and household chores but not a bed.

"It's not a boy-friend, girl-friend thing at all — we are strictly roommates; there is no sex involved," Miss Gun-Munro said of her living arrangements with graphics artist Gabor Fischer.

For many roommates sharing accommodation on a platonic basis, economics and the shortage of apartments in Toronto, especially in the downtown area, are the biggest reasons.

Margaret Massey, manager of Shared Accommodation Service, and Richard Bannan, manager of People 'n Places, two commercial agencies which help people find room-mates, agree that mixed-sex apartment sharing has been on the increase for about 1½ years.

"It's getting bigger and bigger all the time," Bannan said. "We are getting more specific requests from people who want to share a place with someone of the opposite sex."

Ms. Massey said the sharing generally works because the persons involved live busy and separate lives.

"One person will go one way and the other another," she said. "The only time they might pass is in the morning, or perhaps for a while on weekends."

But while the trend toward platonic apartment-sharing is becoming more acceptable to both sexes, many people don't want to talk about their situation openly.

As Susan, an office manager in her 20s who has lived with a male friend for two years, said: "All my friends know and accept my living arrangements, but when I meet someone new or talk to some older people about living platonically with a man, you can almost see that 'Oh, yeah' look come into their eyes."

Child's sex soon a choice

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Parents soon may be able to choose the sex of their children rather than leave it to nature.

Experimental trials in baby pre-selection at a Chicago medical research centre have been fairly successful in producing boys.

The trials were conducted using a sperm separation technique which Dr. Paul Dmowski says improved the chances of parents having a boy by 50 per cent or more.

Dmowski, head of the fertility unit at Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Centre, says further research should make it possible to pre-select baby girls as well.

He thinks the average size of families would decrease if the idea of determining the sex of children in advance caught on.

"I think most people would like a child of each sex, but some are more willing than others to do something about it. These couples, at least those who have a daughter first, won't have to spend years trying for the other sex."

Now that sex selection is no longer in the realm of science fiction, it raises social and ethical questions about upsetting the natural balance of boys and girls born into the world.

Dr. Richard Kessler, vice-president for professional and academic affairs at the Michael Reese hospital, fears there may be considerable favoritism toward males.

"I believe that the birth of a baby has a sacred quality, almost a spiritual quality, that should not be tampered with."

Males already have a slight edge in the United States. Of the 3,326,600 births in 1977, there were 105 boys for every 100 girls.

The pre-selection procedure may run into religious objections because it involves artificial insemination.

Rev. Timothy O'Connell, a theologian who teaches a course in sexual ethics, says:

"The judgment of the Catholic Church is that artificial insemination is inconsistent with human understanding of sexuality in marriage."

Dmowski, who uses only married couples in his experiments, explains that his sex selection technique separates the male sperm cells, or Y chromosomes, from the female sperm cells, known as X chromosomes.

To do this, he uses a filtration process. The husband's sperm is placed in a test tube containing two layers of human serum albumin, a blood protein.

All sperm swim downward and the most active — usually the Y cells — reach the bottom first.

The woman then is inseminated with the bottom layer of semen containing a higher percentage of Y-bearing sperm, thus increasing her chances of giving birth to a boy.

Quebec seeks clean fight in divorce action

QUEBEC (CP) — Couples should not have to dredge up the sordid details of each others' private lives to obtain a divorce or legal separation, says the Quebec Human Rights League.

In a brief presented to a Quebec legislative committee studying in changes in family law, the league says that digging into these details only aggravates an already difficult situation.

"It's an unjustified invasion of a spouse's privacy," the brief said.

It also urged the committee to recommend simpler divorce proceedings between consenting partners, allowing them an automatic divorce after a year of separation.

The brief suggested that a proposal to raise Quebec's minimum marriage age to 18 years would contravene the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which says men and women should be free to marry once they reach an age where procreation is safe to the health.

Centr'homme, a group representing men who are divorced or in the process of obtaining divorces, presented a brief challenging a proposal which would have a mediator set alimony according to fixed rates.

The group also proposed that a man's alimony obligations cease once he reaches retirement age. Potential earnings of children should also be included when calculating alimony to a partner granted custody, the group said.

Vitamin restraint wanted

HAMILTON (CP) — Vitamins with a high iron content should be sold in child-proof containers, says the head of the federal drug directorate.

Dr. Bert Liston said his office, part of the health and welfare department, has recommended that vitamins containing more than 150 milligrams of iron in any one package be sold in child-proof containers because high iron concentrations can cause internal bleeding.

Sitting around may be death of you

Colonist-Newsday Service

You may be sitting yourself to death, says Dr. Folke Mossfeldt, a Swedish physical therapist, fitness expert.

Today, Mossfeldt said, even the most active people spend a lot of their time sitting. No matter how much tennis you play or running, swimming and jogging you do, these long periods of inactivity cannot help but lead to deterioration of your body.

To help people keep their bodies shipshape between workouts, Mossfeldt devised a group of exercises designed to aid muscle tone, circulation and flexibility, and at the same time to relieve the boredom, tension and tightness that build up during prolonged periods of inactivity.

The in-the-chair exercises came into being during a flight from New York to Stockholm in 1977. While seated, Mossfeldt said, he looked around at the other passengers who, like him, seemed stiff and groggy and, he guessed, were suffering from the swollen feet, headaches and backaches that are the unpleasant results of lengthy flights. Mossfeldt decided to resort to some exercise techniques he had been using at Sweden's Karolinska Institute. The exercises were devised to help heart patients get back into the swing of activity within five days of suffering an attack.

At the end of the flight, Mossfeldt approached the airline with his idea, and in a short time a brochure and film featuring his exercise program were made available to more than 250,000 SAS Scandinavian Airlines passengers. Since its inception, the program has been available on all the airline's flights and the brochures have been mailed to more than 70,000 people. The program has also been used by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the U.S. Army and various professional athletic groups across the country.

Now, Mossfeld and co-author Mary Susan Miller have put the exercises into the SAS In-The-Chair Exercise Book (Bantam Books, $3.95). They contend the program relieves some of the negative effects of sitting for long periods of time.

When you sit, they say, the heart slows down and becomes weaker, and blood circulation slows. Muscles that force blood back to the heart weaken, causing blood to accumulate in the legs, hands and feet, which can result in varicose veins. In addition, the body's supply of oxygen is reduced, causing stiff and aching muscles. And the body's full weight, which is resting on the base of the spine, exerts undue pressure, causing sagging stomach muscles, lower back pain and, sometimes, spinal muscle spasms.

To combat all this, Mossfeldt has devised exercises that attract little attention, require no special equipment and can be done practically anywhere at anytime. (Mrs. Miller said she does some of the routines during intermissions at the opera and ballet.)

The authors suggest you pick the portion of your body that needs the most work and concentrate your efforts there. Begin with a relaxer that limbers the muscles and gets the blood flowing, then go on to exercises that speed circulation. Next, work on specific muscles like those in the back, spine or stomach.

Mossfeldt said that with simple exercises like "raising on the toes" — in which you simply sit with your elbows on your knees, bend forward and lift up on your toes as high as you can — you are exercising your heart and keeping it prepared for more strenuous tasks, like jogging, tennis, cycling and running.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I recently became engaged to a wonderful guy. He is medium height, not much to look at, but he treats me like a queen. My future husband has a wonderful character, is sweet and kind — head and shoulders above the handsome lady-killers I had been wasting my time on. (The last three guys I went with dressed like a million and all they could think about was themselves.)

Last night my aunt took me aside and said, "You are such a beautiful girl. You could have your pick of the lot. What do you see' in HIM?" I really got mad and replied, "You know, Aunt Jill, I was going to ask you the same question. Uncle John is so good-looking, what did he see in YOU?"

I hope the people who read your column will remember my answer and use it if anyone asks them what they see in the person of their choice. — Galled In Galveston

Dear G.: What an exquisite put-down! I couldn't have done better if I had worked on an answer all day.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick and tired of hearing the "Now Generation" throwing all the blame for their unhappiness and personal hang-ups on their parents. It has taken me 20 years to realize that my parents are people and they have hang-ups and problems just as we do.

Why do we demand perfection from parents when we settle for a lot less from ourselves or our peers? Parents are products of their environment and their inherited characteristics — just as we are. Is it fair to expect them to be infallible?

My parents made mistakes with me, but their parents made mistakes with them — and I will certainly make mistakes with my children. I have come to believe that a lot of unhappy, messed-up kids would rather blame their parents than take responsibility for themselves.

I didn't like some of the things in my life that were making me miserable, so I went to work and changed them. It's not easy to give up one's neuroses, but I did it, and I'm a much happier person. Today I enjoy a comfortable and honest relationship with my parents. This was impossible five years ago. I am — Better Because I Wanted To Be

Dear Better: You've got loads of wisdom in that 20-year-old head. Thanks for sharing it.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son will be two years old in March. It is apparent that he is left-handed. My wife believes this will handicap him in later life. For example, she says it is a terrific nuisance to sit next to a left-handed person at a dinner party. Also she say appliances are designed for right-handed people, ditto many musical instruments.

I have heard is said that left-handed children should be left alone — that attempts to make them right-handed can cause stuttering and other nervous disorders. My wife insists these are old wives' tales. Right or wrong? — Waiting To Hear

Glamorous glimpse at forbidden

LONDON (CP) — Now, from the wonderful folk who brought you the miniskirt, comes a new revelation.

Will it catch on? Bet on it.

It'll catch on fire hydrants, doorknobs, fingernails, tables, chairs and your little brother Lester.

There's no name for it yet, but it's a skirt — or dress — which owes ancestry to the elegant Chinese cheongsam.

Whereas the cheongsam comes somewhere below the knee and is split to somewhere above the knee, this new garment is somewhat longer and is split up to just south of the Forbidden City.

First to latch on to the new style is The Sun, which claims the largest circulation of any British newspaper. That's hardly surprising when you consider that The Sun's daily feature is a lady on page three who does not wear the new skirt — or anything else, for that matter.

Unfortunately, The Sun beat the gun. It began to promote the new look as a coming spring fashion just as winter ended.

However, winter came back.

"As she showed a shapely leg in the West End, boutique manageress Jo Jo Sidwell said, 'Lots of guys like the splits and get more turned on by seeing a bit of leg than seeing everything.'"

But let Dobson explain it:

"Girls are revealing a glamorous glimpse of what's being worn underneath — suspenders and stocking-tops, smooth bare legs or shimmering pale tights."

How about a Freudian slip?

Cancer threat softened in drug

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Synthetic DES — diethylstilbestrol — may be less of a cancer threat to daughters of American women who took the drug during pregnancy than earlier believed, a Boston pathologist said.

Reporting on a study begun two years ago, Dr. Stanley Robboy, of Massachusets General Hospital and a professor at Harvard Univsersity, said only four cancers of the genital tract were found among a total of 3,339 daughters of women who took DES.

DES has become the focus of controversy, cancer research and a series of lawsuits across the United States.

Robboy was reporting to a meeting of the International Academy of Pathology. His study is being published in the March issue of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Doctors estimate that DES was administered to between 500,000 and three million American women in the late 1940s and 1950s as a safeguard against miscarriage.

Robboy said 1,275 of the more than 3,300 DES daughters were studied thoroughly after they were identified through a review of their mothers' medical records.

Declarer had no doubts about the need to use dummy's club suit in today's elusive game. Unfortunately, that's where his thinking stopped and he lost the timing to make his vulnerable game.

Declarer ducked the first spade and was forced to win the continuation. Then he played the ace, king and another club, smiling approval when the normal split established dummy's club suit.

East led a third round of spades and, after West cashed his side's fourth trick, West led a heart to stick the lead in dummy. Now all West had to do was to wait patiently and dummy's low diamond would give West the setting trick.

Obviously, declarer's ninth trick was available in the way of the king of hearts. But how was he to time the play to score that trick safely?

After winning the ace of spades, declarer should not play either of his two high clubs. Instead, he establishes the suit by first leading a small one (if he plays a high one and a small one, a third round lead of the suit will leave him in the same bad position).

The defense wins the first club and cashes the spades, but declarer now has enough entries in either hand to unravel all of his nine tricks. First the ace of hearts is cashed to unblock that suit and then a club furnishes the entry to cash the heart king.

After cashing the winners in declarer's hand, a diamond lead to dummy paves the way to taking the remaining tricks.

Quite often declarer has enough tricks to make his contract. The key to success is to manage the timing so that none are left at the gate.

Best dressed is 'insecure'

TORONTO (CP) — Countess Isabelle d'Ornano, fifth on the world's best-dressed list in 1978, has insecure feelings about clothing.

She is afraid people will think her "out of the madhouse" because of her wardrobe during her visit to Toronto this week.

The 41-year-old Polish woman was wearing an outfit that was "all mixed up" — Yves Saint Laurents' of different seasons, a deep blue silk blouse, a plum scarf, print shawl, violet suede boots with purple, orange and rust tassels peeping beneath a brown skirt.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am 64 years old, a male, and today I had an extraordinary experience. While urinating I had a terrible sensation. The hairs on the back of my head pricked up and it brought tears to my eyes. I passed a little bead about half the size of a BB. It plopped into the water. If you think lead is heavy, this seemed ten times heavier. I imagine this was a gallstone. What can you tell me what to do about this situation? — W.B.

You have passed a stone, but not a gallstone. Gallstones don't reach the urinary tract, but may enter the digestive tract (bowels) and exit via that route. I hope you saved the stone to show to friends. Now take it to your doctor. Future treatment depends on the composition of the stone.

Based on chemical tests of the stone the doctor might want to do certain blood tests — for uric acid and calcium, for example — as well as x-rays of your kidneys.

Always save any abnormal objects passed for your doctor. They are very valuable in diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Should a person with high blood pressure get more sleep than other people? — H.F.

Probably. Blood pressure tends to go down during sleep, so in that sense sleep might be considered therapy of a sort. Just how much sleep would vary with the individual. For some, a nap in the afternoon might be advisable if it's practical to do that. Even lying at rest can be beneficial. On the other hand the role of exercise is being emphasized more and more these days, so it's really a two-way street, a blend of appropriate exercise and adequate rest.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I hate to take your time with a trivial question, but — is it possible for an arthritic condition to affect the running of a wrist watch? My husband has arthritis bad and his wrist watch stops every hour or so. — M.G.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I've been unable to find bananas in my calorie count chart. Wouldn't you know I love bananas? — H.D.

A banana of average size has about 100 calories.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please settle an argument between my husband and me. He claims that eating cured meats will make him less potent. He says they use saltpeter, and that this was used in the food when he was in the armed forces. I disagreed. I tell him that once the meat is cured and cooked, the saltpeter has no effect. — Mrs. J.B.

The "saltpeter" rumor dies hard, and is heard from these days on college campuses. Saltpeter is the familiar name for nitrate salts used to preserve bacon, cold cuts, hotdogs, etc. It has no effect on potency whether in cooked or uncooked meats, in spite of the common belief.

Nitrates are not to be taken lightly, however, even though the small amounts used in food do not cause poisoning. The main concern now is the possibility of nitrate being a carcinogen (cancer producer), a question the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is investigating, as they did earlier with Red Dye No. 2 and the cyclamates (artificial sweeteners). Often, in matters such as this, the thought is the psychological father to the fact. If your husband has this idea let's hope this note sets matters straight.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have heard from time to time that animal dander is frequently a cause of allergy, to the point where some people cannot have animal pets. Just what is dander? — M.E.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I saw the word "cholelithiasis" on a medical report recently. Translate, please. — J.S.

You must have gotten a good look because you spelled it correctly. It means gallstones.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

For more than 30 years I, as a pastor, have been dealing with bereaved people, officiating at funeral services on their behalf and offering them pastoral care. Through the years I have learned to take in my stride many of things I must do as a pastor, but every funeral is still for me an emotionally demanding exercise which requires of me much more than mere professional adroitness.

Let me tell you something of what a funeral generally entails for a pastor. It begins with a visit to the bereaved to try to afford them some comfort and assurance in the first shock of bereavement and to discuss with them the details of the funeral service.

Then there is the service itself. Today most people ask for a fairly brief, simple service. I favor that kind of service, one consisting mostly of readings from the Bible and appropriate prayers. I give a sermon or eulogy at a funeral only when aked to do so by the bereaved. Then there is the committal at the cemetery or the crematorium.

I believe that funerals are primarily for the living, that the principal justification for them is in the comfort and healing they can afford the grief-stricken. Most people suffering a bereavement do benefit from the gathering around them of relatives and friends; awareness of the sharing of sorrow does itself have comforting and healing power.

Pastors today are asked to officiate at many funerals for families which have no active church affiliation—although often they will name the church from which they dropped out, generally some years earlier.

I see difficulties ahead: in many communities, particularly the larger ones, the number of pastors is decreasing as the population increases. At times bereaved families, and the funeral directors who serve them, have difficulty finding clergy to take funerals on short notice—and almost all funerals are held on short notice.

Pastors, of course, must give top priority to funerals involving their parishioners. Some now decline to take funerals for outsiders. I can understand that attitude, although I cannot adopt it myself: I give the benefit of any doubts I may have when asked to take funerals for those with no church affiliation. My old-fashiond pastoral conscience will not let me be as tough as I sometimes think I should be.

Funerals are but one of the many duties a pastor has. And I have sensed in recent years that with declines in active church affiliations more and more demands are being made on a pastor's time and energy, both by the congregation and its members and by persons and agencies not associated with the congregation.

The setting of pastoral priorities, often done in anguish and prayer, is not easy for most of us today. But we continue to give top priority to funerals because we think that we can still do things for the grief-stricken which can be done only by us—even for many who have no active church affiliation.

A document from the earliest years of Protestantism states, "It is our task at burial to comfort each other in the Lord." That sums up my basic pastoral approach to the funeral.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

CHEK airs updated World Vision TV special

'I'm Hungry' on Thursday

More than 30 gripping personal stories filmed around the world will bring the reality of hunger to the screen in the updated version of World Vision's national television special "I'm Hungry" on Thursday. The special will be shown on CHEK TV in Victoria from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The program blends an authoritative presentation of the facts of global hunger with personal stories that will help viewers of all ages understand the meaning of hunger.

Host Willaim Newell is an articulate, moving and credible spokesman on behalf of the world's hungry. During his many overseas trips he has had many opportunities to speak with the destitute and needy and to offer them encouragement and hope through programs that meet their needs.

World Vision of Canada is a non-profit Christian humanitarian organization that is dedicated to helping the hurting and hungry world. Since its founding in 1950, World Vision has spent millions of dollars on relief, child care, medical aid, development assistance, evangelism and Christian leadership development throughout the world.

World Vision of Canada has involved hundreds of thousands of people in the fight against hunger. During this national special, some of those people from across the country express their concern for the plight of the world's 800 million who suffer from malnutrition.

The numbers are overwhelming. "I'm Hungry" makes global need personal, and offers tangible ways to understand the need and give practical help.

World Vision, a non-profit, interdenominational Christian humanitarian organization, was founded in 1950 by Dr. Bob Pierce.

It was originally created to serve the needs of children orphaned by the Korean War. Since then, its work has expanded worldwide, to include a wide range of projects in 50 countries. In its 27 years, the organization has contributed millions of dollars in direct international aid.

Included in its humanitarian activities is the feeding, clothing, nurturing, healing and Christian education of more than 125,000 children in 45 countries.

World Vision's relief activities include providing food, medical aid and emergency housing for people suffering as a result of war or natural disasters.

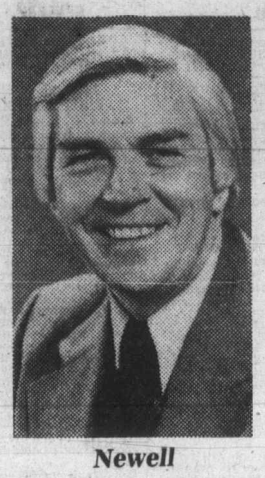
In addition, WV teams worldwide help people learn to produce adequate food, earn an income and create a community life which will result in long-term survival and growth.

The interdenominational agency is also involved in evangelism, Christian leadership development and the support of national churches.

Through this national television special on hunger, World Vision will provide an opportunity for millions across Canada to:

- Help fight raw hunger with emergency food relief.
- Help fight disease and suffering caused by hunger and malnutrition.
- Help fight poverty, illiteracy and the lack of adequate tools that keep communities and nations from learning how to prevent hunger.

Approximately 85 per cent of World Vision's annual budget is spent in direct ministry. Over the past five years, total overhead has averaged only 15 per cent.



Newell

Working closely with local existing organizations and national churches, World Vision directly funds existing or proposed programs in areas proven to be competently organized and meaningful. It sets up its own field programs only in those areas where none exist to meet a given need.

As much as possible, World Vision works through nationals in each country—leaders most familiar with the customs and needs of their people. Its overseas staff includes only 20 North Americans, but some 500 nationals. Another 2,000 nationals are involved with World Vision at the project level. At present there are World Vision field offices in Bangladesh, Brazil, Ethiopia, Hong Kong, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, the Ivory Coast, Kenya, Korea, Haiti, the Philippines, Taiwan and Thailand.

The success of World Vision's efforts is nowhere more evident than in its birthplace. Korean programs once devoted to saving war-ravaged children from disease and death now operate to train healthy, educated children for college and for productive lives. Girls learn dressmaking, embroidery, and other vocational training courses; scholarships are given to gifted students. World Vision sponsors Korean community development projects, a leprosy treatment and research center, nutritional education, farming and other programs.

Other World Vision "success" stories involve long-range development projects which are now self-supporting. Fishing co-operatives hve been developed in the Philippines. Muslim refugees on Mindanao have been relocated and rehabilited. People in India, Ethiopia and Bangladesh have been given "food-for-work", with the materials and assistance needed to dig deep freshwater wells. Many African communities have been helped to improve their families, health, education and economic standards. In Haiti, every person under 20 years of age is being innoculated through the C.A.T. Project (Campaign Against Tuberculosis) while through the Reforestation Project hundreds of thousands of tiny saplings are rejuvenating the mountainsides.

World Vision is funded by voluntary contributions from individuals, organizations and churches in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States. Donations of high protein foods, vitamins and medicines are received from various corporations throughout the country. As a validated voluntary agency, World Vision also works closely with (CIDA) Canadian Development Association.

Choristers' fresh-up March 31

Saturday, March 31 is shaping up as a day of technical refreshment for church choir singers, choir directors, accompanists and all people interested in choral techniques as a means to spiritual and emotional well-being.

The B.C. Boys Choir, together with the newly-formed B.C. Girls Choir under director Donald Forbes, all of Vancouver, will available to lovers of the choral art at a special workshop in the Memorial Hall auditorium on Vancouver Street at 2 p.m.

Forbes and his singers will bring their own talents and sufficient copies of musical scores to enable those present to participate in a musically helpful and worthwhile experience.

School choirs, secular choirs, concert choirs—all are welcome as well as singers of any age.

The 40 boys Forbes is bringing with him range in age from nine to 22 years, while the 20 girls span the years 14 to 24. Singers are asked to leave $1 at the door to assist the expenses.

Forbes, director of music at St. Andrew's Wesley United Church in Vancouver, will present an evening program with his young singers at 7:30 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral that same day.

Edmonton sister Lenten missioner

Sister Thelma-Anne, SSJD, sister-in-charge of St. John's Priory, Edmonton, will be the Lenten missioner at St. Barnabas' Anglican Church Monday to Thursday.

The theme of the mission is Barriers to Faith, "faith" here including a variety of meanings from intellectual belief to a warm and living relationship with God.

Sister Thelma-Ann's training in philosophy has equipped her well for the role of contemporary apologist for the Christian Faith. Her order, the Sisterhood of St. John the Divine, is the only Anglican order founded in this country.

The planned format of the evening sessions, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., includes addresses in the church, followed by group discussion in the hall.

Various meetings have been scheduled during the daytime, including meetings with the Anglican Church Women and Altar Guild, two Children's Hours from 2 to 3 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. This hour of mixed activities will provide something for the children to look forward to in the School break. An informal pot luck supper is also planned for young adults on Wednesday.

Sister Thelma-Anne

The mission will be followed by a 24-hour beginners' instructed retreat at Queenswood from after supper Friday to Saturday evening. Sisters Marguerite Lalonde and Monnina McKenna of the Sisters of Saint Anne will jointly conduct the retreat.

Everyone is welcome to attend any of these events. Further information available at 595-8242.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Big male choirs readying songs

The University of California, Los Angeles, Men's Glee Club of 30 singers under conductor Donn Weiss, in concert with the 50-member Arion Male Voice Choir, will present a concert at Oak Bay United Church, 1369 Mitchell, next Friday at 8 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door, or earlier from members of the Arion Choir, at the church office or from members of Oak Bay AOTS Men's Club which is sponsoring this event. Admission is $2.50 and for students and senior citizens $1.50. Weiss has been a faculty member of the university for 18 years and has had wide experience in conducting, composing, leading church choirs and adjudicating. The Glee Club will present a program of sacred music, 20th century compositions, spirituals and music of the Beatles. Conductor of the 87-year-old Arion Choir is Tony Nicholas, a graduate in music of Trinity College, London.

A group from the RCMP, Victoria and district police forces will conduct the service at Parkdale Evangelical Free Church on Sunday at 6 p.m. Recently organized, the Christian Policeman's Association has grown quickly. Members from the various area police forces meet for fellowship and expression of their faith in Jesus Christ. Everyone is welcome to this inspirational evening at Parkdale, corner of Tolmie and Jackson.

Madeleine Shields, director of Victoria's new Single Parent Resource Centre, will speak on One Parent Families at 12:10 p.m. Wednesday in St. John's Church, Quadra Street near Pandora. Talk, part of the Noon Forum series Values in the Human Struggle, consists of a 20-minute address followed by a 20-minute question and answer period. Tea and coffee served free from 11:30 a.m. in the church. Free parking in lot behind the church.

A congregational family service will be held Sunday at 11 a.m. at First United Church, Quadra at Balmoral.

Witnesses meeting during weekend

Several hundred persons are meeting this weekend for the semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses. Morning and afternoon sessions are being held today and Sunday at the S. J. Willis School on Quadra.

The program is developed around the theme of Keeping Clean and Zealous for Fine Works, featuring talks and interviews on the need to eradicate literal and moral pollution in society, and to build up a positive approach to living. Personal and family involvement in this program will be encouraged; faith in God's purpose to have a cleansed earth is highlighted.

Other highlights include water baptism for newly dedicated servants of God, on today.

On Sunday, April 1 at 1:30 p.m., Richard Grant of Toronto will carry the assembly theme into the public address, entitled A Cleansed Earth — Will You Live To See It?.

Discussing the practical aspects of the assembly program, Overseer George Wilson of Victoria said "Jesus drew illustrations and talked about the principle of cleanness, and gave us an example of a clean, moral and healthy life. Moral cleanness is often put secondary to literal cleanness, but both aspects are most important. When we consider God's purpose to have a clean earth with clean upright standards of control, it behooves us all to think more seriously about the part we play in that purpose."

"A lead must be taken against the moral degradation that is affecting family life and society," Wilson said, "and as Jehovah's Witnesses we urge sincere persons to keep clean and zealous for fine works, and to view the Bible as containing the solution to human problems. Faith, knowledge, prayer and Christian activity is the present and future pattern for peace of mind and happiness."

Adventists seek funds

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is studying the medical needs of the church in Argentina and Bolivia with an eye to boosting medical missions in South America, and to this end the local church will be accepting offerings this month.

Adventists operate more than 400 hospitals, clinics, medical launches and airplanes around the world.

Now the church plans to open a hospital in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, reports local SDA communications secretary Kathleen Piper. It will be the first Adventist medical institution in that nation.

Character Home

A 3 yr. old home, beautifully built on a parklike property, over 400 ft. road frontage, close to swimming and fishing. Seclusion without that closed in feeling! About 2 acres cleared, it is well drained, has a small pond at the back. The home is truly inviting, as you look down the hall from the front entrance to the living rm. with its big hewn beamed ceiling, its wall of light toned stone housing a big heatilator fireplace with long cantilevered hearth. Dining is in line with big picture window, thermopane, overlooking a pretty wooded knoll. A lovely open staircase leads to the three bedrms. up. You'll love the big bright country kitchen, the convenience of the utility across the hall. Those bedrms. are most appealing, master has own balcony and a skylight just to let in the moon and stars. At ground level the full basement has a roughed in f.p. double glass doors to outside and room for development. All just 30 miles from Victoria. Asking $71,000.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

WE WISH TO EXTEND OUR heartfelt thanks to our relations, friends and the Britannia Lodge AP & AM. No. 73 B.C.R. Victoria, for their kindnesses, messages of sympathy and charitable donations, during the loss of our beloved husband, father and grandfather, James Somerville Dunlop M.B.E. Special thanks go to Dr. A. Nyhof and staff of the Victoria General Hospital (annexe), McCall Bros. and Rev. Bruce Malloy. — Very Sincerely Mrs. Dorothy Dunlop and family.

Mrs. Audrey Jackson and family wish to extend their sincere thanks to all our dear friends for their kind support on the loss of our beloved RONALD JACKSON; husband, father and grandfather. We wish also to extend special thanks to Archdeacon GREENHALGH, Doctors Gib McLEAN, SIDDIQUI and HURLEY and to the wonderful nursing staff of the Intensive Care Unit, Jubilee Hospital.

309 IN MEMORIAM

WEST: In loving memory of my dear Husband and father Mervyn Earl (Bud) West, who passed away March 11, 1972.
There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went,
There is someone who thinks of you daily,
And tries to be brave and content.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget.
But time so far has only proven,
How much we miss you yet.
God gave us strength to carry on,
And courage to bear the blow,
But what it meant to lose you, Bud
No one but God will know.
Sadly missed by his loving wife, Jane and sons Ronald and Gary, daughter-in-law, Barbara.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

Heavy are our hearts today,
Memory brings you back once more,
To the time when you were with us,
To the happy
days of yore.

Saanich weighing bylaw review cost

A review of Saanich bylaws dating back to 1906 will be undertaken by a law student this year, providing the price is right, council's budget committee decided Friday.

The right price as far as the committee is concerned is no more than $4,000.

Several aldermen were visibly upset with municipal clerk Robert Sharp's suggestion that a third-year law student receive $6,000 for four month's employment with the municipality.

The student had received more than $6,000 doing similar work in another municipality last summer, he noted.

"We have to pay the union rate," he said. "We have a bargaining unit that is quite militant at the moment."

He argued that the price was not out of line "when you consider we are paying typists in the hall $1,100 a month for less complex work."

Ald. David Paterson said the position should come under exempt staff status and not be governed by the union contract.

"If the position is advertised at $1,000 a month, you'll be flooded with applications," he contended.

Paterson said if the review could not be done for less than $4,000, "then forget it."

In other business, the committee:

- Referred to its personnel committee a suggestion that the position of administrator be changed to one of municipal manager.
- Urged a tightening of procedures at municipal hall to eliminate costly telephone bills.

Mayor Mel Couvelier was unsuccessful in a bid to establish a policy of having all long distance calls made collect.

The $12,450 estimate this year for telephones in the administration, personnel, lands and clerk's office was up 30 per cent over last year, he said. The budget was later cut to $11,000.

Vaccine sent to Africans

TORONTO (CP). — The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund is shipping several hundred thousand doses of meningitis vaccine to Mali and Upper Volta to help contain an outbreak of the disease in the border region of the two West African countries.

EMI patient injured in one-storey plunge

The man was described as in critical condition Friday night by a hospital official.

Dr. Ronald Anderson, director of EMI, said the victim was not under escort at the time and was entitled to a certain degree of freedom when he fell from the second-floor roof garden of the hospital. Anderson said he spoke with the patient after the mishap and was told it was an accidental fall.

Musical treat on tap

PARKSVILLE — Ballenas high school was the setting for musical treat when a recent concert was presented by the Amity Singers of Victoria under the direction of the well-known conductor Jon Washburn.

The audience was taken back in time to the age of Elizabeth I in a program of lute songs and madrigals and numbers from an unknown past and a lute solo accompanied by Washburn.

The rousing Coronation Anthem Number 2, The King Shall Rejoice by Handel opened the second half and the program concluded with several moving spirituals. The enthusiastic audience insisted on an encore, which was given.

A highly-polished performance was presented by the choir, which was formed in 1960.

Its perfection is the result of years of hard work and dedication and extensive musical training under a series of distinguised conductors.

Widely respected in musical circles across Canada, Jon Washburn is conductor and musical director of the Vancouver Chamber Choir and the Amity Singers in Victoria, and also director of choral activities at Vancouver Community College.

He is familiar to radio audiences as the authoratative host of the Sunday morning program Choral Concert.

Victoria council rejects cutthroat plans again

The on-again, off-again proposal to bring cutthroat trout back to Craigflower Creek by raising the level of upper and lower Thetis Lakes was turned off again Thursday by Victoria city council.

But while sinking the project, the aldermen hinted that it might be floating again later this year.

Several aldermen also admitted that the proposal was doomed because the city asked the provincial government for concessions that were impossible to deliver.

Basically, the scheme called for the raising of Thetis Lake which would enable the provincial fish and wildlife branch to release water into Craigflower Creek during summer when the creek is usually dried up.

One of the conditions the city attached to its endorsement of the scheme was a guarantee by the provincial government to prevent any further pollution or development in the upper and lower Thetis Lake watershed.

Ald. Robin Blencoe told council it was wrong to attach that condition.

"That's a red herring. It's got nothing to do with the proposal before us and should be subject to separate discussions with the province," he said.

A number of aldermen agreed with Blencoe and hinted that they would be willing to give favorable consideration to a new proposal without attaching conditions the government couldn't possibly meet.

Council decided the best way to keep the matter alive was to table it.

Merger parley sparks clashes

DUNCAN — The oft-times-expressed ill feeling between aldermen of the city of Duncan and North Cowichan surfaced again recently on the issue of Chemainus' possible separation for the south end of the North Cowichan municipality.

Tempers flared following Duncan council's recent 4-3 motion to meet with Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce, following a request for the meeting from the chamber.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss restructuring the existing boundries between North Cowichan and Duncan.

She accused Duncan of "acting unilaterally," which she said North Cowichan "had never done."

She said: "When Eagle Heights wanted fire protection to be provided by North Cowichan, we would not enter into negotiations with them, because they were already discussing the matter with Duncan.

"If we had decided to act unilaterally, we would have had our own new police station long before now," she said.

Negotiations are still going on for a new police station to be shared by North Cowichan and Duncan.

Ald. Robertson said her views on the matter were shared by most of North Cowichan council.

However, Ald. Ron McKinnon took a different viewpoint.

"The action of Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce and Duncan in arranging their meeting to discuss possible boundary restructuring does not bother me at all," he said.

"The chamber can do anything they want. There would be no difference if the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce wished to meet with North Cowichan council. It would be perfectly all right for us to meet with them."

Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin said he "was at a loss to understand what all the fuss was about."

"This is just sheer pettiness on the part of North Cowichan," Paskin said.

"It's the old paranoia of North Cowichan versus Duncan. It puzzles me why they (North Cowichan) should be so concerned.

"The policy of this council has always been to meet with any group that has requested a meeting with it. Why we have even been known to meet with North Cowichan," he said jokingly.

"I don't consider going to a meeting with the Chemainus chamber is in any way acting unilaterally. If any members of North Cowichan council wish to attend, they are welcome."

Paskin said he would like to stress, however, that "we (council) have no control over whom our Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce wishes to meet, and quite rightly so. We would never question the rights of the chamber to meet with anyone."

"The question of restructuring the boundaries between the borders of North Cowichan and the city of Duncan has long been a contentious issue. Ever since I've been on council Duncan has favored extension of Duncan's boundaries to include North Cowichan's south end," Paskin said.

Duncan administrator Paul Douville said a meeting has been arranged between the Chemainus chamber and council for 7:30 p.m. on Monday.

Heritage branch gives pointers

PARKSVILLE — Robert Broadland of the provincial heritage conservation branch was guest speaker at a recent meeting of District 69 Historical Society and outlined some of the functions of the ministry.

Broadland explained the heritage conservation branch is largely an advisory body, with expertise available to groups planning a heritage project.

Although financing is available under some conditions, funding should be done locally as much as possible, he said.

The speaker also spoke of the preservation of heritage sites, pointing out that even though they might be historically interesting in the immediate area, they should have province-wide significance and for this reason caution has to be used in this field.

Asked about heritage parks or villages such as Barkerville or Fort Steele, Broadland warned of the dangers of creating heritage dumping grounds.

Such projects have to be carefully planned and are extremely expensive to set up and maintain, he said.

Coast tales theatre fare

Old college try sure at concert

NANAIMO — With members of the Vancouver Island zone of the B.C. Touring Council due to hold a two-day meeting at Malaspina College today and Sunday, arrangements have been completed to stage a free public showcase concert in the College Theatre.

Six different groups have confirmed that they will be performing in today's concert, which is timed for 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., and it is hoped that as many people as possible will bring their children along to enjoy what promises to be a varied and lively program.

All those taking part will be out to make a lasting impression with the delegates to the touring council meeting, for many of the organizations attending are now in the process completing bookings for the 1979-80 season.

Those taking part in the concert include the City Centre Brass Quintet, Mountain Dance Theatre, magician Ken Benoy, the Cortes Island Singers, a flute and guitar duo, Cathy Cernauskas and Bruce Clausen, and the Vancouver new-music ensemble, Days Months and Years To Come.

Anti-Semitic arms boost wide concern

GENEVA (Reuter) — Jewish leaders from around the world this week expressed concern that neo-Nazi and anti-Semitic groups in Western Europe have started building up arsenals.

Leading members of the World Jewish Congress, linking Jewish communities in more than 60 countries, said police had seized weapons caches from "very small" anti-Semitic groups in France and West Germany, adding this phenomenon had emerged only in recent months.

The congress leaders, meeting for a three-day session of their governing board, told a news conference they were also deeply concerned at attempts backed by some religious sects to claim that Nazi mistreatment of Jews had been exaggerated.

Congress Secretary-General Gerhart Riegner condemned the publication recently of "dozens of books pretending that the holocaust never took place" and campaigns to prove that Jews exaggerated their abuse under the Nazis to gain reparations payments from West Germany after the Second World War.

"These falsifications are a dangerous development," he said. He told reporters several national Jewish groups had set up committees to counter "the falsification of history" and monitor anti-Semitic activities in their home countries.

Dr. Maurice Grynfogel, regional chairman for Europe, said efforts to play down Jewish suffering in Nazi labor and extermination camps had been supported by some religious sects though the campaign was "frequently anti-Semitic in its motivation and in its exploitation."

Jewish groups are worried that there might be attempts to create international racist organizations, Grynvogel said.

He said the congress wanted a body such as the Council of Europe to take steps for the standard application of laws against such discrimination.

France and Britain have such laws but they are difficult to apply, he added.

Rieger added that world Jewish leaders considered Britain's National Front "the most dangerous" of the new groups because of its electoral potential and plans to field candidates in forthcoming elections for the European parliament.

But none of the groups had sympathy among authorities and Jews did not feel that their communities were threatened by society, Jewish leaders stressed.

The board meeting—attended by observers from Hungary for the first time—charged that there had been an "alarming growth of anti-Semitic propaganda" in Soviet media.

The board said it acknowledged with appreciation a considerable increase in Soviet Jewish emigration during the second half of last year and hoped to find a way of discussing other problems with Soviet authorities.

Congress leaders, who began the twice-yearly meeting Wednesday, said they had no indications thus far that Iran's 50,000 Jews had suffered more than any other minority under the Islamic revolution.

CP Air cross-Canada ceiling lifted

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air has been given the right to compete with Air Canada on an equal footing on Canadian transcontinental air routes under a federal cabinet order announced Friday.

The all-out competition, affecting traffic between Montreal and Vancouver, will centre on routes where both national airlines now compete.

Until now CP Air was restricted to capturing 25 per cent of the capacity of the transcontinental route.

If CP Air wishes to extend the competition to the Atlantic region or other parts of Canada it now does not service, it will have to apply to the Canadian Transport Commission for approval.

CP Air has been asking the government for permission to compete with Air Canada with less restrictions for some time now.

A spokesman for Transport Minister Otto Lang said the matter has come before cabinet a number of times.

The press release said the decision is in accord with Lang's statement on national air policy in the Commons in November, 1977.

He said then:

"In the case of the mainline carriers we will be seeking a removal of the remaining restrictions that exist in terms of competition between them, but with the substitution of certain other restrictions, likely in the hands of the Canadian transport commission, to ensure that competition does not do disservice to the travelling public in terms of higher costs and higher fares."

The press release said steps will be taken to ensure that no wasteful competition takes place between Air Canada and CP Air.

Les Benjamin, the New Democratic Party spokesman for transportation, predicted short-term benefits only for the travelling public as a result.

"It will be like a gas war," he said.

He said his party was against the new policy because it felt transportation was a public service, like sewer and other essential services.

"We're finally off the ground," said Ian Gray, CP Air president, in a Vancouver release in response to the announcement.

"Everyone from within the company, from myself down to the fellow on the ramp, is very pleased with the opportunity to offer competitive service now on our transcontinental routes, without any restrictions.

"Now we have to produce the product and make sure that we live up to our reputation of being a good competitor.

Gray said CP Air will "have to add a few more employees to the Vancouver payroll so it's pretty good news for the city as well as the airline."

In Montreal, Air Canada president Claude Taylor said in a statement that the airline and its 21,000 employees "are ready and more than willing" to meet the stepped-up competition.

"We've reached the stage where a transition is in order, and Air Canada is mature and efficient enough to stand on its own without protection," Taylor said.

Airport tax hike delayed?

OTTAWA (UPC) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday he will try to delay proposed increases that would have almost doubled the air transportation tax to $15 for domestic travel next month.

The increases, announced in Chretien's November budget, were due to come into force April 1, for tickets purchased in Canada and on July 1 for tickets bought outside of Canada.

The tax will now be increased after the Excise Tax Act receives royal assent — probably after the federal election.

The budget proposals would have increased the tax from $8 to $15 for domestic travel and from $8 to $12 for international travel. Revenues are used to finance the air transport services provided by the transport ministry.

More arrests and threats in Charlottes

Premier Bennett demanded that charges against the loggers be dropped while federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said in a telegram to B.C. Forests Minister Tom Waterland that arrests would continue until the timber cutting stopped.

There was a glimmer of hope that the dispute could be resolved. Federal and provincial officials are to meet in Vancouver Tuesday to talk over the issue.

In Victoria, Bennett told the Colonist that he and International Woodworkers of America president Jack Munro were on the same side on this issue.

"What Jack is really doing (threatening to pull the entire IWA workforce out unless the conflict is settled) is to reinforce to the federal government that the people of this province are serious.

"We have worked together before on critical issues. When you strip away the politics, we can accomplaish quite a lot and will accomplish quite a lot.

Bennett said his government's objection to the way Ottawa was handling things was that the difference of interpretation of the federal Fisheries Act should be resolved "without the workers of this province being threatened.

Three more fallers were arrested Friday, bringing the total of arrests in the 10-day-old conflict to 12. Eleven of the charges were against loggers for undertaking actions that would harm fish-spawning beds while one was against Peter Pfister, logging supervisor of QC Timber, for allegedly counselling an act that would break the law.

Carefree Kimberley racing for home

It's ready, set and go for "miracle child" Kimberley Vis, 3, right, as she races with brother Marty, 6, in Royal Jubilee Hospital playground with push from parents Patsy and Corrie. Kimberley was released from hospital Friday after recovering from near-drowning accident Feb. 7 in a water-filled ditch near her Port Alberni home. Weeks after her physical revival, Kimberley regained consciousness through heroic efforts of doctors employing new brain-saving techniques.

Anarchists go wild after jobs protest

PARIS (UPI) — Thousands of workers protesting layoffs marched through Paris Friday but the demonstration ended in a rampage by anarchists who looted shops and smashed windows in the worst violence since the 1968 student uprising.

Riot police fired tear gas to disperse a crowd of youths who broke into the back door of the famous Cafe de La Paix on the Place de L'Opera.

The youths set three cars on fire, overturned scores of others, lit fires and threw Molotov cocktails at police who charged swinging clubs.

Police reported 40 persons arrested and about 50 police injured. Three professional photographers were also among those hurt. Authorities said 103 shops were looted.

The outbreak of violence for which the anarchist movement "Autonome Brigades" claimed responsibility in a communique to the press was the worst since the the May 1968 rioting during the student "revolution" that for a time threatened the government of President Charles De Gaulle. It followed a peaceful demonstration by thousands of workers protesting 20,000 layoffs in the French steel industry.

Union officials claimed 150,000 persons demonstrated although the government estimated the number at between 50,000 and 60,000.

Bhutto's bid fails

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistan's Supreme Court said Saturday former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto be hanged unless pardoned by the nation's head of state.

The court refused to review its 4-3 split decision of Feb. 6 upholding Bhutto's murder conspiracy conviction and death sentence.

EGGS-PERTS TAP DOOMSDAY SHELL

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Experts of the Colombian Agricultural Institute have been called in to examine an egg which carries a message apparently forecasting the end of the world.

A peasant woman in the village of Tebaida, 350 kilometres west of Bogota, found the egg when she made the rounds of her chicken coop earlier this week.

On the shell, in raised letters, were words which read in English translation: "Final judgment. Repent. God."

The woman took the egg to her local priest, who has referred the matter to the Bishop Libardo Ramirez Gomez of Armenia province.

The agricultural experts, meanwhile, have been asked to make their own study of the phenomenon.

Help fingertip away for family problems

The provincial government will establish a Zenith number for children in need of assistance, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Friday.

Children who might need assistance because of emotional or physical abuse and parents, or other concerned people "can reach out and make sure help is available at any time of the day or night," the minister said.

She did not elaborate in a prepared speech delivered at the annual dinner of the Greater Victoria United Way campaign.

CAIRO (AP) — U.S. President Carter, unable thus far to win broader Arab backing for the Egyptian-Israeli peace settlement, has made a new overture to the Palestine Liberation Organization, repeating his offer to deal with the PLO if it will recognize Israel's right to exist.

The PLO has spurned similar proposals in the past. Carter's offer to "immediately start working directly" with the PLO came in an interview with Egyptian television broadcast here Friday, as Egyptian and Israeli leaders prepared for Monday's signing of the historic treaty between their two countries at a Washington ceremony.

Carter said his offer depends on PLO acceptance of United Nations Security Council Resolution 242.

The resolution, accepted by most Arab states as a basis for a Middle East peace, calls for Israel to return war-won Arab lands in exchange for Arab guarantees of Israel's right to exist within secure and recognized boundaries.

The Egyptian interviewer asked Carter whether the United States soon might start talks with the Palestinians over their grievances.

"Yes, we would like to have direct relations with the Palestinians," Carter said. "We will do this as part of the negotiating process in the future.

Stocks soar, Labor expecting defeat

LONDON (AP) — Stocks soared Friday on the London Stock Exchange as the country headed toward a crucial confidence vote in Parliament that many Britons believe will topple the Labor government and clear the way for the Conservatives to take power for the first time in five years.

Home Secretary Merlyn Rees surprised television viewers by saying in an interview the government has little chance of surviving the vote.

Boosted by the prospect of an end to socialist government in Britain, investors began pouring in buy orders as soon as the exchange opened its doors. The Financial Times industrial index, the main market indicator, jumped 20 points to end the day at 534.6.

"People are saying it does not matter what you buy, it's all going up," said an excited stock dealer.

Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government has been predicting it could win a general election battle and Rees's statement raised eyebrows among his colleagues.

Rees, who managed the campaign that carried Callaghan to the party leadership in 1976, was asked by a BBC interviewer if "you are going to survive." He first replied "No," then added that he had a feeling "at this moment we have a very good chance of being defeated."

Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative party leader, decided Thursday night to put the Laborites to the test with a no-confidence vote in the House of Commons next Wednesday.

She said she is sure she can win with the help of the small parties in the Commons. If the Laborites cannot muster a majority to vote its confidence in the Callaghan government, a general election will be required.

The 53-year-old Mrs. Thatcher, who would be Britain's first woman prime minister, is relying on anti-Labor feeling

Symbol of crisis

Ottawa protest honors 'housewife of the year'

OTTAWA — Margaret Trudeau was honored as housewife of the year on Parliament Hill Friday—by a group of 10 women who threw flowers into the Centennial Flame.

Judith Ramirez, of Toronto spokesman for the Wages for Housewives Committee, told reporters the main aim of the demonstration was to protest government cuts in day care services, mother's allowances payments and funds for women.

She said the estranged wife of Prime Minister Trudeau was selected to be honored by the group for her courage to stand up for women's financial independence and dignity.

"I don't think Margaret Trudeau is a typical housewife," said Ms. Ramirez, who is also director of Toronto's Immigrant Women's Centre.

"But she does symbolize the conflict and the crisis that many women are thrown into when they have to pick between themselves and their children in order to seek some fulfilment."

She would not comment on Mrs. Trudeau's personal life except to say the group would "stand by her in a period when she's being maligned and abused."

Kurdistan part reaches port

HALIFAX (CP) — The stern section of the broken tanker Kurdistan reached its destination in the Strait of Canso at Port Hawkesbury just before midnight local time Friday and was expected to be linked to a salvage barge within the hour.

A DC-3 aircraft from the Canada Centre for Remote Sensing, meanwhile, spotted more accurately an oil stain that threatens the southeastern Cape Breton beaches.

A government spokesman said the stain covered an area about 760 square miles in area.

"The insurance company and the owners of te Kurdistan are going to get one hell of a bill," Mike Turner, a Coast Guard spokesman said Friday night.

Women laws lagging

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Justice Minister Marc Lalonde took the provinces to task Friday for doing virtually nothing to better the lot of women.

"No provincial government has yet adopted an overall plan for improving women's status, accompanied by the necessary government machinery to ensure its implementation," Lalonde told an audience of university students.

The minister, whose responsibilities include women's issues, said such areas as health and social services, education, and the implementation of family law fall under provincial jurisdiction. And nine out of every 10 Canadians workers are governed by provincial labor laws.

Lalonde said he had written to all 10 provinces asking them for suggestions for a national policy for women. Not all responded, but the ones which did indicated they'd rather handle the matter themselves.

"All we (Ottawa) can do then is offer our support," he said.

Lalonde, however, refused to specify when long-awaited federal reforms to rape provisions in the Criminal Code would become law.

He said the changes would consider rape as a form of assualt rather than as a moral offence—a fundamental change long demanded by feminists.

Lalonde's audience of 65, almost all women, appeared skeptical of his intentions. In a give-and-take session after his 90-minute speech, one student attacked his talk about women's equality as a mere "electoral gimmick."

Doctors' pullout assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney urged the hierarchy of the federal New Democratic Party Friday to make an election issue of the withdrawal of doctors from government-run medical insurance.

Blakeney told about 50 members of the NDP federal council that doctors were saying: "Go see your doctor, but take your tin cup because you've got to ask for charity."

Socialized medical insurance was pioneered in Saskatchewan during the 1960s by its Canadian Commonwealth Federation premier, T. C. (Tommy) Douglas, who later became federal NDP leader and now is a B.C. MP.

In an emotional address, Blakeney told the party strategists they owed it to Douglas to fight for survival of medical insurance so that all Canadians could afford proper health care.

"We better get out and deliver for Tommy," Blakeney said, referring to the federal election expected to be held within a few months.

Doctors are opting out of the system so they can charge patients fees higher than the government-run insurance plans pay them.

If you are 65 years of age or over, a Pharmacare card is sufficient proof of identity.

Mothers or guardians applying for children under 16 are required to furnish only a medical plan number or a birth certificate for such children. Young people, 16 and over, who have not yet received such identification, may establish their eligibility by presenting their birth certificate or other acceptable identification—in person—at the office of their local Government Agent (or, in the Lower Mainland, at their local Motor Vehicle Branch office).

Those unable to apply in person may delegate a suitable individual to act on their behalf—that person must utilize a Power of Attorney form, available where applications are made.

Applications for free shares will be accepted only until June 15, 1979. Distribution of these shares by B.C.R.I.C. will begin immediately after British Columbia Day, August 6, 1979. The person making application has until September 30, 1979 to pick up the shares.

Additional shares.

If you qualify for free shares, you have the option of purchasing up to 5,000 additional shares at a price substantially below their underlying value. This price will be specified on your application form.

No individual or corporation may own more than 1% of the voting shares of B.C.R.I.C. (although pension funds may own up to 3%). Corporations and pension funds, however, are not allowed to participate in the intial share issue.

Can I sell later?

Yes. Stock market trading in shares is expected to commence shortly after the distribution date. At this point, a "market value" will be established. However, it is hoped that most British Columbians will not only retain, but enlarge, their share holdings. In this way, they will participate directly in the continued expansion of our resource industries, while ensuring that control of these industries remains in B.C.

Other questions?

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist reporter

The fate of a federal freedom of information bill depends on how long the present parliament sits, State Secretary John Roberts said in Victoria Friday.

A bill ensuring public access to government documents has been drafted, and if Parliament does not dissolve for an election for a few weeks it will be brought to the floor of the House of Commons, Roberts told a conference on Freedom of Information legislation at the University of Victoria.

The bill will put the onus on government to prove why information should not be released, and an information commissioner with considerable powers will be named to rule on applications for information which have been rejected by government officials, Roberts said.

Ministers will publish annually a list of documents and information within their jurisdictions, but documents which "could be injurious to international relations, national defence, national security or federal-provincial relations" will be exempted from disclosure.

Also exempted will be cabinet documents, information about law enforcement procedures, personal information as defined in the Human Rights Act, information which would threaten the safety of an individual, and policy advice to government departments, among other things.

The exemptions are worded to give a "bias" toward release, Roberts said, by use of words such as "could be reasonably concluded to be detrimental to . . ." a policy, government function or person, rather than the more ambiguous "might be detrimental . . ." used in the early drafts of the bill.

"The onus is on the minister to give access unless there is a compelling reason not to," Roberts said. A minister could release information on the list of exemptions if he felt it was in the public interest to do so, he added.

The information commissioner would report to Parliament and would have the powers of a federal judge, being capable of issuing subpoenas for information, and of making orders with the force of court orders.

The commissioner would have access to all documents except those which could be injurious to international relations, national defence, national security, or federal-provincial relations.

In general, the decision of the information commissioner would be final, although appeals could be made to the Federal Court of Canada in certain narrowly-defined circumstances, Roberts said.

For the most part, however, the information commissioner would not be involved in requests for information. At least 95 per cent of all inquiries will probably be handled by the information access officers in each department, Roberts said.

The bill is in agreement in many areas with the recommendations of a report from the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments co-chaired by MP Jed Baldwin, the Progressive Conservative spokesman on freedom of information, Roberts said.

Its exemptions appear to be wider than those proposed by the Canadian Bar Association, and give to the information commissioner powers which the bar association recommended, in its own model bill released Thursday, be given to the courts.

Roberts criticized the bar association for waiting until the conference to release its model bill, and said the government had moved faster than the bar association in preparing a bill.

"Had the government waited for the Canadian Bar Association to release its draft bill before preparing its own, the legislation would still be years away."

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist reporter

Freedom of Information legislation in the United States has forced law enforcement there to "grind to a halt," Vancouver regional crown counsel Allan Filmer told a conference on such legislation at the University of Victoria Friday.

The forced release of sensitive information regarding investigations, informants, and other aspects of police work had severely hampered the work of the Federal Bureau of Information in particular, Filmer said.

"Someone involved in a criminal enterprise can determine if his activities are being monitored, and the monitoring techniques used," Filmer said.

In some cases state police authorities have refused to share information with the FBI, because of the possibility that the information could be obtained from the FBI through the federal freedom of information law.

Requests for information could be used to delay court proceedings, and the time and cost involved in obtaining information could add even further to overburdened courts, Filmer added.

But Peter Grant, chairman of the Canadian Bar Association freedom of information committee, drafters of a model bill which is the main working document of the conference, said "fishing" for information was not likely to occur because the bill required someone requesting information to be able to describe the document in question quite specifically.

The model bill exempts law enforcement documents whose release could interfere with enforcement or investigation, disclose techniques used in enforcement, identify confidential sources of information, or deprive a person of the right to a fair trial.

The bill gives blanket exemption to cabinet documents, but this might not be wise, Grant admitted. He suggested that a court might be given the right to request even cabinet documents and records if such information was crucial to the rights of a defendant in a court case.

Kirk Patterson, a Vancouver lawyer attending the conference, criticized the absence of any reference in the bill to information held by corporations which in some cases might be more important to the public.

"This reinforces the misconception that the primary conflict is between the individual and the state."

Patterson said lawyers themselves had a vested interest in information, and should debate the bill among themselves.

The bill makes no mention of information that might not be compiled in a single document, he noted. Information which is in several departments or files might be important and useful to the public if there was a way to get it compiled.

Exempting all cabinet documents is far too conservative, he suggested. A freedom of information bill should deal with situations such as a blanket rule against even discussion of a uranium price-fixing cartel in which Canada may have participated, he said.

Guard shot dead as holdup began

MONTREAL (CP) — An armed security guard at an east-end credit union "never had a chance" when a young thief pulled out a gun and shot him during a holdup Friday, police said.

Henri Gagnon, 56, had been a guard at the Caisse Populaire St. Eugene de Rosemont for 14 years. His death marked the 17th slaying this year in the Montreal Urban Community.

Gagnon, a father of four, was talking to an elderly customer when three men, aged 20 to 25, entered the credit union about 1 p.m. EST.

"While one talked to a cashier, another pulled a gun and shot Gagnon in the left eye," police spokesman Normand Couillard said.

"There was no advance warning of a holdup until the shot was fired. Then the bandits shouted, 'This is a holdup, everyone lie on the floor.' "

Cabinet papers for probe

The decision to give the McDonald commission access to cabinet documents sets a major precedent for freedom of information, a Toronto lawyer said in Victoria Friday.

Peter Grant, chairman of the Canadian Bar Association committee which drew up a model freedom of information bill, said the decision marked the first time that cabinet documents had ever officially been made available in this way.

"A few documents are sent to the Dominion Archivist, and are released after 35 years, but in practical terms this is the first time cabinet documents have been made public."

It is not a first for the Commonwealth, Grant said. Last November an Australian court ordered the release of cabinet documents which had a bearing on a trial.

The federal government's decision goes beyond what the CBA has asked in its model freedom of information bill, which exempts the minutes of cabinet meetings and a number of other cabinet documents from disclosure.

Grant was in Victoria to attend a conference on freedom of information co-sponsored by the bar association and the University of Victoria. The Association's model bill was unveiled at a press conference here Thursday.

The cabinet order applies to documents from the time took office in April, 1968, to Prime Minister Trudeau the time the commission was appointed, July, 1977.

Under the order-in-council tabled in the Commons by Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais, the commission must ask Cabinet Secretary Michael Pitfield to declassify any document it wishes to make public.

The order-in-council specifies that former prime minister John Diefenbaker's written permission must be in the hands of Pitfield before any documents fron the 1957-63 period, when Diefenbaker was prime minister, may be released to the commission.

Heritage branch gives pointers

PARKSVILLE — Robert Broadland of the provincial heritage conservation branch was guest speaker at a recent meeting of District 69 Historical Society and outlined some of the functions of the ministry.

Broadland explained the heritage conservation branch is largely an advisory body, with expertise available to groups planning a heritage project.

Although financing is available under some conditions, funding should be done locally as much as possible, he said.

The speaker also spoke of the preservation of heritage sites, pointing out that even though they might be historically interesting in the immediate area, they should have province-wide significance and for this reason caution has to be used in this field.

Asked about heritage parks or villages such as Barkerville or Fort Steele, Broadland warned of the dangers of creating heritage dumping grounds.

Such projects have to be carefully planned and are extremely expensive to set up and maintain, he said.

He also spoke of the problems which might arise in converting an old building into a museum from a fire hazard point of view.

A fascinating film entitled Here Today was a part of Broadland's presentation and showed numerous heritage buildings across Canada which have been restored.

Many of these have been converted into restaurants, offices or shops without losing their historic charm.

Island's link with outside world

For Vancouver Islanders, ferries are almost as important as bread and potatoes. Nanaimo is no exception as ferries of all descriptions convey passengers and goods to various points on the mainland and elsewhere. In top photo, it's Gabriola Island ferry Quinitsa being loaded in downtown Nanaimo for its trip to Gulf Islands. Below is CPR ferry Carrier Princess, fully loaded, heading from Nanaimo Harbor for Vancouver with its heavy load, which includes railways cars.

Island

College feat ranked highly

COMOX — North Island College ranks fourth and nearly third in the numbers of students enrolled in university transfer courses, compared to other colleges.

The figures were contained in a printout from the educational data services of the B.C. ministry of education.

Dennis Wing, who heads the college, called it "a remarkable performance for a college of this kind."

He told college council members that a central campus would not have shown the same results in enrolment as is shown through the open-college concept.

"We are getting education to people where they live," Wing said.

The college here enrolled a total of 1,157 students in university transfer courses and was beaten by Vancouver, Malaspina, Douglas and Capilano colleges, although it nearly overtook the Nanaimo-based Malaspina College.

The figures shown in the report were for 18 colleges offering university transfer courses.

The North Island College figures showed excellent results in the other areas of career-technical, college preparatory and non-vocational enrolments.

Soon, Wing said, council members will have further information which will indicate the number of those enrolled who completed the courses, and who taught the courses.

The college with its open-learning concept has no central campus but offers instruction by mobile van and distance learning techniques to people in isolated areas as well as in more populated urban areas.

Man of year tabbed

The annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island at Parksville was not entirely on the transportation theme.

A lengthy business agenda was debated and either agreed or rejected, notably in the case of resolutions from the many branches.

During the convention, new executive officers were appointed, with Tofino's Walter Guppy being elected president, Nanaimo's Bruce Coleman as first vice-president and Duncan's Ajeet Bawa second vice-president.

There was praise from outgoing president Dr. Brian Perry-Whittingham of Sooke, for the work of the ACCVI's secretaries, Evan Burns of Parksville and Alice Hutchins of Nanaimo.

If the ACCVI was looking for a man of the year, it certainly found him in the shape of the voluble Tom Tryon of Parksville.

He was singled out by Eva Burns and Alice Hutchins for his efforts over eight years to have the E&N line retained, in spite of a whole series of "axe" attempts.

The "unsung hero" of the E&N saga was eulogized by the two secretaries, and then presented with a special plaque and specially commissioned drawing, to mark his efforts over a long period.

Tryon himself gave the initial credit to the man who started him off on the E&N campaign, when he handed Tryon the brief on the issue, and asked him to present it at a hearing. That man was Eva Burns' husband Ben.

From Cumberland, there was an Empire Week invitation to all ACCVI members, from Norm Alexander, Courtenay, who was one of a large contingent from that area, including the town's popular Mayor William Moncrieff.

Alexander announced that Cumberland Chamber of Commerce celebrates its 50th anniversary in May, and is arranging a lavish program of celebrations as part of the Empire Week fun and games.

For Gold River, it was a trophy convention. The Gold River chamber received the association's annual award of the Garner Tray Trophy, for the chamber doing the most in the past year to promote chambers of commerce and the interests of the community. Eva Burns handed over the award to Blanche Livingstone.

Fishy stories just had to be rampant in Parksville at this time, when herring fishing is at its peak. But it was the true one that went the rounds most, of the local fisherman whose income from a 48-hour stint was a mammoth $91,000. "But that was on a day when we had holes in the nets," so the story goes.

The story is true, but there were many more, equally true, of local people making small fortunes for just a few days' herring fishing work.

Musical treat on tap

PARKSVILLE — Ballenas high school was the setting for musical treat when a recent concert was presented by the Amity Singers of Victoria under the direction of the well-known conductor Jon Washburn.

The audience was taken back in time to the age of Elizabeth I in a program of lute songs and madrigals and numbers from an unknown past and a lute solo accompanied by Washburn.

The rousing Coronation Anthem Number 2, The King Shall Rejoice by Handel opened the second half and the program concluded with several moving spirituals. The enthusiastic audience insisted on an encore, which was given.

A highly-polished performance was presented by the choir, which was formed in 1960.

Its perfection is the result of years of hard work and dedication and extensive musical training under a series of distinguised conductors.

Widely respected in musical circles across Canada, Jon Washburn is conductor and musical director of the Vancouver Chamber Choir and the Amity Singers in Victoria, and also director of choral activities at Vancouver Community College.

He is familiar to radio audiences as the authoratative host of the Sunday morning program Choral Concert.

Merger parley sparks clashes

DUNCAN — The oft-times-expressed ill feeling between aldermen of the city of Duncan and North Cowichan surfaced again recently on the issue of Chemainus' possible separation for the south end of the North Cowichan municipality.

Tempers flared following Duncan council's recent 4-3 motion to meet with Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce, following a request for the meeting from the chamber.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss restructuring the existing boundries between North Cowichan and Duncan.

She accused Duncan of "acting unilaterally," which she said North Cowichan "had never done."

She said: "When Eagle Heights wanted fire protection to be provided by North Cowichan, we would not enter into negotiations with them, because they were already discussing the matter with Duncan.

"If we had decided to act unilaterally, we would have had our own new police station long before now," she said.

Negotiations are still going on for a new police station to be shared by North Cowichan and Duncan.

Ald. Robertson said her views on the matter were shared by most of North Cowichan council.

However, Ald. Ron McKinnon took a different viewpoint.

"The action of Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce and Duncan in arranging their meeting to discuss possible boundary restructuring does not bother me at all," he said.

"The chamber can do anything they want. There would be no difference if the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce wished to meet with North Cowichan council. It would be perfectly all right for us to meet with them."

Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin said he "was at a loss to understand what all the fuss was about."

"This is just sheer pettiness on the part of North Cowichan," Paskin said.

"It's the old paranoia of North Cowichan versus Duncan. It puzzles me why they (North Cowichan) should be so concerned.

"The policy of this council has always been to meet with any group that has requested a meeting with it. Why we have even been known to meet with North Cowichan," he said jokingly.

"I don't consider going to a meeting with the Chemainus chamber is in any way acting unilaterally. If any members of North Cowichan council wish to attend, they are welcome."

Paskin said he would like to stress, however, that "we (council) have no control over whom our Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce wishes to meet, and quite rightly so. We would never question the rights of the chamber to meet with anyone."

"The question of restructuring the boundaries between the borders of North Cowichan and the city of Duncan has long been a contentious issue. Ever since I've been on council Duncan has favored extension of Duncan's boundaries to include North Cowichan's south end," Paskin said.

Duncan administrator Paul Douville said a meeting has been arranged between the Chemainus chamber and council for 7:30 p.m. on Monday.

Old college try sure at concert

NANAIMO — With members of the Vancouver Island zone of the B.C. Touring Council due to hold a two-day meeting at Malaspina College today and Sunday, arrangements have been completed to stage a free public showcase concert in the College Theatre.

Six different groups have confirmed that they will be performing in today's concert, which is timed for 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., and it is hoped that as many people as possible will bring their children along to enjoy what promises to be a varied and lively program.

All those taking part will be out to make a lasting impression with the delegates to the touring council meeting, for many of the organizations attending are now in the process completing bookings for the 1979-80 season.

Those taking part in the concert include the City Centre Brass Quintet, Mountain Dance Theatre, magician Ken Benoy, the Cortes Island Singers, a flute and guitar duo, Cathy Cernauskas and Bruce Clausen, and the Vancouver new-music ensemble, Days Months and Years To Come.

Help for sanctuary

Future of old colliery dam located close to Nanaimo's Malaspina College Morrell wildlife sanctuary, now seems assured thanks to generosity of number of different groups and organizations. Dam used to form part of city's water system but is no longer required and there were fears it would have to be demolished. However, Malaspina launched appeal for funds to rebuild structure and soon after, National Second Century Fund of B.C. announced major contribution of $5,000 to the $115,000 drive. Cheque was handed over to sanctuary co-ordinator Dave Kerridge, right, by fund's northern Vancouver Island director Paul Smith.

WHL owners dissatisfied with some merger proposals

CHICAGO (CP) — Owners and trustees of four World Hockey Association franchises involved in expansion talks with the National Hockey League have found areas of disagreement in the proposals.

NHL president John Ziegler confirmed at a news conference Friday afternoon that, while "substantial progress" had been made in the marathon talks that stretched from Thursday afternoon through the early hours of Friday morning before a brief recess, expansion talks had broken off.

WHA president Howard Baldwin, rushing to catch a plane home to Hartford, Conn., said he remained optimistic but added: "They've got to do some work." He was referring to the NHL expansion proposals. "It's up to them (the NHL board of governors).

"The proposals were unacceptable as presented, but we've proposed some modifications."

Bill Wirtz, president of Chicago Black Hawks and chairman of the NHL expansion committee, agreed there remained some areas of concern.

"We got through all the items, but there are some fine points we'll have to clear up and should have more detailed information which should be available next week."

Although there has been much speculation about areas of disagreement, one area that stands out is in the number of players that can be protected by the WHA before heading into expansion.

However, the NHL expansion committee has apparently been firm, holding to the proposal of two skaters and two goaltenders. The four WHA franchises that would join the NHL in time for the 1979-80 season are hoping to get a new figure, possibly four skaters and one goaltender.

There have also been unconfirmed reports that Washington Capitals under the new realignment would move to the Patrick Division from the Norris Division, joining Atlanta Flames, New York Islanders, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

If this move transpires, the Capitals would be the only current NHL club to switch divisions.

New England Whalers, of which Baldwin is also president, would join the Norris Division along with incumbents Montreal Canadiens, Los Angeles Kings, Detroit Red Wings and Pittsburgh Penguins.

The WHA's Winnipeg Jets and Edmonton Oilers would enter a six-team Smythe Division with Chicago, Colorado Rockies, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks while Quebec Nordiques would enter the Adams Division with Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, Minnesota North Stars and Toronto Maple Leafs.

The WHA teams have apparently agreed on the price of entering the NHL through expansion — $6 million each — and indemnification costs of nearly $3 million for the two franchises that will fold along with the WHA — $2.85 million for Birmingham Bulls and $3.5 million for Cincinnati Stingers.

These would supposedly clear up any debts the league might be held responsible for such as players contracts. The four new teams have also agreed, say unconfirmed reports, to a $500,000 expense to cover the cost of a $50 million protection bond against such liabilities as court cases arising from loss of hockey franchises in Birmingham and Cincinnati.

Some 90 players currently playing in the WHA will revert automatically back to the NHL teams that have either owned them or drafted them since 1972. The lone exception is 50-year-old Gordie Howe of New England, who earned an exemption because of his more than 30 years in professional hockey.

Forty-five players are believed to be free of any NHL affiliation while eight players, still considered to be eligible for the NHL's amateur draft in June, would be drafted as if they had completed their junior eligibility.

These include scoring ace Wayne Gretzky, 18, who recently signed a multi-million dollar contract with Edmonton owner Peter Pocklington that doesn't expire for about 20 years.

That could be the fly in the ointment.

Others are Michel Goulet, Ricky Vaive, Greg Hartsburg, Rob Ramage and Pat Riggin, all of Birmingham; and Mike Gartner of Cincinnati.

Saanich Braves top Port Alberni in island Junior B opener

Fines and suspensions levied against Bruins

BY STAN COOPER

New Westminster Bruins, no strangers to shenanigans, will pay heavily for their latest Western Hockey League outburst.

Less than 24 hours after a game-ending brawl at Queen's Park Arena involving the Portland Winter Hawks, the Bruins Friday were handed stiff suspensions and fines by Del Wilson, WHL vice-president in charge of referees and discipline.

New Westminster coach and governor Ernie McLean was suspended indefinitely for failing to control his players during the melee which broke out with seven seconds to play.

Bruin captain John Paul Kelly and rookie Andrew Ristau were suspended five games each, teammate Boris Fistric drew a four-game suspension and five Bruins — Terry Kirkham, Rick Amann, Rob Roflik, Bruce Howes and Bill Hobbins — were suspended for three games each.

In addition, the Bruins were assessed $1,500 in fines — $1,000 to McLean and a team fine of $500 for clearing the bench to enter a fight.

New Westminster has two league games remaining and begins the Western Division playoffs in Victoria on Tuesday night. The Bruins play host to Portland on March 30 at Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver and Victoria visits Queen's Park Arena on April 1.

It's expected that Les Jackson, coach of Revelstoke Bruins in the B.C. Junior Hockey League, will replace McLean behind the bench.

Meanwhile, police in the Royal City are continuing their investigation of the affair and a spokesman said Friday charges are being considered.

General manager Brian Shaw of the Winter Hawks said he was disgusted and said he would press charges.

The Columbian reported that two Portland players were attacked by several New Westminster players with seven seconds left in the game. The evening newspaper said one Portland player had to crawl back to the players' bench after being badly beaten.

"We have to lay charges; we have no alternative," said Shaw. "I've got kids' lives at stake and some of them could have been killed."

Coach Ken Hodge of the Winter Hawks said he was sickened by what happened and "this is the worst thing I've ever seen. It was so obviously deliberate to everyone here."

McLean blamed the incident on the officiating and said the Bruins had "not been getting a fair shake" from WHL officials.

"I thought the referee lost control of the game in the second period," said McLean. "He should have thrown me out with seven seconds left for not putting five players on the ice."

The Columbian reported that the incident began with a fight between New Westminster's John Ogrodnick and Portland's Don Stewart at 19:53 of the third period.

When play was to be resumed, New Westminster put four men on the ice, then two more, and Gregson awarded Portland a penalty shot because the Bruins had too many men on the ice.

Tim Tookey shot wide against netminder Richard Martens, but not before McLean had Fistric attempt to play goal while wearing a face mask.

The newspaper reported that, when the game finally ended, members of the Bruins left their bench to join two fights in progress on the ice. Portland players did not leave the bench.

Gregson handed the Bruins seven game misconducts and seven majors. Two Portland players were penalized for fighting.

Portland, in first place in the division, won the game 4-1. The Bruins, defending Memorial Cup champions, are in third place.

Meanwhile in Victoria, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said hockey violence is a matter for the police and the people running the sport, not government.

Gardom said violence in hockey should not be allowed to continue and police may lay charges if they are called for in specific situations.

Holmes keeps ring title, Shavers KOs Norton fast

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes smashed young Ossie Ocasio to the canvas four times in the seventh round and stopped the Puerto Rican challenger at 2:38 of the round to retain the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night.

It was simply a matter of too much size, too much power and, most importantly, too much experience. Ocasio, making only his 14th pro fight, tried with all he had but he was never really in the fight.

In a preliminary to Holmes' second title defence, Earnie Shavers shocked a crowd of about 5,400 at the Las Vegas Hilton Pavilion and a national television audience by knocking favored Ken Norton down twice and stopped him at 1:58 of the first round.

The victories by Holmes and Shavers set up a title match between the two in September, although Holmes is expected to defend against Mike Weaver of Los Angeles in June, possibly in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Holmes, who weighed 214 pounds to 207 for Ocasio and who enjoyed a 3½-inch height advantage and a four-inch reach advantage, came out at the opening bell looking to land a big punch.

But Ocasio hung tough, crouching and bobbing and weaving, and keeping Holmes' timing off just enough to escape disaster. In the fifth and sixth rounds, however, the 6-foot-3, 29-year-old champion began finding the range to both the head and the body.

Then, in the seventh, Holmes wrote an end to the 23-year-old Ocasio's title dreams.

The Shavers-Norton affair was stunning in its fury and had the crowd roaring in disbelief.

With Norton on the floor for the second time, referee Miles Lane reached the count of seven and then signalled the fight was over. Norton's trainer, Bill Slaton, had signalled the referee to halt it just a moment before he did.

The 34-year-old Shavers had said before the fight that he was not going to worry about going the distance, but that he was going to come out bombing in an effort to end it fast. Norton had said he expected Shavers to come out gunning, but when Earnie did, there was nothing Norton could do about it.

The loss has to be a bitter pill for the 33-year-old Norton to swallow. He was the 11-5 favorite and plans already were in the works for him to fight Scott Ledoux in June and then await another shot at the title he lost to Holmes on a split decision here last June 9.

Norton, who weighed 225 pounds, was losing for the sixth time against 41 victories. He earned $750,000 but saw his future as a factor in the heavyweight division dim considerably.

Shavers, who weighed 210, got about $250,000. The victory was by far the biggest of his career, which was marked by victories but overshadowed with disappointing defeats.

He was knocked out in one round by Jerry Quarry back in 1974 when he appeared headed for a title shot. The veteran from Warren, Ohio, fought his way back into championship contention and then lost a title bid to Muhammad Ali on a decision Sept. 29, 1977. Then he went against Holmes here last March 25, with the winner to fight Norton for the WBC crown. Shavers was barely in the fight, losing almost every one of the 12 rounds.

Now Shavers is back again after scoring his 57th victory and his 55th knockout. He has eight losses and a draw.

Canucks scuppered by big Sabre finish

Third period goals by Craig Ramsay, Danny Gare and Richard Martin propelled Buffalo Sabres to a come-from-behind 4-3 decision over Vancouver Canucks in a National Hockey League game Friday night.

In the only other game scheduled, Philadelphia Flyers bumped the Flames 4-1 in Atlanta, getting a second-period boost by former Canuck Dennis Ververgaert and Victoria's Mel Bridgman.

A Pacific Coliseum crowd of 14,079 saw the Canucks take a 3-1 lead into the final period. The Sabres controlled the final 20 minutes however as they further protected their second-place standing in the Adams Division.

The Sabres now have an eight-point lead over third-place Toronto Maple Leafs. The loss left the second-place Canucks with a seven-point cushion over St. Louis Blues in the battle for the last playoff berth in the Smythe Division.

Sedlbauer's goal was his 39th of the season and set a single-season Vancouver record formerly shared by Don Lever and Bobby Schmautz.

Cougars top leaders

Victoria Cougars have one distinction as the Western Hockey League heads into its final few days of league play.

Cougars are the only club this season to beat the Portland Winter Hawks more than once in the Oregon city, Victoria pulling out an 8-6 decision Friday night over the Western Division champions.

It was the second win for Victoria in Portland this season and took the Cougar record to 3-9-4 (2-5-1 in Portland) in the 16-game series between the clubs.

Rookie Bob Smith of Ladysmith led the way with two goals and goalkeeper Kevin Eastman, also from the mid-Island community, made 37 saves in going the distance for the first time since early in the season.

Eastman also was the winning goalkeeper in a 5-4 decision over the Winter Hawks in Portland on Oct. 27.

Cougars, who finish their 72-game schedule by playing host to Medicine Hat Tigers tonight at Memorial Arena, battled back from the two-goal deficit in the first period, outscoring the Winter Hawks 4-1 in the middle 20 minutes and 3-2 in the final period.

Max Kostovich (2), Mike Toal, Joel Elliott, Ron Chorney and Florent Robidoux were the Portland marksmen and goalkeeper Bart Hunter made 24 saves.

In other action, Brandon Wheat Kings eliminated Regina Pats from playoff contention by thrashing the Saskatchewan side 9-3, Lethbridge Broncos topped Saskatoon Blades 9-7 and Seattle Breakers breezed to a 12-5 win over the visiting Tigers.

Day of the children

Sea of small, smiling faces greeted Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy during opening of the Legislature Thursday. Children were invited to attend and help salute the Year of the Child and Family in B.C. Signs, flags, buttons and ice cream bars were distributed to the children during the festivities.

Prisoner transfer dangerous—police

Victoria police got quick action Thursday after threatening to stop transferring prisoners to the Law Courts building.

"What we couldn't do yesterday we were able to do today," said Sgt. Bryan Bailey, president of the Victoria City Policemen's Union.

The union, which had demanded that the security system be improved, won what Bailey called a "temporary compromise" after a meeting in the afternoon with Police Chief Jack Gregory, Deputy Chief James Smith and two representatives of the sheriff's office.

Because of the nature of the security, Bailey said details of the changes would have to be withheld. Full improvement would have to await increased federal spending at the building.

The ultimatum to Attorney-General Garde Gardom and the police chief came when the police union was reaching a difficult plateau in its contract bargaining with the police board.

Caught by surprise by the board application for a mediator, Bailey said the situation could lead to a serious showdown.

The Law Courts security issue was a natural weapon for the faltering negotiations, since the police had been trying for some time to end what they believed to be a dangerous situation.

Bailey said there was a "very real danger that police officers will be overpowered and killed or injured, or that police officers and a member of the court staff—including judges—will be taken hostage in order to facilitate the escape of an arrested or convicted person or persons."

He said police had been trying to have security tightened up on prisoner transfers ever since the courts were moved 13 months ago from Fisgard Street.

The union asked the chief to have two additional men added to the team of two for the transfers. If this wasn't done within a reasonable time the union would refuse to transfer any prisoners at all from the Law Courts lockup.

Thursday's meeting put an end to that threat, at least for the time being.

But the discontent over negotiations is far from over.

Bailey said the type of action taken had escalated during the last six years, culminating with a strike threat last year.

"They'll never know how close we came to a strike," he said.

Bailey said police were angered by the board's move for a mediator "because we haven't had a meeting with the full board."

The union was planning to take its case to the public next week, he said. It felt it had a good enough case to win public support.

The union has been pushing for wage parity with Vancouver for many years. Bailey said the Victoria policeman is still earning 3.5 per cent less.

Stalemate in Saanich could kill plan again

By BILL SMITH
Colonist reporter

A stalemate in Saanich council over designation of the long-awaited community plan could scuttle the document for the second time in two years.

Three aldermen—John Mika, Irene Block and Howard Sturrock—argued strenuously earlier this week that council should adopt an official plan by bylaw rather than a mere resolution.

The trio, outnumbered by one in the planning committee vote, claimed the document would only be a broad statement of policies and subject to change at the whim of council.

Mayor Mel Couvelier's motion urging council to adopt a community plan by resolution following a single public hearing, will be introduced for debate at the first meeting when all aldermen are present.

In separate interviews Thursday both the mayor and Mika said they hoped the squabble over whether the document should be adopted as an official community plan or simply a community plan, would not affect its anticipated passage later this year.

Couvelier
. . .'handcuffed options'

Mika
. . .could be stalled

"But there's a real chance it could be stalled," Mika said, adding that he hoped council would reject the mayor's motion.

"The entire affair is sickening; it's a total betrayal of our citizens and is certainly not planning.

"It's utterly ridiculous to adopt a plan by resolution, something which has no more strength than a New Year resolution, and you know how easily they are broken."

Adopting the plan by council resolution could in theory mean a bare quorum of council would be able to amend the document, Mika said.

"There is untold value to citizens in the guarantee of a public hearing by going the bylaw route," he added.

Mika accused the mayor of "making a mockery of the whole thing," and said "he's not really interested in planning, only in good PR."

Mika said "a clear sellout of a principle" angered him.

"I'm disenchanted with his stewardship of the municipality," he said, recalling that he was one of Couvelier's admirers when he decided to run for office.

"I expected real changes, but find we've only had cosmetic changes, changes for change's sake."

Restructuring of the committee system by the mayor had been a frivolous exercise, he said, "and his decision to establish the policy management committee (until recently a closed committee) was a violation of the principles on which he was elected."

Couvelier came to office on a basis of being open to the public "and he should return to the principles on which he ran," Mika said.

Urging the mayor to reconsider his stand on the plan, Mika said: "I hope a majority of council will realize this betrayal of our citizens."

However, Couvelier remained firm in his belief that council has no right to adopt a rigid plan which would bind future councils with "handcuffed options" for years to come.

"I feel I have to protect future councils' options," he said, pointing out that no council among the four core municipalities has adopted an official plan.

"The obvious reason is that they want to allow a degree of flexibility in planning to meet altered circumstances and are leary of giving the regional board too much power."

He added: "I wish we could get the provincial election out of the way and eliminate the politicking now under way on council."

Pay for parking—Couvelier

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier wants municipal employeees and Camosun College students to pay for parking privileges.

"It's most critical we pursue every avenue to obtain better utilization of public transit," he said. "Charging for parking is perhaps one way of reaching this objective."

Couvelier, a member of the Urban Transit Authority's interim board of directors, said he would like Camosun College board to adopt a pay-parking policy for students.

Couvelier said the matter would be raised when council was considering a request from the board to relax parking requirements to save three acres of woodland.

The board is seeking relaxation from municipal zoning regulations so that only about five acres would be needed for the parking lot, rather than 8.5 acres.

Couvelier said the relaxation request appeared reasonable and might help to allay concerns of residents.

"But I'm very surprised the letter says nothing about instituting parking fees for college students."

Residents have strongly objected to expansion of the parking lot in the Hudson's Bay Wood, north of the campus on Foul Bay Road near Lansdowne.

Under Saanich zoning requirements, spaces for 617 vehicles would have to be black-topped, but this could be reduced by council.

Relaxation would mean the college would be able to save 21 acres of the 26-acre woodland, instead of only about 18 acres, as originally anticipated.

The additional parking is required because a new building is being constructed on the campus.

The board is also asking Saanich and other core municipalities for support for improved bus service to the campus and for construction of bike paths.

As to parking at the municipal hall, Couvelier said its employees earned market salaries, "and I can see no reason for continuing the frill of providing free parking."

Couvelier said he could not support the findings of a recently-completed report that more land be black-topped to provide additional parking spaces at municipal hall.

"It's the principle that concerns me," he said. "On the basis that we are paying our people top dollar, I'm opposed to continuing the practice of providing free parking."

He stressed that free parking would still be provided for citizens while visiting the hall on business.

Drillship arriving for refit

The drillship Canmar Explorer IV arrived at Esquimalt Harbor from Singapore on Friday to undergo major refitting by the Victoria division of the Burrard Yarrows Corp. before heading to the Beaufort Sea to search for offshore oil.

A spokesman for the Esquimalt-based shipyard said the drillship was given its present name at Singapore. Formerly it was known as the Dalmahoy.

He said the refit, to cost about $8.5 million will see the ship ice-strengthened and completely insulated for Arctic work. There will also be some major superstructure changes. The work will be completed by mid-June.

The ship is owned by Canadian Marine Drilling Ltd. (Canmar) a subsidiary of Dome Petroleum Company of Calgary.

The shipyard spokesman said the drillship refit will bring the yard's workforce to about 750 from the current 450.

This will be the third drillship the yard has refitted for Canmar. The last was in 1976.

Refugees break blockade

MANILA (Reuter) — A group of about 17 Vietnamese refugees have broken the Philippines naval blockade and landed on the island of Mindoro, 160 kilometres south of Manila, diplomatic sources said today.

Details of their arrival and condition were scanty as the government was keeping a tight rein on information about refugees following its recent decision to try to prevent any more from landing.

There are more than 1,890 refugees aboard the freighter Tung An in Manila Bay as well as on some naval craft put alongside to help ease congestion and 56 in two small boats. More than 720 are also in a camp on the southwestern island of Palawan and 360 in a crowded Manila camp.

Crosswalk campaign coming, warns city

A program to make Victoria school crosswalks safe for students is about to be launched and Ald. William McElroy hopes it'll scare the daylights out of careless and impolite drivers.

Victoria police will be watching crosswalks near schools like hawks from now on and any driver who fails to stop for students crossing the street "will be dinged," McElroy said in an interview Thursday.

"At three demerit points, you get caught four times and lose your licence," he said.

In addition to stricter enforcement of traffic rules by police, three of the most dangerous school crosswalks will be supervised by adults.

They are the crosswalks at Cook and Princess; Fairfield and Moss; Pine and Craigflower.

This course of action was decided on following a meeting between McElroy, school board and police officials.

McElroy said installing signal devices which can be controlled by pushbutton would cost an estimated $20,000 for each crosswalk and apart from the fact that money was hard to find, there were certain disadvantages to the signal-controls.

"Quite often kids will push the button to stop traffic, but they won't cross. In time, some motorists will just ignore the signal and drive through the crosswalk anyway and when a kid does cross, he runs the risk of getting killed," McElroy said.

So the word from city council's traffic committee chairman is: "Stop at crosswalks or lose your licence."

Despite an impassioned plea by Ald. Robin Blencoe to ban the chemical, only two of his colleagues, Ald. Larry Ryan and William McElroy, voted with him on the matter.

An attempt to delay the spraying of public lawns and boulevards with 2,4-D until fall also failed.

Blencoe told council the chemical shouldn't be used until it's proven harmless. He said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was currently doing a study into the long-range effects of 2,4-D.

But parks committee chairman Ald. John Hayes said the use of the chemical was vital to the parks department in combatting broadleaf weeds. The alternative was tearing the weeds out by hand.

CP Air cross-Canada ceiling lifted

OTTAWA (CP) — CP Air has been given the right to compete with Air Canada on an equal footing on Canadian transcontinental air routes under a federal cabinet order announced Friday.

The all-out competition, affecting traffic between Montreal and Vancouver, will centre on routes where both national airlines now compete.

Until now CP Air was restricted to capturing 25 per cent of the capacity of the transcontinental route.

If CP Air wishes to extend the competition to the Atlantic region or other parts of Canada it now does not service, it will have to apply to the Canadian Transport Commission for approval.

CP Air has been asking the government for permission to compete with Air Canada with less restrictions for some time now.

A spokesman for Transport Minister Otto Lang said the matter has come before cabinet a number of times.

The press release said the decision is in accord with Lang's statement on national air policy in the Commons in November, 1977.

He said then:

"In the case of the mainline carriers we will be seeking a removal of the remaining restrictions that exist in terms of competition between them, but with the substitution of certain other restrictions, likely in the hands of the Canadian Transport Commission, to ensure that competition does not do disservice to the travelling public in terms of higher costs and higher fares."

The press release said steps will be taken to ensure that no wasteful competition takes place between Air Canada and CP Air.

Les Benjamin, the New Democratic Party spokesman for transportation, predicted short-term benefits only for the travelling public as a result.

"It will be like a gas war," he said.

He said his party was against the new policy because it felt transportation was a public service, like sewer and other essential services.

"We're finally off the ground," said Ian Gray, CP Air president, in a Vancouver release in response to the announcement.

"Everyone from within the company, from myself down to the fellow on the ramp, is very pleased with the opportunity to offer competitive service now on our transcontinental routes, without any restrictions.

"Now we have to produce the product and make sure that we live up to our reputation of being a good competitor.

Gray said CP Air will "have to add a few more employees to the Vancouver payroll so it's pretty good news for the city as well as the airline."

In Montreal, Air Canada president Claude Taylor said in a statement that the airline and its 21,000 employees "are ready and more than willing" to meet the stepped-up competition.

"We've reached the stage where a transition is in order, and Air Canada is mature and efficient enough to stand on its own without protection," Taylor said.

Airport tax hike delayed?

OTTAWA (UPC) — Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Friday he will try to delay proposed increases that would have almost doubled the air transportation tax to $15 for domestic travel next month.

The increases, announced in Chretien's November budget, were due to come into force April 1, for tickets purchased in Canada and on July 1 for tickets bought outside of Canada.

The tax will now be increased after the Excise Tax Act receives royal assent — probably after the federal election.

The budget proposals would have increased the tax from $8 to $15 for domestic travel and from $8 to $12 for international travel. Revenues are used to finance the air transport services provided by the transport ministry.

More arrests and threats in Charlottes

Premier Bennett demanded that charges against the loggers be dropped while federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said in a telegram to B.C. Forests Minister Tom Waterland that arrests would continue until the timber cutting stopped.

There was a glimmer of hope that the dispute could be resolved. Federal and provincial officials are to meet in Vancouver Tuesday to talk over the issue.

In Victoria, Bennett told the Colonist that he and International Woodworkers of America president Jack Munro were on the same side on this issue.

"What Jack is really doing (threatening to pull the entire IWA workforce out unless the conflict is settled) is to reinforce to the federal government that the people of this province are serious.

"We have worked together before on critical issues. When you strip away the politics, we can accomplaish quite a lot and will accomplish quite a lot."

Bennett said his government's objection to the way Ottawa was handling things was that the difference of interpretation of the federal Fisheries Act should be resolved "without the workers of this province being threatened.

Three more fallers were arrested Friday, bringing the total of arrests in the 10-day-old conflict to 12. Eleven of the charges were against loggers for undertaking actions that would harm fish-spawning beds while one was against Peter Pfister, logging supervisor of QC Timber, for allegedly counselling an act that would break the law.

Carefree Kimberley racing for home

It's ready, set and go for "miracle child" Kimberley Vis, 3, right, as she races with brother Marty, 6, in Royal Jubilee Hospital playground with push from parents Patsy and Corrie. Kimberley was released from hospital Friday after recovering from near-drowning accident Feb. 7 in a water-filled ditch near her Port Alberni home. Weeks after her physical revival, Kimberley regained consciousness through heroic efforts of doctors employing new brain-saving techniques.

Anarchists go wild after jobs protest

PARIS (UPI) — Thousands of workers protesting layoffs marched through Paris Friday but the demonstration ended in a rampage by anarchists who looted shops and smashed windows in the worst violence since the 1968 student uprising.

Riot police fired tear gas to disperse a crowd of youths who broke into the back door of the famous Cafe de la Paix on the Place de l'Opera.

The youths set three cars on fire, overturned scores of others, lit fires and threw Molotov cocktails at police who charged swinging clubs.

Police reported 40 persons arrested and about 50 police injured. Three professional photographers were also among those hurt. Authorities said 103 shops were looted.

The outbreak of violence for which the anarchist movement "Autonome Brigades" claimed responsibility in a communique to the press was the worst since the the May 1968 rioting during the student "revolution" that for a time threatened the government of President Charles De Gaulle. It followed a peaceful demonstration by thousands of workers protesting 20,000 layoffs in the French steel industry.

Union officials claimed 150,000 persons demonstrated although the government estimated the number at between 50,000 and 60,000.

Bhutto's bid fails

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Pakistan's Supreme Court said Saturday former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto must be hanged unless pardoned by the nation's head of state.

The court refused to review its 4-3 split decision of Feb. 6 upholding Bhutto's murder conspiracy conviction and death sentence.

EGGS-PERTS TAP DOOMSDAY SHELL

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Experts of the Colombian Agricultural Institute have been called in to examine an egg which carries a message apparently forecasting the end of the world.

A peasant woman in the village of Tebaida, 350 kilometres west of Bogota, found the egg when she made the rounds of her chicken coop earlier this week.

On the shell, in raised letters, were words which read in English translation: "Final judgment. Repent. God."

The woman took the egg to her local priest, who has referred the matter to the Bishop Libardo Ramirez Gomez of Armenia province.

The agricultural experts, meanwhile, have been asked to make their own study of the phenomenon.

Help fingertip away for family problems

The provincial government will establish a Zenith number for children in need of assistance, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Friday.

Children who might need assistance because of emotional or physical abuse, and parents, or other concerned people "can reach out and make sure help is available at any time of the day or night," the minister said.

She did not elaborate in a prepared speech delivered at the annual dinner of the Greater Victoria United Way campaign.

CAIRO (AP) — U.S. President Carter, unable thus far to win broader Arab backing for the Egyptian-Israeli peace settlement, has made a new overture to the Palestine Liberation Organization, repeating his offer to deal with the PLO if it will recognize Israel's right to exist.

The PLO has spurned similar proposals in the past. Carter's offer to "immediately start working directly" with the PLO came in an interview with Egyptian television broadcast here Friday, as Egyptian and Israeli leaders prepared for Monday's signing of the historic treaty between their two countries at a Washington ceremony.

Carter said his offer depends on PLO acceptance of United Nations Security Council Resolution 242.

The resolution, accepted by most Arab states as a basis for a Middle East peace, calls for Israel to return war-won Arab lands in exchange for Arab guarantees of Israel's right to exist within secure and recognized boundaries.

The Egyptian interviewer asked Carter whether the United States soon might start talks with the Palestinians over their grievances.

"Yes, we would like to have direct relations with the Palestinians," Carter said. "We will do this as part of the negotiating process in the future

Stocks soar, Labor expecting defeat

LONDON (AP) — Stocks soared Friday on the London Stock Exchange as the country headed toward a crucial confidence vote in Parliament that many Britons believe will topple the Labor government and clear the way for the Conservatives to take power for the first time in five years.

Home Secretary Merlyn Rees surprised television viewers by saying in an interview the government has little chance of surviving the vote.

Boosted by the prospect of an end to socialist government in Britain, investors began pouring in buy orders as soon as the exchange opened its doors. The Financial Times industrial index, the main market indicator, jumped 20 points to end the day at 534.6.

"People are saying it does not matter what you buy, it's all going up," said an excited stock dealer.

Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government has been predicting it could win a general election battle and Rees's statement raised eyebrows among his colleagues.

Rees, who managed the campaign that carried Callaghan to the party leadership in 1976, was asked by a BBC interviewer if "you are going to survive." He first replied "No," then added that he had a feeling "at this moment we have a very good chance of being defeated."

Margaret Thatcher, the Conservative party leader, decided Thursday night to put the Laborites to the test with a no-confidence vote in the House of Commons next Wednesday.

She said she is sure she can win with the help of the small parties in the Commons. If the Laborites cannot muster a majority to vote its confidence in the Callaghan government, a general election will be required.

The 53-year-old Mrs. Thatcher, who would be Britain's first woman prime minister, is relying on anti-Labor feeling

Great Illusionists Perform

Shari Lewis and Lambchop are hosts to an international cast of the world's greatest illusionists in Magic, an hour of music and fantasy telecasting Tuesday, March 27 at 7 p.m. on Channel 8.

Among the performers will be illusionists Mark Wilson, The Great Tomsoni & Co., Flip and The Amazing Randi, and Karen Kain and Frank Augustyn of the National Ballet of Canada.

Billy Van, the dancers of the Montreal-based Les Ballets Jazz and sleight-of-hand artist Joel Hands Machtinger lend their special talents to this hour of entertainment.

The world's greatest magicians weave their magic spell from the stage of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Canada's Amazing Randi, the world' greatest escape artist, attempts Harry Houdini's dangerous milk can escape; American Mark Wilson levitates his beautiful assistant who disappears into thin air; the mime artistry of Holland's Flip draws ooh's and aah's from the crowd; and the Great Tomsoni & Co. from the United States, delights and perplexes with his magical comedy.

The premiere of a specially created magical ballet by Brian MacDonald, Beauty and the Beast, is performed with precision and beauty by Karen Kain and Frank Augustyn of the National Ballet of Canada.

Shari Lewis, who learned the art of magic from her father — Peter Pan The Magic Man, the official magician for the city of New York — demonstrates her talents as a magician, turning water to wine and back to water again. Shair's versatility as an entertainer includes the creation of the endearing Lambchop, her artistry as a magician as well as her abilities as a dancer and singer. Shari displays her musical talents in the opening number Magic and, with Billy Van, spoofs the comic strip Mandrake the Magician.

RYAN CROCKER, son of Stanley and Elizabeth Crocker of Victoria, reports on the rescue and recovery of Miracle, a baby killer whale found scarred and wounded in Canadian waters, for KOMO-TV's Year of the Child Special: Kidsworld Northwest, Tuesday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m., on Channel 4.

—PAYOFF PUZZLE—

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS

1. FLIPPER not slipper. In hospital, etc., it is common enough for one slipper to be worn (the other foot having bandages, etc.). It is difficult to imagine much point in using just one frogman's FLIPPER.
7. TELLER not taller. The question of "ambition" could very well relate to a banking career, favoring TELLER. Also, since any boy can expect to become more or less taller anyway, the question is one of a boy wising to be tall, rather than of merely becoming taller than he is already.
8. TENSE not sense. Since the clue specifies "verb," TENSE is more particularly apt; all words have sense.
9. YEN not sen or Zen. "Sen" (obsolete Japanese coin) and "Zen" (Japanese Buddhist sect) are not exactly popular words.
11. FAD not lad. The clue suits something worthy of mild disapproval, but not to be viewed too seriously. FAD is apt, but why should one look down at all on a harmless little lad?
13. ROW not rot. ROW (quarreling, shouting, etc.) is indisputable, but the "rot" is nonsense only to the speakers' political opponents, so it can't be said definitely "to be heard."
14. SINK not sing. In the case of SINK, aptly, there could be some question of trying to "understand" criminal motives or thinking. In the case of sing, one simply accepts that certain men happen to have deep bass voices.
16. FEAT not fear. As distinct from loss of nerve, say, fear is necessary and desirable (as a help towards keeping one alive). A FEAT can be a problem, of course.
21. WOULD not could. As a pianist, he definitely WOULD practice; he wouldn't merely pass into a state wherein he could practice if he chose to do so.
25. COMPUTERS not commuters. Commuters are characterized by traveling to and from their work, they don't merely "go to" the business houses in question.

CLUES DOWN

2. LITTER not letter. It is LITTER, rather than a single object such as a letter, that lies "around" some place. Also, the justificatory tone of the clue favors LITTER. (Why shouldn't a letter be on a desk?
4. PLIERS not fliers. The clue suggests something used in the sense of a tool; but fliers can well be seen as doing the job. Also, a flying job (e.g., crop spraying) would be viewed as calling for aircraft, etc., rather than for "fliers."
5. NURSING not cursing. Cursing is something you simply do or you don't; it's not a considered thing.
15. POLICE not policy. The POLICE are to be found "in the country" in question, whereas the policy would be that of the regime and not have a physical location.
17. ROAST not toast. As the clue suggests, a ROAST plus other things does make a proper meal. However, toast would never make a proper meal, even with additions.
20. HAT not mat. Flowers on a HAT would be artificial, i.e., "not the real thing." Flowers on a mat would merely be part of the pattern — neither "real" nor artificial flowers.
22. LOSE not love. The very question of having to "manage without it" arises more particularly in the case of a thing you LOSE.

Soap Opera Scene

Daytime Star Sparkles

By JOHN GOUDAS

John Gabriel, who makes the ladies' hearts flutter each day as Dr. Seneca Beaulac in Ryan's Hope, had been working on an idea for three years, and his determination is finally paying off. John envisioned a talk show for soap opera stars and creators; and last month, "Daytime Star" was unveiled with John as the host.

"I was very much aware of a vast audience of fans who follow the soaps faithfully," said Gabriel, "and I thought there should be a show in which the fans can see their favorite stars as people and not merely as the characters they play."

Gabriel finally got the go-ahead from American International Television, which produced the first three one-hour specials now airing around the country via syndication. The first show, which went on in February, tripled the ratings in the New York area for the time slot, which indicates the validity of John's idea. At present, it looks as if "Daytime Star" may become a daily half hour syndicated show, which would make John Gabriel the most visible star on TV.

"Naturally, the best time for the show would be the morning before the soaps really begin airing," said Gabriel. "That way, we wouldn't be competing with the soaps for attention."

Soap fans, of course, are the most die-hard of all. They write more letters than any others and feel close to the characters they watch on a daily basis. The most avid of the soap fans can spiel off the plot-line of their favorite soaps going back months and, in some cases, years. Daytime Star has a built-in audience.

Apart from his work with Daytime Star and Ryan's Hope, John is developing a nightclub act which he will unveil at New York's Reno Sweeney in late April. He also has two albums coming out. As most of his fans already know, John sings quite well and has a number of musical roles under his belt. Someday he hopes to do an act in Las Vegas where he would be backed up by a large orchestra with all those strings.

John Gabriel

Gabriel, however, isn't as keen about Vegas or even Hollywood as he is about New York, where he works and lives. He had a short span as a contract player at 20th Century-Fox when he was just starting out and the memory that period is no) pleasant. He will see some of his early film work (in such movies as The Story of Ruth and The Hunters) on the Late Show, and he describes his performances as "photographed fear."

All in all, John Gabriel is a happy man in his career and his marriage (his wife is Sandy Gabriel, who plays Edna Thorton in All My Children).

"When you come right down to it, the quality of your life is more important than becoming a star."

CHANNEL CHATTER: Pretty Amy Niles, who plays Gina Gaspero in Love of Life, may one day get to raise her lovely soprano voice in song since she has a long list of musical credits ranging from appearances in Carnegie Hall to Broadway . . .Stefan Schnabel (Dr. Stephen Jackson in Guiding Light) has returned from Anchorage, Alaska, where he worked for the Alaska Repertory Theater in a show called "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground." He'll travel anywhere for a good role.

John Tripp has joined the cast of "As the World Turns," in the role of Matt, a young man whom Jay met at a prison farm. Tripp has had some TV experience but this marks his first big break in soap opera . . . Bruce Gray, formerly of the syndicated soap opera High Hopes, produced in Canada, is back on the stage in New York. Gray has a leading role in John Bishop's Winter Signs, with the Circle Repertory Theater Company.

Tudi Wiggins (Meg Hart in Love of Life) is doing some directing these days. She guided At Home, an off-Broadway showcase which will run April 4 and 5 . . . Wayne Tippit (Ted Adamson in Search for Tomorrow) stopped at his favorite gas station on his day off and the attendants were nowhere around. When he searched for them, they were clustered around the small TV set engrossed in the daily trials of — you guessed it — Search for Tomorrow. Needless to say, when they recognized Wayne, he got full "Grade A" service.

A sad note: Ethel Remey (who played Alma Miller in As the World Turns) died last month in New Jersey following complications after a stroke which took her off the show last year.

PLOT PORTENTS: Trish is convinced everyone's against her on Days of Our Lives. We can expect desperate, foolish actions from her in the future. It's also time for a spell of tenderness between Chris and Mary — their periodic spats are beginning to pall. The sparks between Chris and Amanda obviously mean future encounters. Mike and Margo are on a high, following Mickey's offer to make a down payment on the house. If only Margo can stay well for a spell!

Kay Chancellor has at last met her match on The Young and the Restless. Suzanne is using drugs on Kay in the same underhanded way Kay used them on Derek. Too bad, just when Derek was beginning to see Kay in a new light. Jill appears to be desperate — who will make her pregnant? Apparently there are no takers Stuart's letter has given Liz new hope, but she can be counted on to help her daughter in a pinch, sacrificing herself as usual.

On One Life to Live, Anna is worried about Larry and wonders why he can't see how Karen is for him. .

TV MAILBAG

VET — My brother-in-law and I have a bet going. I say Martin Milner of "Adam 12" was one of the two guys from "Route 66." He says it isn't him. Also, I say he drove a 1966 yellow Corvette. He says it was a '66 Mustang. Plus, what was the story of the show all about? Was it jut about going across country? — Gary Brenton, Tiverton, R.I.

I'd say both you and your brother-in-law need a crash course in TV trivia, although he's further off the mark than you are. First, Martin Milner was one of the characters, George Maharis was the other (later replaced by Glenn Cobett). As to the third character — the car — what's with this insistence on 1966? The highway was Route 66, but the show began in 1960 (a while before the Mustang rolled off Ford's assembly lines). And as for the color being yellow — you must have dreamt that. The show was filmed in black and white, so if it were yellow you wouldn't have known anyway. It was a recent (in 1960) edition white Corvette convertible. Finally, the show's creators thought providing action, adventure and romance was enough. Who needs more of a plot than two guys take a car across country?

COMPLAINT DEPT. — I am protesting one of my soap operas — "Days of Our Lives." We don't like what David is doing to Trish and when are they going to expose Stephanie Woodward as Brooke Hamilton? — Rose Reese, Apache Junction, Ariz.

By the time you read this Stephanie may very well have been exposed as the devious imposter she is. The rest of the cast is getting very suspicious about the uncanny resemblance. As for David and Trish, if he weren't so rotten you wouldn't now have a messy divorce and child custody proceedings to seethe over. After all, isn't that the fun of watching soaps?

MORE SUDS — I've heard that Snapper Foster is leaving the cast of "The Young and the Restless." He's always been my favorite. Is this true? — Maria Deliano, Bloomington, Ind.

Snapper, known in real life as David Hasselhoff, is indeed making quitting like noises. He says he's leaving the show when his contract expires this spring. Whether he does, and whether they write out his character or merely replace him with another actor, remains to be seen. Stay tuned.

V FOR VECTOR — I really enjoy watching "Battlestar Galactica." I think Maria Jenson is really good as Athena. Could you tell me where to write to her? Also, was Jack Haley (the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz") playing the role of Vector in the episode that aired Feb. 25? I would appreciate an answer because my roommate and I hve a bet going. — Donna Stroud, Santa Barbara, Calif.

Write the cast of "Battlestar Gallactica" at Universal Studios, Universal City, CA., care of the show. I hope you told your friend that Jack Haley played Vector and not that the Scarecrow played him. Haley did play the android on the show, but he was the Tinman in "The Wizard of Oz." Tsk-tsk.

DANDY DONNA — I hear Donna Reed is coming back to TV, is this true? Also, who is she married to now? Will the cast of "The Donna Reed Show" get back together like they did with "Father Knows Best"? What are Paul Peterson and Shelley Fabares doing these days, anyway? — Mrs. Ralph McGuire, Kingston, N.C.

Lots of questions there, Mrs. McGuire. First, Reed is starring in NBC's upcoming Ross Hunter film, "The Best Place to Be." Second, she is currently married to Grover Asmus, her second husband. Third, Reed has been trying to get a reunion show together for a few years. The death of Carl Betz threw a monkey wrench into the plans. But she's still working on it. Finally, Peterson lives in the East with his wife and kids. He's a novelist.

Questions of general interest should be sent to: DIALOGUE, Pepper O'Brien, NEA, 200 Park Ave., New York N.Y., U.S.A., 10017.

Ray Charles performs

SUPER JAM

When jazz musicians get together to jam just for each other, anything goes. When jazz greats get together to jam, the results are often electric, very special and unreproducible. Saturday, March 24, at 10 p.m. on Channel 9, a group of jazz and blues greats will show television audiences what happens when they get together to jam amid the splendor of the Montreux Jazz Festival. Joining the central figure for Ray Charles at Montreux will be a select group of some of Charles' old cronies who just happen to be among the best jazz musicians in the world.

In the peaceful beauty of the Swiss setting, the essential, unadorned Ray Charles will jam with his friends in a two-hour feast for the eyes and ears of the television audience. Joining Charles will be Dizzy Gillespie on the trumpet; Hank Crawford on alto saxophone; David Newman on tenor sax; George Duvivier on bass; Micky Roker on the drums; Kenny Burrell on guitar; and Esther Phillips on the vocal cords.

Timmy's Festival

More than 1,000 handicapped children will become part of the 5th annual Telethon to be held by the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children in the McPherson Playhouse Theatre March 24-25.

The theme this year is Timmy's Springtime Festival. The telethon will air on Victoria's Cable 10 for 21 hours starting Saturday at 8 p.m. Last year's Telethon raised $70,000, and this year the society hopes to double this amount.

This year's Telethon will also be seen on cable TV in Saanich Peninsula, Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and Sooke. Broadcasting will begin at the same time as in Victoria (8 p.m.) in all areas except on Saanich Cable, where there will be a two-hour delay with a start at 10 p.m.

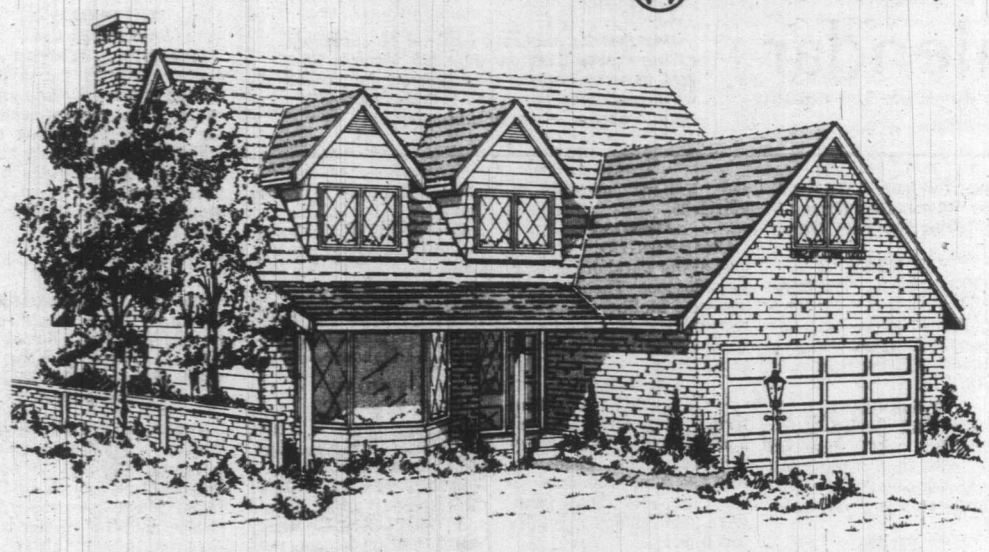
: 12.2 m/ 40 ft./pi.



Two-Storey Traditional Design

This traditional home provides the larger family with many convenience features and abundant space, both at present and for future development.

The brick veneer and horizontal siding of the exterior finish combines well with the bow window, dormer windows and diamond panes to lend an air of the rural English cottage.

A large and open galley-type kitchen separates the breakfast nook and dining room on one side from the large family room on the other. This extremely practical layout enables a good separation of casual and formal dining styles. The family room connects to the patio via sliding doors — encouraging casual outdoor dining in fine weather.

All four bedrooms have good natural light, generous closets, and one has a charming alcove provided by the dormer window. The foyer vanity sink takes the pressure off the central bath, as does the three-piece ensuite with tub in the master bedroom.

A large unfinished area over the garage provides the space required for the future development of a children's playroom or lounge; or a studio or office for the professional or business family.

A full basement enables the future development of additional leisure facilities for the growing family.

Plans for design no. 77-2065 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70 for the first set and $10 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $4 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 7 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 350 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.50 ($2 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items, please send cheque or money order payable to Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Al Learn of Welland was telling me about his collection of door knockers. That's one I had not run into before. At first glance it sounds odd but a moment's consideration shows it to be agood idea.

At one time I lived in a house in Guelph which boasted a door knocker from England reputed to be 400 years old.

Al Learn whose collection is approaching the hundred mark has some finely wrought brass models from the 19th century and cast iron knockers shaped like fish, horses' heads or just elaborately patterned. The beauty of this kind of collectible is that he always has something to look for at the flea markets, junk stores and even wreckers' yards. Like any other collector of the obscure, the hope of something really good turning up around the next corner is always with him.

Price is usually determined by other collectors competing for the same item and I would have assumed that he would have this field pretty much to himself but prices are soaring — not under the pressure of rival collectors but the remodellers of old houses who are always on the lookout for the authentic final touch.

By the way, did you know the origin of the expression 'dead as a door nail'? The door nail is the stud which the knocker knocks. It should be dead!

Mrs. deMacedo of Victoria writes about two books with pictures of poultry drawn from life in 1867. The books are damaged. Some of the pictures are missing but one of them bears the signature of the late Anthony Eden.

This is extremely frustrating. I am sure the books in good condition would have been of great interest to someone somewhere and although there is no reason to believe that Anthony Eden's signature is particularly valuable, it is at least a worthwhile keepsake. I suppose if the Mona Lisa was damaged by fire and only one charred corner of the painting was left it would still be of great value and to some extent the same is true here.

But books are so easy to check. There is not a major town in Canada that does not have at least one fine old book store and antiquarian book dealers are not just merchants, they are connoisseurs who thoroughly enjoy looking at curios of this nature. Check the yellow pages.

After my glowing account of Howard Pain's 'Heritage of Upper Canadian Furniture' a few weeks ago I had several letters from readers reminding me about Elizabeth Ingolfsrud's little books. Apparently I had given the impression that the massive Pain work was the only book extant on the subject. If so, I am glad to repair the misapprehension. Ms. Ingolfsrud is the Ontario furniture consultant at the National Museum of Man in Ottawa and so far she has published five books in her ALL ABOUT series — All About Ontario chairs, tables, chests, beds and now, cupboards. They are all nicely illustrated and extravagantly well researched soft cover books within the reach of any budget and easily available from virtually any good bookstore. Cupboards sell for $5.95. The four earlier books are still available at $3.95 each. The publishers are The House of Grant, Don Mills, Ontario.

Readers Letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o your newspaper, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

PATRICIA COLLINS stars in the television drama special, Artichoke, to be seen on CBC-TV Wednesday, March 28 at 8 p.m. The glamorous Miss Collins plays a prairie farmwife named Margaret, who banished her husband Walter (Frank Adamson) from her bedroom 14 years ago. When Gibson McFarlane (David Gardner) visits for the summer, passions are forced to the boiling point.

When the Angloworms Turn . . .

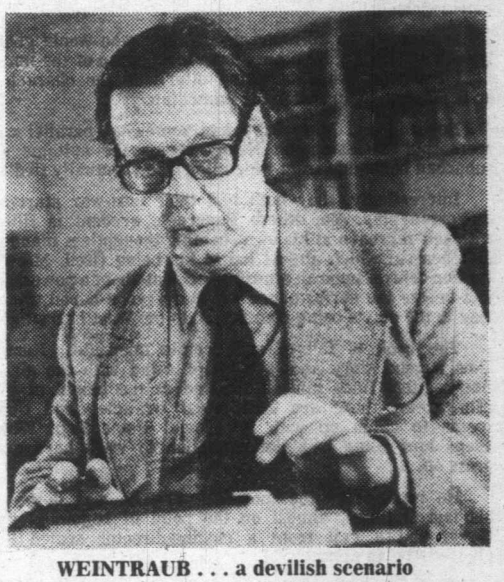
Two novels today, as different as chalk from cheese. The first is by William Weintraub, the writer, director and documentary film producer whose first novel, Why Rock the Boat? was made into a feature film in 1974.

Why Rock the Boat? was a romantic comedy which satirized the Montreal newspaper world of the 1940s. Weintraub's new novel satirizes the current government of Quebec. Titled The Underdogs, it follows the adventures of Paul Pritchard and Mona Rosenstein, two star-crossed young lovers who belong to that most wretched of the world's minorities, the "Anglos" of the Republic of Quebec.

Weintraub's devilish scenario takes place 20 years after Quebec's separation from the rest of Canada. (Quebec proclaimed its sovereignty the day after the Separatists finally won a referendum — on their fourth try. Canada promptly closed its Quebec borders, refused immigration by "Anglo" refugees, and gradually "gave up the ghost and joined the United States," which "grudgingly accepted" it because the U.S. was running out of fresh water.

The plight of the forgotten Anglos is truly desperate. They are reduced to all but the most menial jobs by failure to pass the Linguistic Purity exam (Mona, e.g., made the mistake of pronouncing "fin" while expelling "two cubic centimetres more air through her nose than was permissible"), and unmarried workers are forced to live in decrepit boarding houses where "bathroom time" is limited to four minutes and the menu includes mutton stew, horsemeat and prunes.

Even an Angloworm will turn, however, and at last Paul and Mona are recruited into the Anglo Liberation Army (General Wolfe Cell), only to learn that terrorists, too, have their troubles. (The Quebec construction industry having collapsed, there is no longer any dynamite to steal.)



WEINTRAUB . . . a devilish scenario

Next the ALA succeeds in kidnapping a visiting diplomat, the government declares a state of apprehended insurrection and arrests hundreds of people in the middle of the night, and Weintraub rubs in his message that varying cultures could easily get along, if only their governments would stop making trouble.

The Underdogs does a good job of spoofing the fanatics and putting its "Anglo" readers in French shoes, and it's often ingeniously funny. But it would have been a better book if Weintraub had more to offer as a parting admonition than, "Anglos must always remember to be bilingual."

Random Descent, by Katherine Govier, is an intriguing first novel about a family tree that spans five generations. If you read it, do note — as I did not until well into the story — that the book's endpapers contain a diagram of the Beecham family tree. This should save you needless confusion and tide you over until around page 85, when the story suddenly takes off.

Random Descent is an odd book — half fictionalized research, half story — with a graceful style that's unusual in a first novel. Its messages, such as they are, tell us that it matters who you are, not what you choose; that the medical profession tyrannizes women today as in the past; and that a family's fossilized anecdotes about itself are like junk which has turned to treasure, "because it lasted." All this is scarcely profound, but Ms. Govier's writing ability helps compensate.

Describing the beginning of an affair between a businessman and his super-efficient secretary, for example, she writes: "They had dined at the hotel, sitting through the music because she did not dance, and then gone back to her pale green apartment on Haro Street. She was like glass, hard, and when he breathed she seemed to cloud over with what might have been passion. He realized she expected gratitude for the rescue of the company. But as he'd never noticed he was losing it, he found that emotion hard to locate."

Random Descent contains a well-realized and memorable character in Constance Oliver Beecham, the four-foot, ten-inch self-made woman who dominates her family's story. The novel's coincidences are plausible, its author's humanity never in doubt.

Less assured is Ms. Govier's handling of point of view, which has the reader leaping across several generation gaps per chapter and not always making it. (It takes a practised eye to realize that the "Jennie" of one paragraph is not the "Jennifer" of another, e.g.)

There's also what seems a damaging error of judgment in the final pages, where Ms. Govier compares the Beechams to a flock of ducks parading across a busy street to open water. Anyone who has actually seen such a sight will know that it is a marvel, but in print it is only comic. The Beechams, especially Constance Oliver Beecham, would not have been amused.

Burgess Turns to Cliche In Denigrating Hemingway

By JACK SCOTT

No real admirer of Ernest Hemingway could believe that the writer's private life was of casual or carping interest — it would be somewhat like being a little bit pregnant — but the latest biography of Hemingway seems designed for a public that really doesn't care all that much.

That it is the work of Anthony Burgess, a competent journalist and novelist, seems even more questionable since Burgess adds not a single new insight to that turbulent life or, for that matter, any material that hasn't already been raked and re-raked.

The only remote excuse for this book, indeed, is that it is part of the British publisher's series of writers — Dickens, James Joyce, Shakespeare, Robert Burns, Virginia Woolf and a couple of dozen others — and there's no question that Burgess looked upon it as an assignment in which he has been dutiful enough, but no more.

It was an impossible exercise in any event, since few modern writers have been as exposed to the scrutiny of others.

Anyone who believes that Hemingway ranks among the 10 best novelists of this century, perhaps more important than any of them in his influence for a coming generation, will have read or have in his or her library Professor Carlos Baker's definitive, authorized biography, or A. E. Hotchner's shorter, affectionate book, or the reminiscences of Hemingway's fourth wife, Mary, in How It Was (marred by the use of private correspondence that Ernest decreed was never to see the light of print) or the memoirs of his brother Leicester, Morley Callaghan, Edmund Wilson and a great many other books, good and bad.

It isn't simply that Burgess' work is a re-hash of most of them, but that, like many, he takes a holier-than-thou, condescending attitude to a man who, to put it inelegantly, could write the ass off him any day in the week.

Burgess concedes that Hemingway's literary reputation has not notably diminished since his suicide. But that is a small concession when he argues that Hemingway "was not above imitating himself on his bad days" or that "Hemingway, the man, was as much a creation as his books, and a far inferior creation," surely a viewpoint that's arguable and certainly downright irritating to those who find great power in his novels.

Burgess leans heavily, too, on the cliche that Hemingway had turned himself into a Homeric myth, that he was a poseur and liar, that he was a moody, selfish, suffering, abusive and sometimes vicious. Little or no attempt is made to equate this life style with, say, A Farewell to Arms or The Old Man and the Sea, as tender and beautiful as anything in literature.

HEMINGWAY

BURGESS
. . . condescending

There's abundant evidence that Hemingway was a very sick man, both physically and mentally, when, at 62, he took his own life, but Burgess would have us believe that this act was a negation of Hemingway's lifelong philosophy of "grace under pressure", a case of "tormented psyche" and, again, it is the cliche, pat explanation.

In a critical review of Hemingway's Islands In the Sun, not the writer's best novel, but with many magnificent passages, Burgess asks the rhetorical question, "What was wrong with Hemingway? Possibly growing gloom at his failure to be his own myth; more possibly a sexual incapacity which, considering his prowess in other fields of virile action, deeply baffled him. He always boasted of having cojones: but cojones have properly nothing to do with the ability to fire guns.

"There may have been a self-disgust at his inability to live up to his youthful, Joycean ideal of total artistic dedication," Burgess goes on. "He had become a mass of public muscle and, corrupted by the wrong kind of fame, found it too late to retreat ... he could not cope with the stress that most men endure gracefully; he was too godlike to be expected to have to cope."

Such questionable, idle speculation appears more and more in the biographies of Hemingway, and while Burgess gives an otherwise accurate, chronological account of the author's life, his attitude may be seriously questioned.

Where this slim volume can not be faulted is that it presents some 116 illustrations, many of them ancient snapshots that capture the essence of the era. It is to be regretted that Anthony Burgess did not take his cue from them.

The Lives of Two Actors

By ANTHONY JENKINS

The terminal point of a novel has traditionally been marriage or death, whereas a genuine autobiography ends at that crucial point in a person's life which gives meaning and shape to his career.

Dirk Bogarde's first book was just such a journey into the self, tracing events which forced him to build the protective shell which gave him the strength to turn his back on popular success. How much, then, is there left to say in this second volume?

What Bogarde does is to go back over that pattern, filling in the details of his life in the army and on the stage and screen up to Death In Venice. In the first book he explored his sense of himself in terms of his family: The second book examines his rise to stardom and his personal and professional reasons for deciding to break free.

While this book is more conventionally structured than his first, it offers the same intelligence, limpid style and honest self-assessment.

His account of army life is a lesson in the art of survival. Demobbed, he attempts to pick up the stands of his interrupted life and when success on the stage leads to a film contract, he battles (unsuccessfully) to come to terms with sudden wealth. Chastened by the criticism of concerned friends, he constructs a life style with a close circle of friends in quiet, elegant surroundings.

By the Sixties he is threatened by changes in public taste; the bright British comedies are no longer in tune; he cannot break into international stardom and, anyway, his sense of integrity has led to an increasing dissatisfaction with the usual stuff he's offered. Lest he slither to the end of the big snake, he dares to break out against his screen-image; he leaves England and climbs, at least, up the ladder of artistic creativity.

Not surprisingly, Bogarde is uninterested in behind-the-scenes gossip. The famous names he dwells on, like Kay Kendall and Judy Garland, are there because they matter to him as people and, one suspects, because of their fatal vulnerability.

Bogarde again guards his private life while showing us what made him the type of person he is. It is so rare to find an actor who can talk illuminatingly about what he believes in, that one hopes he will, in his next book, analyze his work in those films in which he still takes pride.

Kenneth More's book, while promising to "put it all down, in . . . perspective," offers less of the inner man though it tells us more about his day-to-day experiences. The book is really a memoir, as opposed to the shaped autobiography.

It presents an all-round good fellow who would gladly pick up the tab, let others have their share of the limelight and who, while believing utterly in the character he is playing, "can switch off immediately".

Bogarde and More have had somewhat parallel careers, but back-slapping Kenny seems the epitome of suburban bonhomie from which Bogarde eventually fled.

Interestingly, they both had their post-war start in the same play. Yet where Bogarde's account is filled with self-reproach at his own seeming thoughtless manner in rehearsal which almost led to his being fired, More's version centres upon an amusing incident about a power cut just before the performance which everyone hoped would lead to the play's being transferred to the West End stage.

The book is full of such comic anecdotes; Kenny likes a good story and is a bit of a lad with the girls. But he, too, finds himself blocked at the height of his film-career; there are contractual wrangles and time seems to catch up with this jovial Peter Pan. What keeps him going is a determination to work hard and press on.

He remembers the moment when he was down to his last shillings, almost on the point of re-joining the Navy, and a call from a casting-director sealed his choice to be an actor.

That fated sign buoyed him up through later difficulties, when friends shunned him for leaving his second wife for a girl half his age, and when film offers stopped coming. Again, at the bottom of the wheel, his luck was in; the Forsyte Saga rocketed him to even wider fame.

The bland, chatty style perfectly reflects More's roguish good nature. However, between the lines, the reader occasionally sees a less pleasant side. His high spirits can be embarrassing at a party after one-too-many (though his frankness during one such dinner with the Queen hit just the right note), and he is decidedly cavalier about the break of his second marriage. He's been a naughty boy, but . . .

. . .'Peter Pan'

On the credit side, he has no pretensions to be other than he is, a good professional, loyal to his friends, who values the ups in his life because he can still recall the downs, and who blesses the day that he met the woman he loves.

Roger Wilmut's book on Tony Hancock is simply a catalogue of the comedian's professional life. While it chronicles Hancock's failure to overcome his self doubt, that story is a deliberately bald account in so far as it affected the quality of his work.

The book opens with a loving and human tribute from Harry Secombe, and then Wilmut attempts to analyze the comedian's art. He is reduced to telling the story of each script with lengthy quotation. There is little real comment.

Hancock's genius lay in his timing and in his instinctive use of a dead-pan expression; neither of these things can be analyzed in words. Indeed, Wilmut makes clear that part of Hancock's tragedy centred on his inability to explain his success to himself.

There are interesting details about recording techniques and experiments with the size of studio-audiences: the reasons for the comic's break with various partners and script-writers are objectively clarified. The last half of the book contains a complete check-list (dates, cast-lists etc.) of all Hancock's work.

All this may be of interest to a specialized few, though it has little to do with the techniques of comedy. The general reader, interested in the man himself, should read Hancock, the biography by Freddie Hancock and David Nathan.

'A Book About Coming Home'

By JULIAN REID

George Leonard is a marvel.

I must first have encountered his luminously incisive blending of perceptiveness and poetry in the pages of the old Look magazine, where for many years he was a senior editor and staff-writer. But I only became consciously aware of him when I picked up his first formal book, that 1968 best-seller, Education and Ecstasy.

In that fine, eloquent essay, which unlike most of its ilk has dated remarkably little, Leonard sounded the keynote which thrills through all his subsequent writings. "Here," he announced boldly, "is a vision of hope in an age where hope does not come easy, a treatise not only on things as they are, but as they can be and are becoming." And on a later page he encapsulated in a single sentence the guiding credo of the then-youthful Human Potentials Movement: "It is hard to imagine a more revolutionary statement for us than 'The natural condition of the human organism is joy'."

I somehow managed to miss his next book, intriguingly titled The Man & Woman Thing and Other Provocations. But then, in 1972, came The Transformation: A Guide to the Inevitable Changes in Humankind, which still ranks today in my estimation as one of the truly great books of, and for, our time.

What he had to say in it was hardly unique — one could easily assemble a small library of volumes, many of them excellent, all engaged in belaboring the same fundamental thesis. What sets The Transformation apart from the rest is the sheer visionary intensity it generates in the course of its prophetic portrayal of "the radiant and terrible beauty of Humankind transformed." The cumulative effect is arresting, to say the least — almost as if the Biblical Apocalypse had been updated and considerably rewritten by an improbable collaborative committee including Marshall McLuhan, Annie Dillard, Pierre Teilhard de Chardin, William Blake, E. F. Schumacher, and St. Francis of Assisi. Yet it is precisely this passionate multiplexity which invariably characterizes George Leonard's prose at its richest.

THE SILENT PULSE: A Search for the Perfect Rhythm That Exists in Each of Us, by George Leonard. Clarke, Irwin. $11.50.

This quality is very much in evidence in his new book, The Silent Pulse, which picks up and develops guiding themes from its immediate predecessor, The Ultimate Athlete, and from a memorable sentence tossed off in passing in The Transformation: "Let us say that substance is vibrancy tending toward transformation." For this is, to begin with, a study in elemental vibrancy — or, as the subtitle puts it, "A Search for the Perfect Rhythm That Exists in Each of Us."

Thus, where its predecessors were primarily concerned with hopes and prophecies for the future, The Silent Pulse instead concentrates on the abiding present. It is a book about where we are and who we are already, whether or not we have been graced with the blessing of knowing it. It is also a book about finding ourselves here and now. It is, above all else, a book about coming home.

What Leonard has to teach us, as he himself would be first to admit, is in fact as old as creation — but it is also as fresh as the dewfall every dawn. It is, as the introduction promises, "a journey of discovery involving personal experiences and stories about ordinary and extraordinary people as well as research information." But for many readers it should also fulfill the author's hope that it will turn out to be for some not merely a journey of discovery, but "one of remembrance."

The "research" on which it draws is extensive and solidly scientific. On the basis of various independent findings, Leonard argues most convincingly that "we can draw a startling picture of human nature and human abilities. At the heart of each of us, Whatever our imperfections, there exists a silent pulse of perfect rhythm, a complex of wave forms and resonances which is absolutely individual and unique, and yet which connects us to everything in the universe. The act of getting in touch with this pulse," he adds, "can transform our personal experience and in some way alter the world around us."

LEONARD
. . . passionate prose

As he proceeds to point out, most of us have experienced what he is talking about — in those precious but fleeting moments when we seem all at once "in sync' with everything in the universe," and in that momentous stillness our entire being shines "as clear and resonant as a crystal," and as preternaturally lucid. The Silent Pulse opens the way to normalizing such "abnormal" states of consciousness — "peak experiences," the late Abraham Maslow christened them — so that they can become more and more the rule rather than the exception in the daily round of our lives

The Spring catalogues are out, book stores are placing their orders, and soon review copies of some of the new books will be arriving. Just now, there is a lull, as there will be again in mid-summer. In the book business it is always feast or famine, and when it's feast-time one can barely cope. For example, this Spring there will be more than 6,000 new titles published in the United States alone. Add to this total the Canadian and British lists, and translations of books published in non-English-speaking countries, and then double the total to include the Fall offerings, and you have a formidable array of new books — for just one year.

I receive the merest fraction of these, a selection of a selection, but even so it presents a problem as it is clearly impossible to give equal and immediate attention to everything and sometimes the combined pressures of reading, selecting, and having to conform to space limitations means that a worthy book becomes overlooked.

This is what happened to The Birds of Prey, by John Ralston Saul, in the hectic pre-Christmas rush of 1977. However, I can retrieve this particular situation because I have just read the newly-released paperback edition of this book and for the purposes of this review I am going to assume that you, too, missed reading the original hardbound edition.

That may be rather a large assumption considering the book's success but, to tell the truth, I am enjoying the unfamiliar experience of being a Johnny-come-lately. The rarity of being able to write about a book that is already internationally famous is tantamount to being a modern film critic in an obscure part of Patagonia and having the thrill of discovering Gone With The Wind.

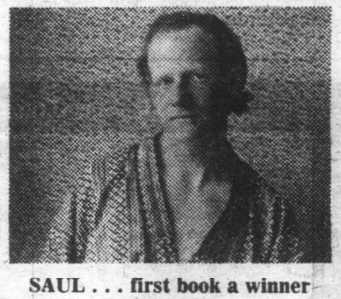
That much is historical fact. However, the official view did not satisfy John Ralston Saul, who was then studying in Paris at L'Ecole du Science Politique. He knew, as every airline pilot familiar with Reunion knows, that in taking off from the sole runway at the sole airport you are bound to hit a mountain unless you steer left out to sea.

Saul reasoned that the only airplane crash ever to have occurred on Reunion was therefore illogical, and the total silence following the unsatisfactory official inquiry was highly suspect. So he got to work. And after seven years of intensive research he reached the conclusion that General Ailleret had been murdered. In The Birds of Prey he presents his evidence through the investigations of fictional journalist Charles Stone.

Stone finds that the crash was variously attributed to an excessive fuel load (for the long leg to Djibouti) or possibly some over-indulgence on the part of some members of the crew who had not expected — and did not wish — to fly that night. But he becomes obsessed with the life and death of General Ailleret and comes to think that something quite different caused the fatal crash. He wants to find out the truth. He says to a French friend: "I want to know who would kill eighteen innocent people in order to execute one he thought was guilty."

The friend replies: "Ah, you have the wrong attitude. They are not criminals. They may be politicians or officers or whatever who work in their own vicious ways but they are playing a very private game . . . The rules are not written because no one would dare to write them, and even the initiated have trouble making the right moves."



SAUL . . . first book a winner

In the game he has embarked on — the expose he is attempting — against the military-political hierarchy of France, Stone soon finds himself in deep trouble. He certainly does not understand the game, but he scents and is determined to hunt the evil in it. Later, the same friend says:

"All you have to do, you think, is find the faction and expose it. Well, that isn't the way France works. Every level hides three more levels, every faction is tied with five or ten other factions, and even in rivalry they will protect each other against an outside threat."

The dogged Stone discovers that this is only too true.

So what we have in Birds of Prey is an unusual novel which offers a sinister explanation of a real-life tragedy; a richly stimulating and thrilling story of intrigue and suspense; a marvellous blend of fact and fiction; the perfection of the genre of the roman a clef.

In the course of Stone's single-handed effort to hunt down and expose the guilty men — from his early faltering steps through the narrowing of the circle to the inevitable gory climax — we are introduced to the murky workings of modern France, a nation by no means recovered from the deep divisions created by the Second World War and its aftermath.

The key to the whole business, the area where fact and fiction become indivisible, is the intense hatred felt by the army for the Gaullists. Initially, de Gaulle's support came from the Resistance workers who the officers who stayed behind during the German occupation of France considered a disorderly rabble. The generals considered de Gaulle himself a usurper, and after he pulled French forces out of Algeria the bitter generals repeatedly tried to assassinate him. That much is common knowledge.

General Ailleret, an obnoxious sort of man, became de Gaulle's chief of staff by default, no other general being trustworthy enough to serve the autocratic president of France. As de Gaulle's choice he was suspect and detested, and the general — according to Stone's (or Saul's) findings — had to be eliminated. How this was achieved, and how Stone found out to his cost, is what this fast-paced, detailed, intelligent political thriller is all about.

When this brilliant book was first published, in France, it created a sensation. The same effect was created in Quebec. In fact, the reverberations are still being felt in French political circles.

When the first English edition appeared, Saul's work was favorably compared to that of John Le Carre at his best and to Frederick Forsyth's Day of the Jackal. I will add to the chorus of praise by saying that the writing is also in the tradition of Graham Greene. In other words, Saul is as good as anyone writing this kind of fiction today, and considerably better than most.

Who is John Ralston Saul? Well, he's a very remarkable young man. For one thing he's a Canadian, and there aren't many Canadian writers of international calibre. Ottawa-born, the fluently bilingual Saul studied at McGill, L'Ecole du Science Politique of Paris, and gained a doctorate from King's College in London, England. Birds of Prey is his first book — a quite extraordinary feat.

But perhaps the most remarkable aspect of this modest man is that despite his fame and riches (the latter safely tucked away in a trust fund) he continues at his nine-to-five job in Calgary. However, should he write another book of the same class as his first effort I would hazard a guess that the chairman of Petro-Canada will be looking for a new executive assistant. And as one who sat up half the night because I couldn't bear to put Birds of Prey down unfinished, I hope this happens very soon.

Fathers Are Still Parents After the Breakup

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

For most divorced American or Canadian fathers, the custody of their children automatically goes to their ex-wives. Confronted by an economic, social and judicial system that assigns them to the status of a secondary parent, and accepting that status themselves, these men thus pay a double price for their divorce.

But that double price need not be paid.

No longer content to lose their children simply because their marriage has ended, some men are slowly and painfully changing the custody status quo; as a result of their efforts their parental role — and, by implication, every man's parental role — may continue to grow and develop despite the decision to divorce.

Lucky are the children with such fathers.

As Mel Roman and William Haddad point out in The Disposable Parent, ". . . those children who fared best after . . . divorce were those who were free to develop loving and full relationships with both parents."

And, the authors continue elsewhere in this book, "For the child, an awareness of his (or her) parents' joint involvement is crucial."

The operative word is joint.

Joint custody of children means that both their parents have an equal voice in determining such things as their health care and education, and that both parents share their time equally. And it means, of course, that both parents — not just the mother — share the whole nexus of the children's lives in ways that simply aren't possible in a strictly maternal (or, more rarely, paternal) custodial arrangement.

With joint custody, then, men need not divorce their children too.

Roman and Haddad succinctly detail the problems that men face in obtaining joint custody. The main problem is ignorance. Time after time these authors found studies on family life and parenting that simply failed to include any interviews with, or direct observations of, fathers!

As one respected psychologist wrote, "His value as the economic and emotional support of the mother will be assumed."

Roman and Haddad had to go back to a 1952 study based on interviews with fathers to show us that "they . . . most valued those aspects of parenting that have conventionally associated with the mother."

And so, presumably, did the children value these men's roles as fathers.

Joint custody itself is still so rare an arrangement that its full effects on children, fathers and mothers can't fully be measured yet. What studies have been done, and comments from joint-custodial fathers themselves, indicate that it's a set-up which manages to avoid the problems usually associated with single-parent custody.

THE DISPOSABLE PARENT: The Case For Joint Custody, by Mel Roman and William Haddad. Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $9.75.

The loss of a parent through divorce often seems to generate in a child strong feelings of guilt, fear and anger — with all their attendent acting-out behaviors — that simply don't disappear in time.

Roman and Haddad point out, too, that divorced men's present problems in being recognized as legitimate parents of their own children are historically the result of their own and their father's efforts to keep women in "their place."

When industrialism effected its vast changes in family life — men leaving the home to work in factories, women staying there as unpaid domestic labor — motherhood was elevated to an eternal sacred principle that conveniently buttressed the new system's need for workers unencumbered either by domestic duties or competitors.

As Roman and Haddad remark, ". . . maternal instinct came along precisely when it was required, making a virtue out of what seemed to be a necessity."

These authors recognize, then, the restraints the present system of child care — both in marriage and divorce — place on women, and ably demonstrate what a post-divorce joint-custodial arrangement can mean for women too. Thus The Disposable Parent is a book worth reading by women and men. Married or divorced, their attention now could have real effects on their children's futures.

And that's what being a parent is all about, isn't it?

Hollywood Scene

Looking at Stars

By RUTH THOMPSON

Times have changed. One of the warmest reviews for Steve Guttenberg in the new CBS series, "Billy," came from a critic on another network. As a young man with a Walter Mitty compulsion for daydreaming himself into the hero role of three outsized fantasies per program, the critic lebelled Steve as really likable.

Which Steve is. Offscreen, too. For one thing, he's mellower and more vulnerable than reports of his brash ploys to crash casting directors' offices might lead you to conclude.

Sure, he says, he conned his way past the gates by making guards believe he already had a studio job. "I suppose some people would call that pushy. But my parents early taught me to be determined. We're a very close family, and now I can do something for them. A house, later, I hope. But right now, the first thing, I've bought them a vacation trip to Aruba. And I've bought my sisters some really expensive clothes: good jeans, things like that."

And what about a girl friend? The right one is a dream that hasn't materalized yet. "But I sure wish she would," says Steve. Meanwhile, he himself is living frugally in the dorm at UCLA and continuing his dental studies so his folks won't worry about his future. "They're only just beginning to feel OK about 'Our son, the actor.' What they really hoped for was, 'Our son, the oral surgeon.'"

One for the books. "It's a classic, we made history," is how producer Marty Pasetta rated his coup of a fortnight ago in bringing together for the first time as a vocal trio Pearl Bailey, Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughan in the CBS "Kraft Salute" to Pearl. Pearl adds, "And we didn't need any day's rehearsing. We just got up there and let it happen."

Total freedom at last! That's what master magician Milbourne Christopher says will make his next TV special extra-special. "I'm going to do the whole program my way." Not, he hastens to add, that commercial television hasn't been good to him, too. "But there were a few limitations here and there." Seems an early televised show of Chris' involved the split-second catching of a bullet and was infinitely more dangerous than viewers realized. In fact, his wife Maurine extracted a promise from him not to scare her that much ever again.

A little detective work tells us that out of the mouths of babes is where the title for "Marlo and the Magic Movie Machine" originated.

The title was nailed down before Lauri Faso was hired as the host. Originally the producers wanted to play it safe with a unisex name. Kim? Sandy? Kelly? Vivian? Then the 5-year-old daughter of one of them, a Marlo Thomas fan, blurted out that the swellest moniker for anybody was "Marlo."

Abe Vigoda could have used that kind of insurance. Unfortunately, to phase him out of "Barney Miller" and into his now defunct "Fish" series, Detective Fish was retired as over-aged.

Aging in Victoria

A look at some old people's lives in Victoria will be featured on a documentary Can't Remember — Can't Forget: Old Age, to be aired on Victoria's CHEK Television (Channel 6) Tuesday, March 27, at 9 p.m.

Victoria has twice as many people over 80 as any other place in B.C. The over-65 age group represents 15.4 per cent of its population.

This half-hour report takes a look at some of the facilities available to Victoria's senior citizens.

Reporter Marlene Palmer discusses life in a nursing home with its staff and residents, and touches upon issues that are associated with old age: adjustment to new life styles, dealing with loneliness, the acceptance of death, and coping with mental and physical limitations.

Just relax in your favorite chair on one side of the TV room here →
All you need is a TV converter — it's a tuner expander — and any Victoria Cablevision subscriber can push buttons to get any of the 12 stations on the basic dial and the six stations in Midband, in the order you want. The six in Midband are news and weather, public affairs, stocks, House of Commons, KCPQ Tacoma and citizen messages. Get a look at them and get a free in-home converter demonstration by calling Victoria Cablevision at 477-1884 weekdays — then let your fingers do the tuning.
